23d A calm again. Loweed for whales this morning but they very mysteriously disappeared we not seen after the boats went down. Caught another supply of Cod-fish

24th Saw a Ship at a distance, did not speak her, saw no whales.

25th. A gale of wind, laying to, part of the time, two thirds of a year has elapsed since we launched in our little bark upon the Ocean wave, God in his goodness has mercifully shielded us thus far from all dangers, may we still trust in Him.

26th Nothing in sight that lives, our company were beginning to feel rather down again, when the cry of right whales resounded from the Mast-head the boats were lowered and about 8 o'clock P.M. got a whale alongside, commences cutting him in immediately as the Barometer gave indications of another gale

28th. Arose this morning and found ourselves in a city of ships, could count fifteen, from off deck, some were boiting, some cutting in, and others chasing whales, it seems very lively and pleasant Our boats lowered for a whale in the forenoon killed a very large one which sunk, but three boats being fast to him, they succeeded after some time in pulling him up again, much to our satisfaction, got him alongside about two o'clock the Onward passed us, whaling, but we did not speak her, all seem employed-

29th All hands were up through the night cutting in the whale, the wind blew quite fresh and the whale inclining to sink, they had rather a hard time, but they accomplished it at length, and our ship presents a very greasy appearance The Blubber-room is filled, and the rest laying on deck. Saw whales today - but it was very rugged, six ships in sight today-

30th Rugged still. have seen several whales today - one ship has been near us, which we think the Huntsville if so, there is a lady on board, but it is so rugged that we could not most probably, should they speak-

Sep 1st. Plenty of whales in sight today, the sea appears to be full of them, Our boats were out the most of the day but did not succeed in getting fast to one, Several ships in sight, trying like ourselves.

2nd, whales in abundance, it is a grand sight to see them ploughing through the sea, rising to breathe, if they were aware of their strength how few would be safe, Our boats went off in the morning for whales about 10 A.M. fastened to one, which knew how to use his flukes very scientifically, At dark they were compelled to cut from him, which they did with a very bad grace. 10 ships in sight, we saw two take a whale, a black ship, and a bargue. Perhaps we may have a chance to try our luck again tomorrow, There will probably be a dead whale for some lucky one to pick up soon, We are now enjoying pleasant weather, except it is rather cool, it is getting late in the season now, and that must be expected, -

3d nothing to be seen except a few ships, not a whale left. Fine weather for whaling.

4th Several ships in sight passed four Carcasses.

5th. Finished stowing our oil today 300 barrels have 850 of whale now. Lowered for whales in the afternoon but got none. Kept off about sunset for several ships that were together for a little information in regard to the whales movements. Samuel went on board the Benjamin Morgan of New London Capt. Sisson, and found Capt Ryan, of the Olympia, New Bedford, and Capt Comstock of the Neptune, New London there The B. Morgan had taken 700 bbls and the others two whales each. They say we have done better than an average. The Good Return has left the ground with flying colors full.

6th. Passed the General Teste and spoke the Gen. D. Hautpoul, French ships.

11th Spoke the De Hautpoul again the Capt came on board and passed the evening, when our boats crew returned they brought Minnie a paper
