☞A Deputy from the Internal Revenue Bureau will visit Leonardtown, March 4th and 6th to assist citizens in making up their income tax resurns.

Our thanks are due Hon. Hugh A. McMullen for a copy of the Annual Report of the Treasury of Maryland, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1919.

One hundred and sixty-two persons met death as a result of automobile accidents during 1919, according to a statistical report issued by E. Austin Baughman.

Ridgley Jones, aged about 30 years, died at his home in Wilmington, N. C., on February 6th. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jones, of Kinsale, Va., formerly of St. Mary's. He is survived by a widow and one son.

Democratic candidates for Congress are coming forward. Three, Dr. John W. Klemm, of Mt. Rainer, John P. Riggles and Capt. Thomas Klinger, of Prince Georges county, have announced their williness to represent the Fifth Congressional district.

The Annual Farmers Institute will be held at the Court House, this city, on Tuesday, February 17th, beginning at 10 a. m. If the farmers will come together, take up the suggested problems, discuss them among themselves and with the specialists of the Extension Service much good will result.

The "Tale of Two Cities" at the Town Hall on Wednesday night last under the auspices of the Modern Woodmen, was well attended, and the dance, which followed the pictures was enjoyed by an unusual number of happy and pleasure seeking couples. The affair was a success socially and financially.

Senator Grason has introduced a bill, which, if passed, wiil give the Governor the appointing of the State Tobacco Inspector, instead of the Board of Agriculture having the appointment as at present. The bill also increases the salary of the Inspector from $2000.00 to $3000.00 and limits the time of storage to four months instead of six. It also appropriates money to rebuild the warehouses.

A bill has been introduced by Senator Wolf to amend the present dog law so that the sworn report of appraisers to assess damages shall be deemed prima facia evidence of the fairness of the award and prohibits the County Commissioners from changing this award, unless they have personal knowledge that same is unfair and that the award is in excess of the damages assessed. The bill also makes mandatory the killing of the dogs.

Pot Pourri.

Under the above caption the Baltimore News, of recent date has this to say of "Marse Tom" Parran.

"Of those with vest-pocket constituencies, the feudal-baron type, only "Tom" Parran remains. Little Calvert answers to his word just as the waves used to respond to the nod of Neptune. "Marse Tom" lives close to nature. The lid on his pork barrel tips lightly to the touch of the needy. The vaults of his bank are open to the surplus cash of the thrifty. But he is a Republican, so the worst he can do is to throw Calvert's vote in a Democratic convention against the Democrat who offends him. Civil service for Democratic employees does not excite his wrath. Quite likely he approves of civil service; for "Marse Tom" is wide awake to the signs of the times. So the Governor has a free hand with the politicians. He has only to fight whatever pressure can be developed against him on the part of the general public. But it also happens that he must depend on himself for most of the support that he can muster.

Historic Hotel Property Sold.

The Historic Hotel St. Mary's property, this city, has been transferred by Mr. W. Bernard Duke, of Baltimore, to S. D. Perkins, this city, formerly of Washington, D. C., who since May 1st, 1919, has been giving the public excellent service as proprietor of Hotel St. Mary's. The present hotel is a comparatively new building, supplied with steamheat, electricity and water. It is of historic interest to know that this property has changed hands but three times in the last fifty-four years and has been known as the Hotel St. Mary's Property under Mr. W. Bernard Duke's ownership, as Moore's Hotel under the ownership of the Moores, and as the Washington Hotel during the Civil War period and as "The Inn" priod to that date. The new management contemplates extensive improvements, which will add to the comfort of their patrons.

Death of Mrs. L. Nota Readmond.

In the death of Mrs. Helen Waleh Readmond, wife of L. Nota Readmond on January 20, 1920, a wide circle of friends experienced a sad loss. Her gentleness, courtesy and consideration for others endeared her to all who knew her. Her whole life was one of unselfish devotion to her family; and the beauty of her character was felt by all with whom she came in contact.

The poor of the community have sustained a loss which only they know.

Truis will she be missed, but our grief will be lessened by the knowledge that one, so mete for the inheritance of the saints, has gone to be with those whose spirits are akin to her own.

"Thy soul was as a star and dwelt apart;
And yet thy soul,
The lowliest duties on herself did lay."
—A Friend.

Increasing Timber Production.

The present price of timber and its growing scarcity emphasizes the need of increased timber production. There never was such an opportunity for the woodland owner to practice forestry and thereby increase forest yields, as there is today. Are you treating your forests as a mine, cutting the timber with no thought for the future, or do you recognize in your forest a growing crop capable of continuous yields?

The average hardwood forest contains a variety of tree species of different values, and of trees of all sizes from the tiny seedlings to those of mature growth. The management of the forest by which the best species are encouraged and the small trees carried through the successive stages of growth to maturity is worthy of the best efforts of the forest owners. Many woodland owners have found that by cutting under a selective system, it is possible to cut over the woodlsnd at short intervals, taking only timber of mature size, and that a succession of crops and a continued revenue is secured. The timber buyer allows little or nothing for trees of small size, the cutting of which gives him little if any profit so so that the immature growth should be reserved by the owner for the next crop

The handling of woodlands for timber production is now becoming an established practice. The owner who practices forestry now is not only getting the most out of his woods, but due to increased production and advance in prices, is certain to reap large increase in revenue.

During the past few years, the State Board of Forestry, 815 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md., has examined thousands of acres of woodland at the request of the owners, and helped them to put in practice a system of forestry that has resulted in large benefits to them. This offer is open to any iand owner of the State.
