The last advices from Washington, make no mention of the arrival of Mr. Jackson, nor of Mr. Erskine's determination as to the late orders in council, though he had returned to the city nearly a week—the dispatches which are said to have arrived at Norfolk and forwarded to him a few days back, when devulged may throw some light on a subject so important to the people of this country. The French minister has returned to the city, as also some of the heads of department.

FOR THE STAR.

The federalists, in their prints to the eastward, are apologizing for the perfidy of Great Britain, under consoling reflections arising out of a certain "dispatch," which they imagine is to be received as a justification of Mr. Canning. What precious dupes the British ministry and the leading federalists too, must think the people of this country are! Where is the odds, supposing it was Erskine's fault, and not Canning's? Are we less insulted? less injured? less abused? They are both British ministers. And does not every body believe that Mr. Erskine must have had some motive, and a very strong one, for disobeying plain, positive instructions?—Surely. He had other instructions; secret, confidential instructions over and above that insolent dispatch, which Canning has palmed upon the British and American people as the only one sent to Mr. Erskine on the subject. It is really surprising to see how well Canning knows his men. He knows, it seems, that, do what he will, there is a junto which in this country will support him and his atrocities. How deplorable is our situation! Environed by enemies without, and beset by the traitorous behaviour of adversaries within. May the wise counsels of the administration, and the goodness of divine providence, carry us through all our difficulties.

PHOCION.

Extract of a letter from a gentlemen in Bordeaux, to his correspondent in this city, dated June 17, 1809.

"Yesterday the Commissary of Marine for this port, greatly alarmed us by making a very injudicious communication to the Chamber of commerce, of the city, on the subject of American Affairs. It appears that the Minister of Marine instructed the commissary to inform the chamber of commerce of Bordeaux, of the late act of Congress interdicting trade with France and England; at the same time recommending to them to suspend for the present, all operations with the United States. In conforming to the orders of his superior, the commissary thought proper to annex comments of his own, of a very alarming nature, which were immediately communicated to the merchants on the Exchange, and as the whole wore an official form, an immediate rupture between the two countries was considered as inevitable. The Commissary, finding he had gone too far, sent for one of the members of the chamber, through whose influence he prevailed on that body to return his letter, promising to write another more consonant with the Minister's views. Thinking it highly probable some of the American merchants may have communicated this affair to the United States by this ship, I have thought it my duty to state to you, sir, these facts, that in such case its bad effects may be counteracted."

INPORTANT.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman in Bordeaux, to his correspondent in this city, dated June 17, 1809.

"The ship Hope having been detained a day longer on account of some Merinos seized on board, gives me an opportunity of stating to you, that upwards of a dozen letters from Paris by the mail of to-day mention that his imperial majesty has revoked his decrees in favor of Holland, by opening the ports of that country to neutrals. I am induced to give some credit to this news, from the sensible effect it has had on the price of colonial produce." Ib.

On the subject of the perfidious conduct of the British government towards America, the editor of the Aurora observes:

"The American public was at first told, by the prints in British pay, that the whole of the misunderstanding was Mr. Erskine's. We have, however, such part as the British government thought fit to publish of his instructions, and we now undertake to say, and desire that it may be remembered, the British government has suppressed, purposely suppressed, parts of Mr. Erskine's instructions, which would bear Mr. Erskine out the whole length and measure of the engagements which he has made to our government."

On the foregoing the editor of the Boston Gazette has the following observation: The sequel will shew the sincerity of his professions.

"If this conjecture is well founded, we shall have no hesitation in joining the Aurora, or any paper, by saying that the British Ministry have acted perfidiously, and OUGHT TO BE RESISTED BY THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT."

Washington City, August 2.

On Monday arrived in this city, captain COLES, the bearer of dispatches from our minister in France. He arrived at New York on Saturday last in the Siren, which sailed from L'Orient on the 18th June.

No change is understood to have taken place in our relations with France.

The Mentor had not sailed when Mr. Coles left France, being detained to wait the orders of Mr. Armstrong.

We have received by this arrival a file of Paris papers, from the first of April to the thirteenth June inclusive. They contain no important intelligence later than that received by the arrival at Salem a few days ago. A few articles however are extracted.

"It is understood that the French losses in the Austrian war, and particularly in the engagement of the 21st and 22d May have been very great; though from the French papers no such thing could be inferred, their contents consisting almost entirely of literary articles, appointments in the Legion of Honor, celebrations of birth days and victories and annunciations of public spectacles.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Havannah, to his friend in Charleston, dated the 10th July.

"Every thing here is very peaceable, and what will astonish you property is in demand. There is a report much credited, that those persons sent off, will be recalled; whether this is so or not, I cannot say."

Knoxville, July 15.

We are informed that the Cherokee Indians have been invited to meet the commissioners on the part of this state and of the United States, at Highwassee, on the 20th of August next; we hope a treaty satisfactory to both parties will be the result of this meeting.

Natchez, July 1.

Governor HOLMES, arrived in this city on Tuesday evening last.

Norfolk, July 31.

Yesterday arrived at Hampton Roads, His Britannic majesty's brig Contest, Lieutenant Gregorie, in eight weeks from England, with dispatches for Mr. Erskine. There were landed from her, we understand, upwards of 1200 letters for different parts of the continent. She proceeded up the bay this morning.

We learn that the United States frigate, the Essex, Capt. Smith, has received sailing orders and is to proceed immediately to Boston where she is to receive her dispatches.

Timothy Pickering has written a letter which has appeared in the Salem Gazette, commenting on a paragraph in the Boston Patriot, denying the design of endeavoring to effect a severance of the Union, as unfolded a short time since in the Whig. Timothy's passion gets so much the better of his reason, that were it possible no other writer could be found to hold him up to scorn and ridicule, he is sure to do it himself. American.

John Quincy Adams is to sail shortly for Russia in a vessel belonging to Wm. Gray, Esq. from Salem. His sister's son goes with him as private secretary.

Boston, July 21.

Last week the first of the premiums of fifty dollars offered by the Massachusetts Agricultural Society, was paid on the importation of a Spanish Merino Ram: He has since been purchased by a gentleman of this town, and sent to the District of Maine, to which part of the country he will be a valuable acquisition. The wool is very fine.

Great-Britain at her old tricks again.

The following American vessels were carried into Kingston (Jamaica) in the course of the last month; Schooner Eliza-Ann, of Newburyport, condemned!—Schooner Mercury, of New Haven, do.—Brigantine Sampson, of Saybrook, do.—Schooner Caroline, of Norfolk, waiting trial.

COMMUNICATION.

DIED, at his seat in Dorchester county, near Cambridge, on Tuesday, the 18th inst. ARTHUR WHITELEY, Esq. of a lingering illness which he bore with christian fortitude and resignation.—Praise has too often been exhibited, where least merited, and virtues enumerated which were never practised—we therefore are almost deterred from bestowing praise where praise is justly due. But whilst the memories of those of whom no good can be said, ought to remain undisturbed. Yet it is due to him who has led the life of virtue, that he should receive the last honor which the world can bestow, of holding up his character to the imitation of the well disposed, as an admonitory lesson to those whose foot steps never walked the path of righteousness. The deceased never associated with the worthless or the unjust, he delighted in being surrounded by the virtuous and the good. He enjoyed the sincere and ardent friendship of all who had an opportunity of estimating his public and private worth; for he was in the constant habit of doing good: For although possessed of a handsome fortune, yet his means did not keep pace with the philanthropy of his mind. He envied not the possessions of others, and only lamented his inability to extend the good which he scattered round him. He possessed a firm mind, a heart liberal towards the failings of others, and a happy urbanity of manners, which rendered his society facinating and agreeable. He retained his understanding till within a few minutes of his death, nor did he manifest the least dread of appearing before his maker, for he was prepared for death. The tears of his numerous relatives and friends, prove how highly he was esteemed, how sincerely regretted.

Thy loss, dear friend, I ever shall deplore,
And to thy memory a tribute pay,
Did I not know thou dy'st, to die no more,
And gain'st immortal life, for mortal clay.
