Biography of Lloyd Lowndes,

OUR NOMINEE FOR GOVERNOR, FURNISHED BY A FRIEND.

Hon. Lloyd Lowndes, the President of the Second National Bank of Cumberland, Md., is a descendant of a distinguished Maryland family. Richard Lowndes, of Bosdock House, Cheshire, England, was his great-great-grandfather. His great-grandfather, Christopher Lowndes, came from England and was a successful merchant at Bladensburg before the national capital was located at Washington. He married Elizabeth Tasker, daughter of Governor Tasker, one of the prominent early colonial Governors of the State. His grandfather, Charles Lowndes, married Elizabeth Lloyd, daughter of Governor Edward Lloyd, one of the most distinguished of early Governors of Maryland. Charles Lowndes was in early life a merchant at Georgetown, D. C., but husbandry being more to his tastes, he retired upon a neat estate in Jefferson County, the eastern outpost of the Valley of Virginia. On the 4th of July, 1800, before this event, Lloyd Lowndes, the father of the present Lloyd Lowndes, was born at Georgetown, D. C. When twenty four years of age he and his younger brother, Richard T. Lowndes, settled in Cumberland, Md. They followed the family traditions and engaged in mercantile business. Very soon the firm of L. & R. R. Lowndes became one of the strongest in the State.

In 1831, Lloyd Lowndes moved to Clarksburg, Harrison Co., Va., and there established a branch house, under the name of Lowndes & Co. He gave to the new enterprise in this comparatively primitive section of the country the force of his best exertions and vigorous business ability. The twin houses acting in conjunction, controlled by the same business sense and integrity, became very prosperous. In 1840, Mr. Lowndes married Maria Elizabeth Moore, daughter of Thomas Moore, of Clarksburg. Four sons were the issue of this marriage, three of whom grew to manhood. Mr. Lowndes died on the 14th of March, 1879, in Clarksburg, after a remarkably successful career of more than a half century. It can be said of him that he was one of the most careful business men, successful merchants, and valuable citizens of the State. He left a large fortune as the fruit of his industry and business tact. His name occupies a conspicuous place in the history of this section of West Virginia, not more for the successful monuments of his life's work than for the liberality, kind-heartedness, and untiring zeal with which he lent his name and force to the advancement of the section in which he lived.

Commodore Charles Lowndes was the only one of his direct family to leave the avenues of his business. He served with distinction in the United States navy, and resides on his beautiful estate on Miles River, Talbot Co., Md.

Hon. Lloyd Lowndes, the subject of this sketch, was born in Clarksburg, February 21, 1845. He laid the foundation of his early education at the academy in his native town. In early life he developed those qualities of mind and character which have since given him marked success at the bar, in politics, in business, and in social life. When sixteen years of age he entered Washington College, at Washington, Pa., where he remained for two years. He finished his education at Allegbany College. Meadville, Pa., graduating with distinction in 1865, when only 20 years of age. As he had chosed the profession of law, he set about preparing himself for the bar. Richard L. Ashurst, of Philadelphia, was his preceptor. While pursuing his legal studies with this distinguished lawyer he attended the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania, and graduated therefrom in 1867. He at once settled in Cumberland, Md., where his father had begun business. He married Elizabeth T. Lowndes. His force of character, energy, talents, and probity won him almost immediate recognition and success. In the midst of a practice which almost immediately demanded a great part of his time, his ambition and tastes lead him to the broader field of politics and statecraft. Public affairs tending to the advancement of the community in which he lived secured his early and eager attention, and gained him the opportunity for that distinction which he has since achieved.

In politics as well as in business life he soon took a prominent part. He is a Republican of earnest convictions, and forcible and aggressive in their expression. In 1872 he was nominated for Congress, his district at that time being largely Democratic, with but a single Republican county. So rapidly had he advanced in public favor that he carried the district by 1,700 majority against the Hon. John Ritchie, of Fredrick county, who had carried it by over 1,500 majority two years before. A very spirited canvass followed Mr. Lowndes' nomination, and in his election he was the first to change its political complexion since the Hon. Francis Thomas had represented the district.

Mr. Lowndes was only twenty-eight years of age when he entered the Forty-third Congress and was at the time its youngest member. He served on some of its most important committees during the season of that Congress, and in his congressional career he advanced as rapidly as in the other pursuits in which he had met with such signal success, winning distinction as an active, energetic worker, while his social qualities made him exceedingly popular with his fellow-members, and his untiring industry in all matters relating to the affairs of his District won him the respect and admiration of his constituents.

He was re-nominated in 1874, his opponent being the Hon. William Walsh, who was elected by a small majority.

Since that time Mr. Lowndes has not been in public life, although he has never ceased to take on active part in politics.

In 1879, he was strongly urged for the Governorship, and was a delegate at large from his State to the Republican National Convention at Chicago.

In addition to his successful public life he has filled, and now fills, various positions of trust and honor in the business world. Since 1873, he has been President of the Second National Bank of Cumberland, one of the largest financial institutions of Western Maryland.

He is also President of the Frostburg Gaslight Company; President of the Union Mining Company, and President of the Potomac Coal Company. He is a director in the Cumberland and Elk Lick Coal Company; in the Black, Sheridan Wilson Company; in the New York Mining Company; in the Barton and George's Creek Valley Coal Dompany; in the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, and a number of other corporations. Was formerly President of the Bar Association of Allegany county.

He has been for many years, and is now a member of Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal church of Cumberland, is one of the vestrymen and has frequently been a delegate to the Diocesan conventions, and no man in his section of the State has contributed more generously to public and private enterprises than Mr. Lowndes.

His means are very large, and are freely expended in developing the industrial enterprises of the city of Cumberland and Allegany county.

Besides his large financial, coal, and milling interests, he has one of the most fertile farms in the country, which is devoted to a general system of progressive farming, and includes the raising of choise breeds of cattle; he is thus closely indentified with the agricultural interests of his section, and particularly with the efforts which have been made for the establishment and maintainance of system of good roads.

He is now fifty years of age, and has a position, and social popularity, which make him one of the foremost men of his State, and one of the ablest and best representatives of the Republican party of Maryland.

MARYLAND JUDICIARY.

The Governor of Maryland will next year have to appoint a successor to Associate Judge Brooke, of the 7th circuit, whose term expires in Nov. 1896. The appointee will serve until the general election of 1897 and will probably be chosen by the people for the ensuing term of 15 years, as party lines are seldom closely drawn in judicial elections. At the sametime, Associate Judge Crane's successor will be elected. This year an Associate Judge will be elected in the Sixth circuit, composed of Montgomery and Frederick counties. The term of Judge Vinson expires in 1897, but he reached the age limit—70 years—last year, and the General Assembly of 1894 refused to pass an enabling resolution in his favor, as was done in the cases of Associate Judge Lynch of the same circuit and Associate Judge Hoffman, of the Fourth, whose terms expire in 1897, but who will be 70 years of age a year or more before that time. Judge Henderson was appointed upon Judge Vinson's retirement.

Five other judges will leave the Maryland bench in 1897. Chief Judge Robinson, of the Court of Appeals and of the Second circuit and his colleagues on that circuit, Judges Wicks and Stump, will complete thirty years of service in 1897, and Judges Robinson and Wicks will reach the age limit, and Judge Stump will be 60. This is the only circuit in which no change has been made in the judicial personnel since the Constitution of 1867 went into effect. Associate Judge Jones, of the Fifth circuit, now 56 years old, will complete fifteen years on the bench in 1897. Judge Bryan, the Baltimore city member of the Court of Appeals, will be 70 on the expiration of his term in 1898, and Judge Phelps, of the Baltimore Supreme Bench will be 64 in 1897, when his term expires. He is the only survivor of the city bench of 1882. The other judges in this State are serving terms expiring in the years from 1900 to 1809.—Baltimore Evening News.
