Now when the globe of the world is twirled and hemispheres and poles roll into sight a new consciousness will be felt of that ice bound region towards the South Commander Byrd has made a successful flight over that very part of the globe marked South Pole. He also was the first man to fly over the North Pole. In May he made his northern flight: on November 29th 1929 he circled the south pole. But Commander Byrd was the third man to reach this far point. Roald Amundsen had accomplied the feat on December 14th 1911, and in that same month and near Captain Robert Scote was equally successful. The report of Commander Byrd's expedition reads like a story of the imagined Christmas land raised to to the north power: icy peaks,, swirling clouds, snow plateaus—too much even for santa Claus fabled winter nap needed after his strenuous work of Christmas Eve. Commander Byrd was accompanied by Brent Baichen. described as the calm-eyed pilot with the infectious smile and HaroldJune, radio man and photographer. Through Harold June the world has been able to follow the expedition from its taking off to its victorious return.

The recent adjournment of the special session of Congress without final action on the tariff revision bill amounts to a confession of impotence on the part of the present administration says a statment of the Democratic National Congressional Committee issued today through its Chairman Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee.

"Meanwhile continuedMr.Byrn business must continue in a state uncertanity, not knowning what the tariff policy is to be for the next few years. Blame for the tariff fiasco must rest squarely with the Hoover administation, and efforts to place it at the doorstep of Democrats and progress Republican Senators need not be taken seriously. The Republican administration has a nominal majority of more than 100 votes in the House and of 17 in the Senate If the administration does not possess the leadership to make this nominal majority, the blame cannot by any stretch of the imagination be placed on Democrats. The Hoover administration came into power with a huge vote of confidence and apparently overwhelming majorities in the two Houses of Congress. It thus accepted the reponsibility of government and if it cannot maintain solidarity and function by enacting necessary legislation, it must take the blame therefore and expect to be held accountable by the people at the next election

Administration apologists are blaming Democrats and progressive Republicans for the tariff debucle, Instead of being censured, they ougtht to bepraised for their refusal to permit the tariff monstrosity which the House passed, known as the Hawley bill to be saddled upon the backs of the consuming public, Instead of the administration attempting to keep its campaign pledge to revise the tariff so as to produce thedisparty between agriculture and industry the bill which it sponsored anddid force through the House actually widened that disparity. That accounts for the revolt of western progressive Senators against the tariff program the administration would have written into law. Furthermore, that revolt helped keep from adding between$600,000,000 and $800,000,000 to the annual living costs of the American people as enconomists estimate the House bill would have done.

President Hoover called theCongress into special session to pass a farm bill and to make a limited revision of the tariff. After seven months, it adjourns with the record of having passed a farm bill the farm organization did not approve and which they might have had under the Coolidge administration two or three years ago and with tariff revision in an apparently hopeless muddle, These are the net results of the special session,
