Immediately after the ceremony and the reception which followed, they left on their honeymoon. The groom has employment with the Westinghouse Company of Chester, Pa.

Notables Expected at Mutual Tournament.

Many notables are expected at the annual Home Coming Tournament at Mutual on Saturday, August 27th. Besides the orator of the day, Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, and the orator of the evening, Governor Harry W. Nice, who will deliver the coronation address, there will be present Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, Congressman David J. Lewis, Willis R. Jones, J. Millard Tawes and William C. Walsh, each of whom will be introduced from the judges' stand in the afternoon. A large number of local riders are expected to participate, for in addition to the very substantial money prizes and the crowns offered for successful contestants, the Goldstein trophy, a handsome silver cup, can be won only by a Calvert rider. However, the Parran cup, fully as handsome, will be contested for by all riders. These two trophies are offered for the first time. A large number of riders from other sections have announced their intention to be on hand. They will include the Fleurys, father and son, the Hennessays, the McCoy chies, Brady's, Melvin Cole and many more. It is also pretty certain that little Mary Bartram, the remarkable child equestrian who has ridden at various tournaments this summer and who won the first amateur prize and queen's crown last Saturday at Bradshaw, will be present and ride at the Mutual tournament.

Death of Mr. Jas. Wm. Wood.

Mr. James William Wood died Sunday morning last at his home near Bristol about 10 o'clock. He had appeared as well as usual earlier and was stricken with a heart attack while at his barn and died after being assisted to the house. Mr. Wood was aged 76 years and was the husband of Mrs. Agnes Norfolk Wood. His parents were the late John T. Wood and Susan Ann Wood, of Mt Harmony. The deceased is survived by his wife and two brothers, John Wood, of Davidsonville, and Plummer Wood, of Friendship.

The funeral was held at the home of the deceased Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with interment in the cemetery at Mt. Harmony. Rev. Mr. Moore officiated.

Tobacco Tour.

The tobacco growers of Calvert county will be given an opportunity on Monday, August 22, to see the tobacco experiments at Upper Marlboro, according to J. S. Morsell, county agent.

W. B. Posey, specialist in tobacco at the University, has made arrangements with the officials of the Tobacco Experiment Station, to explain the various tobacco experiments to the visitors from this county. Some very interesting experiments with the different phases of tobacco production are in progress, among those worthy of a careful examination at this time are fertiliser placement test, seed rotations, tobacco following weeds which have followed a legume, potash rate test, breeding tests for mosaic resistance, detrimental effect of certain crops on tobacco growth and numerous tests in in which one or more of the plant food elements have been left out of the fertilization of tobacco.

Growers interested in seeing these experiments will kindly go direct to the Tobacco Experiment Station, which is a part of the Marlboro Pike Grounds, and meet Mr. Posey at the entrance on Monday, August 22, at 9 a. m.

Hot Weather Food Facts.

These suggestions come from the Maryland State Department of Health:

If you are anxious to decrease the discomfort of hot weather, avoid eating foods which stimulate the production of heat in the body. Protein foods, such as meat, fish, eggs and poultry, act in this way and so should be taken sparingly. Stimulating drinks such as tea and coffee, and very cold and iced foods also cause the body to produce more heat. Drinks like iced tea and iced coffee are not cooling in their effects for, besides being stimulants, they chill the stomach so suddenly that the body responds with an emergency production of heat. To hot weather sufferers they are wolves in sheep's clothing.

So much the kind of things you eat and drink. On the other hand the belief that we need less food in hot than in cold weather is often untrue. The amount of food needed by a certain person depends chiefly on how active he is physically. If you do the same kind of work and spend your spare time in the same way in the summer as in the winter, you will need slightly less food when the mercury climbs. But, if you do farm work in the summer and tinker around the house in the winter, a great amount of food will be needed in the summer.

Children, who sit at a desk a large part of every winter day and who play hard in the summer frequently need more food in the summer than in the winter. Many children lose weight in the summer because they do not eat enough to meet this increased need. They require a "good breakfast" and a "hot lunch" just as much now as they do in the winter when we are more prone to worry over their meals. The protein foods, which stimulate heat production in the adult, are required by the child for growth and so in the child do cause extra heat production. Therefore they need not be limited to the child's diet.

An adult's need for the protective foods remain the same in the summer as in the winter, so when, because of the heat, you take just a sandwich for lunch, give a thought to where your vitamins and minerals are coming from. Include fruit and vegetables and milk in that meal.

When the day is hot, the heat produced by the body is eliminated almost entirely by evaporation. This causes a loss of water and salt from the body which should be made up by drinking large amounts of liquids. Adding salt to the drinking water replaces some of the salt lost and helps to prevent fatigue and heat prostration. When you are drowsy from the heat, it has a welcome taste, too. Use about 1-2 teaspoonful to a glass of water, or use the salt tablets which may be purchase for this purpose.

Fishing Fair Contest.

Two weeks until the Fishing Fair Grand Contest at Rock Hall, August 27th and 28th. Requests are coming in from all sections of the East asking for reservations and information, and it appears that Rock Hall will be taxed to the limit. Among the special features will be a Bay Country crab feast and a Rock Hall fish-fry with short-bread and black molasses. All entertainment will be free to registered anglers.

Maryland's "Oyster Navy" will bring its fleet of 27 power patrol boats, headed by the flag-ship Da Pont, in command Capt Creighton, for a grand inspection by the Conservation Commissioner.

The Fair at Solomons last year attracted some 1500 anglers and is expected to draw 2,000 or more to Rock Hall. Fishing in the Chesapeake now is on the "up." Big rock have been running for the past several weeks. There are plenty of trout in the Bay in addition to other species But the big news of the week is the bluefish run now on in the Gooses and around Sharp's Island.

The Fishing Fair this year is expected to witness a large gathering of visitors from all parts of the East and middle West and a flock of Maryland politicians. Activity at the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Association's headquarters in Preston, Md., are going on at a terrific rate as final details for the biggest angler's convention are ironed out.

Approve PWA Grant for Chesapeake Beach Bulkhead.

Public Works Administrator, Harold L. Ickes, announced Saturday last that he had approved an outright PWA grant of $24,545.00 for the construction of a new bulkhead, including backfill and the acquisition of necessary land therefor, at Chesapeake Beach, Md., at an estimated cost of $54,545.00. The project comprises the construction of approximately 2800 lineal feet of treated timber bulkhead and the acquision of right-of-way over 25 pieces of property.

Two rows of cable guard fence will extend along the inside face of the front piles. The necessary grading, backfilling and appurtenances will be included in the contract. The units of the existing bulkhead, one unit 600 feet long in the north section and one unit 4000 feet long in the south section, were constructed under PWA docket 7354-L. These bulkheads have prevented the encroachment of the water and have protected the property and improvements thereon. The center portion consists of about 2700 lineal feet of undeveloped marsh land, which is partly reclaimed and 1150 feet of improved property. The new bulkhead will prevent erosion and encroachment of the bay upon the existing improved properties and highways and will allow the undeveloped sections of land to be improved.

It will provide much needed work for skilled and unskilled labor in this locality and will provide much needed employment in the industries which furnish the materials for the project.

P. T. A. to Serve Supper at Tournament Here.

The committ e having in charge the tournament to be held at Prince Frederick on Saturday, September 3rd, with John B. Morsell as chairman, are busy with arrangements, and there is not a doubt that it will be a most interesting, enjoyable and successful event. The proceeds will be for the benefit of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church. State Senator Lansdale w. Sasscer will make the address to the knights in the afternoon, and it is hoped that United States Senator Millard E Tydings will be present to deliver the coronation address at the ball in the Prince Frederick Town Hall following the tournament. The Parent-Teachers Association of the Calvert County High School will serve a Southern Maryland supper on the High School grounds following the tournament, for the benefit of that Association. The High School grounds adjoin the tournament field.

Erosion Control.

The farmers of Calvert county are gradually awakening to the menace of soil erosion, and the proper measures to take to combat it. Soil erosion to many of them is just a term, disassociated with anything applicable to their farm experience and that is so because they have not taken into account its results pretty manifest all the time for anybody to see; insidious though often like a slowly developing disease which finally see is heroic treatment to overcome.

An interested group was present on Monday afternoon and participated in an informal discussion on that subject conducted in the class room of the Agricultural Department of the Calvert County High School taught by Carey E. Lacey, and afterwards they went on an inspection tour of the farm of Grover Cleveland Young, located near the High School. Mr. Young is the first and only land owner in Calvert county to undertake a soil conservation project on his farm. His contract calls for a period of five years, outlining the work for that length of time, what to grow and where and how to grow it, and has been approved by the Soil Conservation of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The farm group who followed Mr. Lacey over the Young farm were most favorably impressed with the conservation program carried out there—the arrangement of twelve different divisions, each having been given its required treatment, depending on the kind of soil and the degree of slope in the land; the running of rows on contour so that each row would be a reservoir to hold moisture and fertilizer; the system of strip cropping to effect throughout, strip of grass planted beside each plot of tobacco or corn to slow up the flow of water; the use of terracing in a few places across an elevation as a further preventative of erosion; the 31 acres planted in young trees, most of it in locust, because it is a legume, invaluable for soil recovery on worn out land.

The visitors could not help admiring the excellent condition of all the crops on the entire farm and the absence of washing anywhere, remarkable in a season of abnormal rainfall.

The informal discussions earlier in the school were lead by Edward Davis, of Hagerstown, Demonstration Project Manager, and Isaac N. Shepherd, of Harwood, C. C. C. Camp Director. The speakers pointed out that measures for controlling soil erosion have been in effect for a number of years in certain sections, and in the far South terracing as a method of prevention was resorted to before the Civil War. In Maryland, however, the need for preventive measures has only become generally apparent recently. Scientists assert, said one speaker, that if no methods of erosion control were ever affected anywhere, in about 1000 years there would be no soil left to work.

There is a greater variety of soil in Southern Maryland than in most sections. Different systems of erosion control are practiced in different sections. Examples of soil reclamation were explained, and terracing and strip farming were generally recommended for cultivated land.
