GOOD ROADS COMMISSION

Governor Crothers Selects Five Men Whom he Thinks Will Prove Satisfactory.

Governor Crothers, Monday night, announced the following Good Roads Commission: Governor Crothers, Dr. Ira Remsen, of the Johns Hopkins University; Dr. William Bullock Clark, of the Maryland Geological Survey; John M. Tucker, of Cecil county, chairman; Samuel M. Shoemaker, of Baltimore county, and Frank Hutton, of Montgomery county. The three salaried members of the commission are Messrs. Tucker, Shoemaker and Hutton. Mr. Tucker as chairman will receive $2,500 a year and the two others $2,000 a year. Drs. Remsen and Clark and the governor represent the geological survey on the commission and serve without pay. As constituted it is generally believed that the governor has selected a body of men about whose honesty and capacity for the work they are to do there is no question. It is a commission, it is declared, that means business and one which will keep both politics and graft out of state roadbuilding.

In speaking of the commission, the governor said: "I took one man from Baltimore county and one man from Montgomery county, as these were the two pioneer counties in the road movement in Maryland. From Cecil county I took Mr. Tucker whose qualifications are such as to make it certain that there will be economy and thrift in the work. These three men, with the two I have named from the geological survey, Dr. Remsen and Dr. Clark, ought, I think, to constitute a commission that would not only prove satisfactory to the people of the state, but insure the building of the roads without waste and without graft.

"There has never been any hostility toward the geological survey, but my idea at the start and my idea now is that a big work with the expenditure of this great sum of money should not all be turned over to one man and that man an engineer. No matter how capable and efficient he may be as an engineer, he is not a financier and he has not the necessary time to give to the details of the purchase of material and the spending of the money. This is the people's work and the people have a right to have it done by active, energetic, vigorous men, who will guard their interests as they would their own. This is no reflection upon any engineer, but the fact is the people do not want this work left in the hands of any one man, no matter how capable he may be as an engineer. The people pay the money and the men that spend it should be responsible to the people. Therefore, a separate and independent commission has been the thing that I have advocated from the start.

"What the commission will do will be to use its best efforts to secure the most efficient possible engineers. These engineers will be responsible to the commission and the commission to me and I, in turn, to the people. There it is, in a nut shell. What is wanted is to fix the responsibility and not to have the work in the hands of any single individual, no matter who he may be. I expect to notify the members of the desirability of effecting their organization as speedily as possible. What I want to see is the picks and shovels on the roads as soon as possible."

Farmers all over the state will compose vigilance committees to look after the building of new roads under the new act, if the plans of the Farmers' League are carried out. That organization has instructed its secretary to communicate with all farmers' clubs throughout the state, and ask each of them to appoint a committee of five for this purpose, who will be asked to keep in close touch with the officials of the league. Their object will be to see that roads are built in such fashion and in such locations as will best subserve the farming interests of the country. The league recommended W. Irving Walker, of near Church Hill, for appointment on the Good Roads Commission.

Appropriation for Survey of Waterway.

The Senate last week passed Senator Simmons' resolution appropriating $100,000 to be used in making a survey and examination for a continuous inland waterway from Boston, Mass., to Wilmington, N. C. A similar resolution, introduced by Representative Moore, of Pennsylvania, is before the House, and the indications are that favorable action will be had in that body. The resolution authorizes the Secretary of War to cause a survey to be made for a continuous waterway, by the route deemed most available, from Boston, Mass., through Cape Cod, thence by Long Island Sound and the approaches to New York city to Raritan bay, across the state of New Jersey to the Delaware river, through the states of Delaware and Maryland to Chesapeake bay, through the sounds of Virginia and North Carolina down the coast and the Cape Fear river to Wilmington, N. C. Estimates of cost are to be submitted for a minimum depth along the entire route of 16 feet or more, as may be required for commercial, naval or military purpose; and a report is to be made upon the desirability of utilizing any existing public or private canal and the probable cost of acquiring the same. One hundred thousand dollars is appropriated to carry out the provisions of the resolution.

The general opinion of fruit growers in this part of the state is that peaches have withstood the frost to such an extent that there are yet enough healthy fruits on the trees to make a full crop. Some varieties are apparently not injured at all, and all varieties in most orchards bore a full crop of blossoms, ten times as many as should mature in the fruit. Keiffer pears were also very full of bloom and it is probable that the trees will be loaded with fruit. Apples are just in bloom and are uninjured. The early strawberry crop was cut to some extent. Upon the whole there is still a prospect for a generous fruit crop in this county.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE

Committee Meets in Baltimore—Convention Dates and Places Named.

Democrats from all over the state gathered at the meeting of the State Central Committee held Thursday in Baltimore to fix dates for the state and district conventions.

In calling the committee to order Chairman Murray Vandiver made a defense of the Democrats of the last Legislature. He said, in part: "The record of our late Legislature will stand the test of close and critical scrutiny and will strengthen us everywhere. The suffrage amendment will be found to be a clear and admirable fulfillment of the pledge of our platform upon the vital question, and will, it is believed, be approved by the people. The most satisfactory results are expected from the corrupt practices act. Its provisions are extremely stringent, and when rigorously enforced will put an end to the intolerable evils which it is designed to eradicate. It is believed to be the most thorough law on the subject yet passed in this country.

"Some objections have been made to the general primary election law and the senatorial primary election law, but calm consideration and experience will show that these objections are without substantial grounds However natural the feeling may be in Baltimore city in favor of a direct vote for the nomination of state officers and United States Senators, there should be great respect for the equally natural desire on the part of the senators and delegates from the counties to preserve the political power given them by the Constitution. In judging these primary election laws fair allowance should therefore be made for the obvious duty of the senators and delegates from the counties, and especially the small counties, to hold on with tenacity to their present political influence over nominations and their natural unwillingness to yield to Baltimore city what appears to them as a too complete control over the nomination of state officers and United States Senators.

"They realize acutely that the overshadowing vote of Baltimore city may control the election, but for that very reason they may well be pardoned, if not commended, for resolutely maintaining their constitutional right to their influence over the nomination of our candidates. Hence, I venture to assert that when these primary election laws shall come to be dispassionately considered and tested, an enlightened public opinion will sustain them as being all that could now be fairly expected to be given by the counties, and that uniformly applicable as they are to the Democratic and Republican parties alike, they mark a distinct advance and improvement in our method of nominating our candidates for public office.

"The Denver convention can be relied upon to give us a strong ticket and a sound Democratic platform upon which we can all stand, and, in opening this meeting of our state committee, I feel that I voice the sentiments of all of you when I say that in the approaching important contest, the Democracy of Maryland will be found shoulder to shoulder, eager to accept the national platform, ready to ratify the nominations, and resolved to give the electoral votes of our state to our nominees. Following the practice which has prevailed with us for a long time, our delegates will not be tied by express instructions as to our candidates, but will be left free to confer with the delegations from other states on this most important question, and thus be in a situation to select the strongest and most available men."

Under the provisions of the corrupt practices act passed by the last Legislature each party must have a treasurer as the custodian of the campaign fund. Gen. Murray Vandiver was named for this post.

Congressional conventions will be held as follows: First district, at Ocean City, on July 23. Second district, at Havre de Grace, on June 2. Fifth district, at Upper Marlboro, on September 16. Sixth district, at Oakland, on August 20. As the Third and Fourth districts lie wholly within Baltimore city, where the primary election law prevails, the dates for their conventions are left open. The Democratic State Convention will be held at the Auditorium, Baltimore on June 3.

THE CATHOLIC RELIGION

Is Recognized as One of the Conservative Human Forces Says the Baltimore News.

The celebration of the centenary of the Catholic diocese of New York this week, like the similar celebration in Philadelphia last week and the one to follow almost immediately in Baltimore, passes before us in the nature of a pageant, as it is contemplated that each of these commemorations shall be attended by the ritualistic splendor that belongs to all the functions, rites and observances of the oldest of the Christian churches. The special feature of the New York celebration is the presence, in addition to a multitude of dignitaries of lesser rank, of two eminent cardinals—something rarely witnessed in this country—the one our own Baltimore archbishop, and the other Cardinal Logue of Ireland.

Glancing over the history of the New York diocese, one finds the growth of the Roman Church there remarkable. It seems difficult to believe, considering the magnitude of the Catholic population at present, that a little before the Revolutionary War there were scarcely any members of that faith in the state, and that the few who existed did so under persecution. The first stimulating influence was a recognition of the loyalty of American Catholics to their fellow-colonists in the struggle for independence, and the next the fact that the two Catholic powers, France and Spain, were our allies against England. This eventually led to the abolishment of the laws of persecution against the Catholics, and early in the Nineteenth Century the number of followers of the old faith had so increased that the see of Baltimore was subdivided and the sees of New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Bardstown erected.

The Church continued to grow with extraordinary rapidity, and when Bishop Dubois was consecrated in Baltimore it was estimated that there were 25,000 Catholics in New York city and about 150,000 in the state. There was still much to contend with in the way of prejudice—libelous books, denunciatory lectures and riots in which mobs were led against convents—but in 1846, under the able and courageous reign of Archbishop Hughes, it was found that New York had 114 churches, 109 priests, a seminary, a college and Catholic inhabitants to the number of 100,000. In 1853 the Catholics of the archdiocese were estimated to number 280,000. The expansion continued, not only in New York, but everywhere throughout the country, until the general Catholic population of the United States is now thought to be about 15,000,000, one-tenth of which belongs to the archdiocese of New York.

The Catholic celebrations are of much interest to all who study the events of the day. The growth of the Church no longer creates in any intelligent mind the feeling of dismay that it might have once inspired, as the Catholic religion is recognized as one of the conservative human forces. In an age when the tendency to disbelief and indifference is so marked and indisputable, Catholicism steadfastly maintains the ancient doctrines, and in particular defends and supports the time-honored Christian institutions of marriage and family life. Not less sternly does it uphold the rights of government and property against the teachings of anarchy. There is little doubt that the growth of the Church, in the future, if less marvelously rapid, must continue to be great.

APPEAL TO GOVERNOR.

Queen Anne's Republicans Want a New Man for Minority Supervisor.

Governor Crothers on Friday of last week received a letter from W. Cookman Orrell, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee for Queen Anne's county, in which Mr. Orrell complains that the Republican party of this county is not represented on the Board of Election Supervisors for Queen Anne's. Mr. Orrell's letter is as follows:

In compliance with the election laws of the state the Republican State Central Committee for Queen Anne's county submitted to you a list of four names, from which number you were to select one name to represent the minority party in Queen Anne's county. We submitted to you the following names: J. Frank Barwick, W. B. Sparks, Warner Mallalieu and Thomas J. Smith, from which you selected and appointed Warner Mallalieu and sent his name to the State Senate for confirmation. We are now informed that the Senate, although confirming the two Democratic election supervisors appointed by you, and which names were submitted to you by the Democratic State Central Committee for Queen Anne's county, did fail to take any action whatever on the Republican supervisor appointed by you. And we are further informed that the failure of action on the part of the Senate to act upon the Republican appointee was due to the wishes of the state senator from Queen Anne's county, and the Democratic State Central Committee of the county, they acting under advice or on the theory that if the Senate failed to confirm the Republican supervisor appointed by you, the present supervisor would hold over, which person is very persona grata to the Democratic party of the county and is a brother-in-law of John George, the chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, and whose name was two years ago submitted to the governor by the Republican party, nor was his name in the list submitted to Your Excellency for appointment at this session of the legislature.

Without discussing the legality of his right to hold over at this time, we would suggest to you that honest elections and honest count require minority representation on the Board of Election Supervisors, and that was the object of the law in providing for minority representation on the respective election boards of the various counties. The Republican party of Queen Anne's county, under existing conditions, is without representation on the Board of Election Supervisors, and we respectfully request Your Excellency to appoint a new man for election supervisor to represent the minority party in Queen Anne's county from the remaining names in the list submitted to you. If, in your judgment, Mr. Mallalieu is disqualified by the failure of the Senate to act on his appointment, or if you require additional names submitted to you from which to make an appointment, the Republican State Central Committee will gladly furnish them in compliance with the law.

If this letter should not make the condition of the Republican party in Queen Anne's county clear in reference to the board of election supervisors we shall be glad for Your Excellency to fix a date for a meeting so that we can state the situation more fully than we have briefly stated in this letter.

Increase of School Teachers' Salaries.

The recent legislature passed a law increasing the salaries of public school teachers in all the counties of Maryland. The regulations for increasing these salaries are contained in the following section of the law:

"Section 122½. That all white teachers holding a first-class teacher's certificate and having taught for a period of three years in any of the public schools of the State of Maryland shall receive as a salary not less than $350 per annum and provided further that if such teacher holds a first-class certificate and has taught in the public schools of Maryland for a period of five years, he or she shall receive as a salary not less than $400 per annum; and provided further that if a teacher holds a first-class certificate and has taught in the public schools of Maryland for a period of eight years he or she shall receive as a salary not less than $450 per annum and provided that if a teacher holds a second-class certificate and has taught in the public schools of Maryland for a period of eight years he or she shall receive as a salary not less than $350 per annum and the county commissioners of the several counties shall levy a sufficient amount to meet the increase of salary provided for in this act."

He Got What he Needed.

"Nine years ago it looked as if my time had come," says Mr. C. Farthing, of Mill Creek, Ind. Ter. "I was so run down that life hung on a very slender thread. It was then my druggist recommended Electric Bitters. I bought a bottle and I got what I needed—strength. I had one foot in the grave, but Electric Bitters put it back on the turf again, and I've been well ever since." Sold under guarantee at J. S. Denny. 50c.

Costly Apparel is Out of Place in Church.

In an interesting sermon at Old St. Paul's P. E. Church, Baltimore, Sunday afternoon Bishop Paret decried the fancy frills and furbelows of the modern churchgoing woman, and advocated plainness of dress. The bishop referred to the epistle of St. Paul, in which such precepts are laid down, and said that the modern woman comes to church often merely to attract the attention of her neighbor and excite her envy. "Rich apparel and costly dress are out of place and out of time in church," continued the bishop. "The excessive richness of dress of some persons is driving others from the church. There are many ways of discouraging without any conscious intention of doing it. You have a pew or regular seat in the church, either by paying for it or some other way of assignment. Do you use that pew right exclusively or hospitably, selfishly or generously to help in doing the Lord's work, or for your comfort and enjoyment?

"But, if your conscience be free in this respect, let me ask you to think (the women specially) whether your habit of Sunday dress may not be driving some away. There are times and occasions for rich apparel. There are some whose station in life make it a duty sometimes to wear it. It is in place at a marriage, where the Scriptures suggest the bride 'adorned with jewels and vesture of gold.' It is in place at other times of festival or social enjoyment. But it is out of place and out of time in God's worship. It is right that one should in reverence for God be decently dressed. Needlessly shabby or careless dress would be irreverent, but guadiness or excessive richness or personal display at such time would be as irreverent as careless shabbiness. If you are in earnest in wanting to be with Christ in his work of saving souls, ask whether even in so slight a matter as that of dress you may not have hindered or kept from Him some soul that needed Him and for which He was longing. I would be glad if time permitted to speak of other ways in which this great harm may be done. But I can only suggest the thought, leaving it to be thought of more fully in your own self-examination."

Sulphur Prevents Epidemics.

George T. Angell, of Boston, gives testimony in regard to sulphur as a preventive of epidemic diseases. In a recent article in Our Dumb Animals he says: "Grip has been widely prevailing in the United States. Many years ago, when it was widely prevailing in Boston, we sent an officer to a large match factory, who found that not a single person of all employed there had been troubled by the grip, the reason being that they were at work on sulphur. We have several times published articles on this subject, showing that in sulphur mines everybody escaped the malaria which was prevailing all about them, that in California men engaged in bleaching with brimstone fumes escaped epidemics. Casey Young, a member of Congress from Memphis, Tennessee, assured us many years ago at Washington that when the yellow fever was raging in that city he advised some dozen or more gentlemen in his offices to wear powdered sulphur in their shoes, and all who took his advice escaped the fever. It is well known that the old practice of taking sulphur and molasses in the spring would so penetrate the body as to blacken the silver coins in the pockets of the persons taking it. We wish that some of our eminent physicians would carefully investigate the advisability of wearing powdered sulphur about the body in times of epidemic diseases." It is reasonable to suppose that the manufacture in Mineral Point, Wisconsin, of sulphuric acid has proven a preventive of epidemic diseases here, as this community has been for many years free from epidemics of any kind. It is only when the escape of the fumes is great that vegetation is blighted.

Learn Telegraphy

Telegraphy is easily learned and intelligent operators draw good pay from the very start. Railroad telegraphy is the path that leads men who are painstaking and industrious to the highest positions in railroad service.

The World Needs More Telegraphers.

It needs more young men and women who have been taught the practical features of the profession, and are able to "make good" when put to the crucial test of actual and responsible work. Such knowledge can come only from a school that has a practical equipment and teachers who have had actual experience in the branches of service for which a student is preparing.

Learn Telegraphy In a Practical School.

At Laurel, Delaware, is located The Atlantic Telegraph Institute, a practical telegraph school, where all branches of the profession are taught in a thorough and practical manner, each being handled by a teacher who has had years of actual experience in the service for which he is training the students of this school.

That's the reason why our graduates are always in demand.
