JUDGE LEGG TELL 'EM

His Words Proved that his Heart is Strong for Queen Anne's

A former State Senator and a former State conservation commissioner came to grips on the proposed Chesapeake Bay bridge bill Monday at opening session of the semi-annual meeting of the Eastern Shore County Commissioner's Association, at Chestertown.

Former State Senator J. H. C. Legg, of Queen Anne's county, took the floor shortly after the meeting convened to attack the bill. He threatened that, if the measure is signed by Governor Nice, "we may even go to Washington and file a protest with Federal authorities against the erection of the bridge at the proposed point."

Approximately thirty-five commissioners from nine Eastern Shore counties, together with their attorneys and road engineers, heard Mr. Legg voice his protest. Walter E. Buck, president of the association, acted as chairman of the meeting.

"There is one thing I don't want Kent county to get, and that is the bay bridge," Mr. Legg said "But I wouldn't be surprised if you get that, too. However, the Governor hasn't signed the bill yet, and there is a great deal of opposition to the proposed span all along the Eastern Shore."

Mr. Legg's remarks precipitated quick and unexpected debate. Harrison C. Vickers, former State Conservation Commissioner, attorney to the Kent County Board of Commissioners, took up the gauntlet with the assertion:

"Senator Legg's remarks should not go unchallenged. Kent county is for the bridge and believes it would be not only a monument to the State's progress, but would do more for the Eastern Shore than any other one project ever proposed.

"The fact is the site has been definitely fixed upon; the Federal Government is already to hand out the money. The State of Maryland will never appropriate the money to build the bridge either at the point decided upon or at any other place.

"We are faced with the question of whether the bridge will be built now and at the place selected—or never."

Vickers said he "did not believe any of you are going to be selfish" as to oppose "a progressive step like this for no good reason."

Wheat, lambs and farm produce he asserted, at present go to Philadelphia and Wilmington.

The majority of trading done by your families is done in those cities, he declared, "and not in Baltimore. The Eastern Shore is drawing away from the Maryland metropolis and going to Northern cities.

Why not take advantage of the opportunity to link the western and eastern shores once and for all with a permanent link?"

Mr. Legg stepped back into the fight with the comment that he had "heard rumors" that Kent county was divided on the bridge question, and more rumors that additional objection had been registered farther down the Shore.

Shore agricultural trade, he asserted, would not go to Baltimore because prices there were lower than in the Northern cities mentioned.

Produce will continue to go north, bridge or no bridge, the former Senator said.

The erection of the bridge, he added, might result in a "deterioration of Eastern Shore trade."

Injecting a new angle into the controversy, the Talbot county delegation announced it was not opposed to the bridge, but was opposed "to paying the Annapolis-Claiborne Ferry Company to build it." A resolution, spokesmen said had been sent to Governor Nice to that effect.

Mr. Legg ended his attack with the statement:

"Chestertown and Centreville are drying up now, while Easton and Salisbury and Lower Shore towns are thriving because people there are buying at home."

A discussion of delinquent taxes in the various counties revealed only eight per cent of taxes in Cecil county remained uncollected as compared with 66 2-3 per cent uncollected in Queen Anne's county. Kent county, it was said, has $43,000 outstanding.

Lightning Fires Barn

During the electric storm Monday night, the barn and adjoining outbuildings on the Robert Bryan farm, owned by the Isaac Jewell heirs and tenanted by Wm. Blunt, on the left of the public road between Bryantown and Perry's Corner, was completely destroyed by fire. Frank Delahay and Dewey Price were the first to arrive on the scene, and with the assistance of other willing workers who arrived a few minutes later, help to save all the farming implements, harness and a duck that was roosting in one of the sheds. Mr. Blunt stated that he lost a few tons of hay and was luck his stock were out on pasture. He wish to thanks his many friends and others who kindly assisted him in saving his property.

Badly Hurt

Thomas Gardner, suffered a compound fracture of his right leg Tuesday when the team of mules with he was plowing started unexpectedly and threw him to the ground. He was promptly rushed to the Easton Emergency Hospital The accident occurred when Mr. Gardner stopped to adjust some trouble with his plow. He was dragged by the mules until his brother Norman, hearing his cry, rushed to his assistance.

Just as some of our citizens who live near the lowland of the creek and follow crabbing for a livelihood in the summer were preparing to have plenty of nice soft crabs every morning on their back porches, come the announcement from Swepson Earle, the big boy of the seafood commission, that we cannot expect an improvement in the run of crabs until the law check Virginia from heading off the egg-laying crustaceans.

It looks to us that the voters made an error when they did not elect. Joseph W. A. Evans, Senator instead of a Delegate. Who of our representatives took as much interest in the bridge meeting at Annapolis than Mr. Evans? Did you ever hear of any of our representatives making a talk before a rotary club as he did in Centreville the other night, or trying to prove to his people that he was still on the firing-line for their good? We think not. As a taxpayers and a voter we would like to know his favorite flower so that we could present him with a bouquet that he could smell and appreciate.

The community was shocked Wednesday morning to learn of the death of one of our much-respected citizen, Max Hecker, aged 58 years, Tuesday night at 11 o'clock. He suffered a paralstic stroke about two years ago from which he never fully recovered, but was able to be around with the assistance of a cane. He was again taken quite sick last Wednesday and suffered another stroke Sunday morning which he was unable to combat. His charity was appreciated in many sections outside of Grasonville.

He purchased the Beach farm on Kent Island about twenty years ago and removed from Raltimore and improved the building for a real summer and winter home with all the modern conveniences. He was a wrestler of much note and met all the heavy weights in which contests he held the champion for many years. During his training he was a driver of a beer truck in Baltimore and was said to be the only man in the city that could deliver two half-barrel of beer (one under each arm) from the wagon to the bar.

He leave two sons, Charles Hecker of Baltimore, and Max Hecker Jr., of Marcus Hook, Pa., and five daughters all of Baltimore.

His remains were carried to Baltimore yesterday morning with interment in a cemetery adjoining the city.

Wheat Control Plans

Plans for the State's participation in the national wheat control referendum, to be conducted May 25, by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, were explained to more than 100 Maryland growers and county agents at a meeting in the Southern Hotel in Baltimore, Wednesday.

Not only are the 8,080 holders of wheat control contracts in the State entitled to vote, but all growers who are eligible to enter into such contracts also will be asked to express their opinion on the present Government acreage-reduction program.

According to figures issued recently by Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland extension service, who presided at the meeting, there are 19,311 farms in the State upon which wheat is grown, and 66 per cent of the total acreage involved in now under AAA contract.

Ballots are to be distributed, together with information, at least five days in advance of the referendum by the county allotment committee of the County Wheat Production Control Association, which will have charge of the polls to be established in each community. The polling places will be open from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.

Francis Flood, representing the Washington office of the AAA, spoke at the meeting, pointing out that the referendum will really be on the question of a nationalistic or an international'atic wheat policy on the part of the United States. All nations, he said are heightening their tariff walls on wheat and the shrinkage in America's foreign markets makes it advisable for this country's farmers not to produce more than the present markets can consume.

LEATHERNECK ON THE AIR

He is strong that the Community Hall is a go

Listening to a negro spiritual over the radio the other day, I was much impressed by a song that ran like this: "The Baptists come by water, and the Methodist come by hand, but if they want to get to Heaven, they got to go hand in hand." For a town the size of this it would seem we had just one to many places to worshoi Why not "go hand in hand" and use the other for a Community Hall for our colored citizens, maybe they will get more fun out of it than the white folks get out of their's?

So we have a new, New Deal safe in the courthouse, something that will make the old record books fit better. It would seem that a more important job would be to get something to put into Mrs. Skinner's safe.

We noticed while driving along the Piney Neck road that Bellmead farm has a beautiful crop of wild mustard growing where last year, where broad fields of wheat, there is nothing better for a pain in the neck than a mustard plaster, so that's that.

Far be it from us to criticize the workings of the Almighty but if it was necessary to touch the Heavenly match to anything around here, it seems to us it had better been some of the tumble down shacks in Athlone located on New Market farm, at least the setting ducks would not have been disturbed.

Outside of an honest living for Mike, Dan and family and Stiney just what anyone has a right to expect in return for an effort to keep off the relief roll, The Queens town News is here to serve the interests of this community. But, we must have co-operation of our citizens and businessmen to make both ends meet. One dollar a year and ten-cents an inch, gets you something each week and, as we said before, we'll write your advs. and submit it for your approval.

Our deep sympathy is extended to the family and intimate friends of Max Hecker who passed away on Tuesday night, much ahead of his time. Surely, a man's who heart was so wrapped up in the birds and beasts, something good to eat and to drink, will have nothing to worry about in the next phrase of his life.

With the return of Uncle Pete Bunn and his son, Al, at "The Willows" is again what we call leaped out. We note with regret that he is still shy of his portable teeth, so it will be crab soup and some of our velvet soft crabs for this season.

May Term of Court

Judge William Mason Shehan, Chief Judge of the Second Judicial Circuit will be on the Bench next week when the spring term of the Circuit Court convenes in Centreville. This will be Judge Shehan's first official appearance in Centreville since his election last fall when he was chosen to succeed Judge William H. Adkins who was retired.

Judge Thomas J. Keating, of Centreville, will deliver the charge to the Grand Jury, and Judge J. Owen Knotts, of Denton, will also be on the bench.

Prospects are that the spring term of 1935 will be on the shortest in recent years. The trial docket in the office of the Clerk of the Court shows 41 Civil Trials; 7 Civil Appeals, and 11 Appearances No important criminal cases have been listed.

None of the trials is a new case. The first three date from 1932 and involve alleged bad checks given by Richard Cooper to the Baltimore Transfer Company. It is understood that Cooper has been gradually paying off the amounts specified in the checks.

Caleb Brown, against whom a bench warrant has been issued in a case growing out of the larceny of fifteen bushels of wheat from Vincent Briscoe, has never been apprehended.

An indictment against Emma Walters, a colored woman, on a charge of assault with intent to kill Ellen W. Heath, September 30, 1933, has been pending since the November, 1933, term due to the absence of important witnesses for the defense.

The last six trials listed grew out of the stealing of a horse from William Wiggins and a mule from James Warner, of the Pondtown community, in August, 1934. Raymond Pleasanton, one of three indicated, has not been apprehended His alleged associates, William Paulhauski and Frank Wronwiez, had their cases continued from the last term because of absence of important testimony.

Seventeen appeals from the magistrates' court are listed:

Thomas Ringgold, bastardy.

Lee Turner, assault on Dorsey Reynolds.

Paul Hopkins, disorderly conduct.

Nathan Moore, Thomas Quimby Jr., and William Coleman, hunting without license.

James Conyer, failure to stop after collision.

Earle Seward, obstructing justice. This case grew out of alleged interference by Seward with an oyster inspector.

William Hartuck, disorderly conduct.

Noble Teat, assault and battery

Louise Bramber assault and battery.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

William G. Jackson and Janie Jackson, his wife, Max Bass and Sarah Bass, his wife, vs.
Mary Bujnovski, et, al.

In the Circuit Court for Queen Anne's County, in Equity. Case No. 3029 chy.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain property in Queen Anne's County, Maryland and to have the contract of sale made by Mary Bujnovski in her individual capacity and in behalf of her infant children, Margila Molnar and George Molnar and Max Bass, for the sale of said real estate to William G. Jackson and Janie Jackson, his wife, ratified and confirmed by the Circuit Court for Queen Anne's County, in Equity.

The bill states that Stephen Roth and Julia Roth, his wife, and Thomas H. Golt and Lettie M. Golt, his wife, conveyed unto John Dzara and Steve Molnar as tenants in common a farm in the First Election District of Queen Anne's County, known as "Clowa Fancy" "Clows Rambles" and Polk's Addition" on the northeastern or left hand side of the public road leading from Barclay to Templeville, containing 80 acres and 28 square perches of land, more or less, and that the said John Dzara and his wife conveyed an undivided one half interest in said land to Max Bass, who is now seized and possessed of the same.

That said Steve Molnar departed this life seized and possesed of an undivided interest in said tract of land leaving as his only heirs at law and next of kin his widow Mary Molnar, who has since intermarried with Steve Bujnovski, and two children, Margila Molnar and George Molnar, infants, who are now seized and possessed of the undivided one half interest in said tract of land of said Steve Molnar.

That said tract of land cannot be partitioned without material loss and injury

That a contract of sale has been entered into by said Mary Bujnovski in her individual capacity and in behalf of her two children, the said Margila Molnar and George Molnar, infants' and by said Max Bass to sell said tract of land to William G. Jackson and Janie Jackson, his wife, for $1500.00

That the said Mary Bujnovski and Steve Bujnovski, her husband, and Margila and George Molnar are non residents.

IT IS THEREUPON, this 16th day of April, 1935, ORDERED, by the Circuit Court for Queen Anne's County, in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Queen Anne' County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 20th, day of May, 1935, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 5th day of June next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed

Their Faces Are Red!

THEIR faces are red—these ruddy tomatoes—but they have nothing to blush about. They aren't aware of their popularity perhaps, but actually they're invited to more meals than any other vegetable.

Just look over your favorite recipes, and see how many of them include tomatoes in some form or other. Soups, sauces, meats, vegetables, salads, cocktails and desserts—they are all made better by that delicious and healthful blushing tomato.

Let 'Em Blush

If you like fresh tomatoes, be sure that they do blush. For the merely pink tomatoes, hard and under-sized which are shipped to our northern climates during the winter, are hardly recognizable as the same fruit that ripens in the gardens until it is large, deep crimson and full-flavored—full of juice and health-giving properties.

Canned tomatoes, of course, are always of the blushing type. They have been picked from the pick of the crop at their prime, and they have been quickly put into cans so that their natural goodness is preserved. It is these canned tomatoes that we have come to rely on as an all-year round treat. Have you tried the following simple way of using canned tomatoes?

Scalloped Tomatoes Scotch Style: Bring to boiling the contents of one No. 2 can of tomatoes, three-fourths teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar and a few grains of pepper. Add one-half cup of quick-cooking rolled oats and pour into a buttered baking dish. Cover the top with buttered crumbs and bake in a hot oven—375 degrees—for thirty to forty minutes. This serves six persons.*

A Winter Thrift Idea

SAVING money in winter is more difficult than in summer—fuel bills, light bills, druggist bills, winter coats. Consult your budget and you'll see. There is, however, an excellent way to cut down on the food budget, and have just as good food.

Have you watched the margin between canned and fresh food in summer and compared it to the winter margin? Fresh fruits and vegetables are often as cheap in mid-summer as canned vegetables, and if they are a bit more expensive we are tempted, anyway, by the first fresh peaches in the market, the first home-grown tomatoes, etc. Perhaps we indulge ourselves to some of the fresh luxuries on the market.

Cut down in winter then, when those fresh foods shipped in are almost out of reach, by laying in a supply of canned foods—which, after all, are these same fresh home-grown fruits and vegetables put up in cans when they are at their ripest and best.

A Good Suggestion

Make different dishes of them by [illegible] cans canned fr[illegible] Here is a suggestion:

Fr[illegible] Press out all the [illegible] of a can of crushed [illegible] in a No. 2 can [illegible] add one-fourth [illegible] five minutes.
