APOLLO'S FOUNT.

FOR THE STAR.

TO MISS ——.

O COME to my bosom thou sweet-breathing girl,
And repose in my arms whilst thy pulse beats to love:
Let us follow its voice and its banners unfurl,
And thro' scenes of delusion with extacy rove.
Press softly my hand as it trembles in thine,
And give me the heart-thrilling touch of thy lips;
Let me faint on thy breast as it heaves to meet mine,
O, give me the heart-thrilling touch of thy lips.
For soon shall the grave with its pale-colour'd shroud,
In its foldings receive thee all blissful and cold:
And its spirit enthron'd in the gloom of a cloud,
O'ershadow the tomb which thy remnants shall hold.
Then all that we feel shall forever depart,
And the billows of passion cease sweetly to roll,
No more shall the heart throb, in response to heart,
Or the glance of the eye tell the tales of the soul.
No more shall I faint on the swell of thy breast,
Or drink in delerium the dew of thy lips;
Then come to my bosom, there come and O rest,
And give me the heart-thrilling touch of thy lips.

THE WOUNDED HUSSAR.

Alone to the banks of the dark-rolling Danube
Fair Adelaide hied when the battle was o'er:
Oh whither, she cried, hast thou wander'd my lover;
Or here dost thou welter, or bleed on the shore?
What voice did I hear? 'twas my Henry that sigh'd:
All mournful she hasten'd, nor wander'd she far,
When bleeding and low, on the heath she descried,
By the light of the moon, her poor wounded Hussar!
From his bosom that heav'd, the last torrent was streaming,
And pale was his visage deep mark'd with a scar;
And dim was that eye once expressively beaming,
That melted in love, and that kindled in war!
How smit was poor Adelaide's heart at sight!
How bitter she wept o'er the victim of war?
Hast thou come, my fond love, this last sorrowful night,
To cheer the lone heart of your wounded Hussar?
Thou shalt live, she replied, Heavens mercy relieving
Each anguishing wound shall forbid me to mourn!
Ah, no! the last pang in my bosom is heaving;
No light of the morn shall to Henry return.
Thou charmer of life, ever tender and true!
Ye babes of my love that awaits me afar!
His faultering tongue scarce could murmur adieu,
When he sunk in her arms—the poor wounded Hussar?

THE Clergy and Vestries of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Maryland, are reminded, that the annual Convention of said Church is to assemble in the city of Baltimore, on Wednesday the 20th instant.
