NOVEMBER 26, 1938.

The numerous convictions for tobacco stealing at this November term of Court calls attention to the need of legislative action to save our farmers from loss of their property. It is almost impossible for farmers to guard against the stealing of tobacco from their barns. Convictions and punishment may reduce the trouble, but rogues will continue to make the raids as long as they can find a market for their stolen goods. It is the careless and dishonest buyer that is responsible. In the several cases tried at court, the evidence very plainly showed that the circumstances and conditions under which the goods were taken to the buyer were sufficient to cause the purchaser to believe he was buying stolen goods.

Any sensible men having tobacco brought from a distance of many miles to his place on or about day break by a youngster could not fail to have his suspicions aroused, and have good cause to believe he was offered stolen goods. In the cases tried the goods were not taken to a local county buyer, but carried many miles to an adjoining county.

The careless buyer makes the larceny both easy and profitable. Without this ready market, the tobacco rogue would be helpless in getting rid of the stolen goods. The careless and dishonest buyer in receiving the stolen goods under such circumstances is equally as guilty as the rogue who raids the farmer's barn. It is he that encourages the theft by making it profitable to the rogue. The most effective remedy is to make the buyer responsible both financially and criminally when he is so flagrantly negligent in his dealing, as was shown in many of the cases tried. It should be no excuse to plead that he assumed the goods to be those of the seller, when circumstances indicated so strongly that they were not his property. Take the rogue's market away from him, and he will lose the urge to steal.

Achievement Day.

The 6th annual Homemakers Achievement Day was held Thursday, November 10th, in the Huntingtown Hall at Huntingtown. All sections of the county were well represented, one hundred eighty-five women attending. Plum Point club had thirty-six members present, which was the largest number from any club.

The morning program consisted of group single, club reports on the past year's activities and County Council business meeting at which time Miss Esther Gibson was elected county representative to the State Council of Homemakers. The county chorus report was given by the leader, Mrs. Reid Hutchins. A very splendid paper on "Old Homes of Calvert" was presented by Mrs. Oscar Carpenter. The morning program was completed with a report of the reading done by the homemakers of the clubs and the certificates for reading was presented by Miss Angela Felser, Home Demonstration Agent. The luncheon was served by the hostess clubs—Plum Point and Huntingtown.

The afternoon program was opened by a selection from the county chorus trio—Mrs. C. T. Hutchins, Mrs. Harry Harkness and Mrs. C. J. Frout. The address was timely and instructive. The subject of the address was "Crime in the American Home," by Mr. J. H. Mathis, administrative assistant to Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Several duet selections were enjoyed, "Thank God for a Garden" and "Serenade—Shubert," sung by Mrs. Charles Dagnal and Mrs. Ormsby Webster, accompanied by Mrs. Harry Paff. The program closed with group singing and a numerous reading, "Aunt Polly at the Rural Aid Society," given by Mrs. Harry Harkness. The County Council of Homemakers Clubs was invited by the Owings and Lower Marlboro Clubs to meet with them next November.

Murder Case Set for December 1.

The trial of two young women and a man for the murder of William Warren Gantt, eccentric and wealthy farmer of Port Republic, was set for December 1 on Thursday of last week by Circuit Judge William Maycroft Loyer.

The three defendants were brought here on Thursday for preliminary arraignment from Baltimore, where they have been in jail since July 22. Pale after their four months incarceration, Walter Stinnett, 24, Drum Point; Mrs. Margaret Abell, 18, Dowell, and Mrs. Evelyn A. Bajowski, 34, Baltimore, pleaded innocent to the charge.

The arraignment came shortly after four other persons charged with accepting money known to have belonged to Gantt's estate received suspended sentences for one year with the provision they make restitution of $200 each within one year. The money was allegedly given them by a fifth defendant, Mrs. Blanche Stinnett, 30, wife of the murder defendant, who was remanded to the Upper Marlboro jail for sentence on a charge of stealing $960 from the estate. All five pleaded guilty.

Suspended sentences were given James and Daisy Fowler, of Cove Point, mother and father of Mrs. Stinnett; Benjamin Franklin Thom, a 73, Cove Point estate caretaker, who has already returned the $100, and Nena Walton, 24 of Lusby.

Mrs. Stinnett, despite her guilty plea told the Court she found the money while hanging tobacco in the Gantt barn.

Gantt, 55, was found dead July 19, at his home in Parker's Creek community with six bullet wounds in the body. Police said approximately $1,000 had been taken from him. Stinnett and the two women were arrested five days later in Fredericksburg, Va.

"Dick Tracy Returns" New Serial At Marlboro Theatre.

The G-Men score again in Republic's newest Dick Tracy serial, "Dick Tracy Returns," which opens at the Marlboro Theatre on Saturday, November 26th. This exciting 15 chapter picture has all the elements of successful entertainment—action, drama, comedy and thrills galore.

Starring the same actor who made such a hit in the title role of the first Tracy picture, Ralph Byrd, "Dick Tracy Returns" deals with adventures of the ace G-Man when he gets on the trail of a ruthless criminal family, the Starks, composed of the father, Stark (Charles Middleton), and five sons, Trigger (Hazimoe Bennett), Champ (John Merton), Slasher (Jack Ingram), Dude (Jack Roberts) and the Kid (Ted Glass).

There are airplane crashes, wild automobile rides, hair raising escapades on board ships, parachute jumps and just about every conceivable type of thrill that any audience could want. Tracy and his pals flirt with death time and time again before they finally bring the gang to justice.

The story opens with Tracy giving instructions to a group of new recruits in Washington. It quickly moves to the west coast, with Tracy and Box Morton (David Sharpe) on the trail of the Starks. Morton is murdered by Pa Stark, and Tracy with Steve (Michael Kent), relentlessly chases him through a series of dangerous exploits.

One by one the Starks are killed off, First the kid, then Slasher, Dude and Trigger. But Pa Stark and Champ manage to keep out of Tracy's reach until the final episode.

The feature attraction on the same program is "The Texans," featuring Randolph Scott. On the same program is an "Our Gang" comedy, and a Terry Toon cartoon complete the bill. Free candy will be given to all children attending the matinee on Saturday, November 26th.
