UP AND DOWN THE SHORE TRAIL

Firemen's Auxiliary Elects

Chestertown.—Mrs. Horace Needles was elected president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company as that organization held its annual meeting last Thursday.

Other officers chosen were: Mrs. Oliver Wright, vice-president; Mrs. Jesse Blakeney, secretary; Mrs. Hope Malin, treasurer. Directors elected were: Mrs. R. Hynson Rogers, Mrs. Julian Coleman and Mrs. W. J. Stenger.

Big Ditch Started

Goldsborough.—The long awaited dirt throwing on the Long Marsh Branch "Big Ditch" on the Queen Anne's-Caroline boundary is now actually in progress as the CCC boys at Camp D-2 at Goldsborough, have finally completed sufficient preliminary work to let them get their "teeth" into the real project.

Three miles of heavy timber along the branch have been cleared away. Real digging started at a point about two miles south of the crossing of the state road between Church Hill and Goldsborough.

Another Kent Farm Sold

Chestertown.—W. Raymond Startt has sold his farm near Cliff City, in Quaker Neck, to Bert E. Wallace. This farm contains 150 acres adjoining Mr. Wallace's original purchase. Possession is to be given within sixty days so that Mr. Startt will have to act quickly in finding another home. It is reported he will remove to Chestertown. Mr. Wallace has become interested in dairying and wanted more land. The price is said to have been around $16,000.

Ice Boating On The Miles

St. Michaels.—Wednesday afternoon an ice boat piloted by Wes Seymour and accompanied by Bill Sevier and George Hause, sailed across the Miles river from shore to shore in the St. Michaels harbor. They started at Long's Wharf on the St. Michaels side of the river and sailed across to Stewart's on the opposite shore.

According to the ones who made the trip, this is the first time in twenty-five years that the ice in the river has been frozen solid enough to hold a boat. The ice near the shore on each side of the river was about 8 to 12 inches thick and was 4 or 5 inches thick in the middle of the river in the channel.

Roe Company Elects Officers

Greensboro.—At the annual meeting of stock holders of The F. P. Roe Company, Greensboro, held in the factory office, Monday, February 3rd, the following directors were elected for the coming year: Genevieve C. Roe, C. Roland Mays, T. Clayton Horsey and John C. Brown. Following the meeting of stockholders the directors met and elected officers as follows: President and treasurer, T. Clayton Horsey; vice president and secretary, J. C. Brown.

Theatre Manager Injured

Ridgely.—David R. Mitchell, manager of the Ridgely Theatre, suffered numerous injuries about the head and severe bruises about the body and had his automobile completely wrecked in an accident which involved a colored man, 3 automobiles, and a horse on the state highway between Ridgely and Denton at midnight last Saturday. Mr. Mitchell was taken to the Fifer Hospital, Ridgely, where medical aid was given.

Rescue Lighthouse Keeper

St. Michaels.—Going to the aid of a sick keeper of the Love Point lighthouse, three Love Point men early last Thursday took the man, Wallace Sturgis, ashore and sent him to his home at Chincoteague. The group used a sailboat converted into an ice boat to reach the keeper.

According to some of the oldest watermen in the vicinity, it was the first time an iceboat was used to take a sick person from a Chesapeake Bay lighthouse.

The lighthouse stands three miles from the shore. It is located in the center of the entrance to the Chester river and off the northernmost end of Kent Island.

Volunteer Firemen Honored

Chestertown.—At the regular meeting of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company on Monday evening of this week Messrs. W. H. Elliott and Rev. C. L. Atwater were made life active members of the company.

This honor was bestowed upon these two men in recognition of outstanding work and untiring efforts and faithfulness in the interests of the company. Mr. W. L. Fowler who retired as president of the company at the annual meeting in January was also made a life active member.

Others who have been made life active members are: A. L. Sparks, John E. Matthews and Wm. G. Smyth.

Queen Anne's Lawyer Dies

Centreville.—James T. Bright, age 58, for many years a well known lawyer of Centreville, but later of Baltimore, died on Sunday night about 8:30 o'clock at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. Fred Carter, on Kent Island, where he had made his home for several months.

Mr. Bright practiced law in Centreville for a number of years, and at one time was counsel to the Board of County Commissioners. He also at one time was connected with the Centreville Record, and was a candidate for Congress, being defeated by Jesse D. Price, of Salisbury.

Catch Chicken Thieves

Chestertown.—Town officer William White while making his rounds last Saturlay night saw an automobile in the colored section of the town with a number of blood soaked bags in it. Upon investigation he found they contained headless chickens. Taking one of the bags for evidence he called the jail and Deputy John Bennett arrived in time to arrest Hiram Conway, Richard Black, and Tom Blunt, all colored, and confiscate the rest of the chickens, there being 23 in all.

It was found out later that they had been stolen from Mr. Tom Smith in Queen Anne's county and the men will be tried for the crime in Centreville next Tuesday night.

Kent Adds Welfare Case

Chestertown.—At the meeting of the Board of Welfare for Kent county held on Tuesday afternoon 16 new cases were added making 85 in all out of 276 applications. Other cases will be considered as soon as the Government money is available.

The amounts appropriated in the several districts are as follows: First District, $1,729.50; Secnnd District, $612.00; Third District, $708.00; Fourth District, $1,327.00; Fifth District, $2,346.00; Sixth District, $948.00; Seventh District, $408.

New Way To Catch Oysters

Rock Hall.—Rock Hall oystermen are using their ingenuity to best Nature's clamp-down on the bivalve industry. Prevented from going to the oyster beds in their boats, the watermen are walking out on a foot-thick sheet of ice to the bars. They then cut a hole in the frozen layer, stick down their tongs and haul up the oysters.

It is reliably reported here that the men have been getting from 30 to 40 bushels daily in this manner. With the rising price, their ingenuity nets a good day's wage.

Fair Race Dates Set

Harrington.—Dates for the matinee race meet held in conjunction with the Kent and Sussex Fair have been set for July 27 to August 1. The Allotment was made by the Central Fair Circuit in session in Reading, Pa.

Firemen Seek New Members

Centreville.—With their goal set at 300 members to provide new hose and rubber coats that are now badly needed, the Good Will Fire Company of Centreville got under way on February 1 and will continue throughout the month.

Despite cold weather which kept many people close to the fireside during the early part of the week, forty honorary memberships have been contributed since last Saturday and new names are being added to the list rapidly.

Caroline 4-H Banquet

Goldsborough.—The annual banquet of the Caroline County Federation of Boys' 4-H Clubs will be held in Goldsborough on February 27, at 7 p. m. The banquet will be served by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Goldsborough Methodist Episcopal Church, with the assistance of 4-H Club girls. Otis Wharton, of Ridgely, will be toastmaster. A program is being arranged by George W. Clendaniel, county boys' club leader.

Scout Troop Is Organized

Hillsboro.—A Boy Scout Troop composed of Hillsboro and Queen Anne's youths, was organized in Queen Anne last week, Emmett Barton, of that place was elected scout master, and Wm. Sherwood, of Hillsboro, is assistant

HISTORICAL IRON HILL

I remember as a boy climbing the hill with my brother, and watching the ore drawn out of the pits in small cars. After being washed and the stones removed, it was carried to the railroad on huge wagons, drawn by six mules. The driver was old grew-bearded Thomas Williams, who worked fifty-five years for the Whitakers. It was a picturesque sight, but hard on the dirt roads. A large part of the ore was sent to the furnaces at Principio, which are among the oldest in America. Augustine and Lawrence Washington were on the board of directors of the Company. After their deaths their interest came into possession of George Washington. There is reason to believe that ore from Iron Hill was used at Principio in making munitions for the American armies during the Revolution, and in the War of 1812.

One of the old ore wagons, which has not been used for more than half a century is still in my possession.

On several occasions the belief became current that the hill contained gold. Otherwise level-headed business men invested their money in its search, but nothing has been found to reward their efforts.

The Indians

The Indians had two names for Iron Hill. One was Marettico, meaning "hill of hard stone" and the other Suquasehum, said to be a Lenape word meaning iron.

Iron Hill was the stronghold of the Minquas. The Christiana Creek which flows at its foot they named the Minqua. Somewhere on the hill they had a fort. This was a wise precaution as they were surrounded by hostile tribes.

The historical Campanius tells us that the Minquas were renowned for their warikle character, that they lived twelve miles from New Sweden on a high mountain where they built a fort r square building surrounded with palisades.

In 1663 the Minquas were attacked by the Sinigos. A fierce battle occurred, of which the fort was the center. But the fort was strong, and the Sinigos were forced to withdraw. So far as we know the Minquas had no further trouble except for the encroachment of the white man. Near the summit of the hill, in a woods forming a part of my farm, are two mounds surrounded by stones. Old trails pass by them. No one knows their origin. That they are the remains of the fort is as good a guess as any.

Delaware at that time was claimed by Lord Baltimore. His Lordship's settlers and the Indians were not on good terms. Sheep had been stolen, and canoes upset. Finally the brother of King Pinna of the Passayunks was killed. On April 17, 1661, two Englishmen, Norden and Hack, and two companions were passing over Iron Hill on their way from New Castle, to the head of the Chesapeake. When near the fort they were attacked and killd by the Indians, notwithstanding the entreaties of an old Indian who pleaded with them not to do it.

One report of the murder states that it took place "on Marettico or the Iron Hill," and another that "theirnGetaois lay at a place called Suquasehum."

Lord Baltimore was greatly incensed, declaring that it is not our custom "to bury the blood of Christians in forgetfulness and oblivion," but wishing to retain the friendship of the Indians, entered into a treaty with them at Appoquinimi (now Odessa). It was a one-sided treaty favoring the English, but it seems to have suited everyone. It was made twenty-two years before Penn's famous treaty at Philadelphia.

Baltimore And Penn

If Baltimore thought that his troubles were over he was doomed to disappointment. Little did he know that he was about to enter into contests and litigation which would last ninety-three years, and until his colony and that of William Penn would become independent states.

Twenty-three years after Baltimore's treaty with the Indians, Penn landed at New Castle wit ha grant from the Duke of York, which overlapped some territory to which Baltimore held title. Again Iron Hill became the bone of contention. Baltimore sent his fiery cousin, George Talbot, to Penn to make a protest. Not being successful he made a raid in 1684 over Iron Hill and beyond to Christeen, driving from their homes all holding title under Penn.

Talbot's further efforts to retain the territory for his cousin were more spectacular than effective. Among them was the erection of a beacom on Iron Hill for the purpose of sending signals to his adherents in case of invasion. Penn retaliated by placing a colony of Welsh in the center of the disputed area. By a special grant he allotted to them a tract of thirty thousand acres, comprising what is now Pencader Hundred, and a part of Cecil county, Maryland. The Welsh in turn dispossessed settlers claiming under Baltimore. One of these, says Johnston, had planted a peach orchard on Iron Hill which he was loath to leave. From this it appears that the raising of peaches, for which Delaware became justly famous, had its origin on Iron Hill.

Greenstein Resigns As Relief Administrator

Much regret was expressed throughout the State last Saturday when it was learned that Harry Greenstein, State Relief Administrator, had tendered his resignation effective April 1. Samuel E. Shanahan, chairman of the Board of State Aid and Charities, said that the resignation of Mr. Greenstein was "nothing short of a public calamity."

Returns To Old Position

When he leaves the State post Mr. Greenstein will resume his duties as executive director of the Associated Jewish Charities. In announcing the resignation, Mr. Greenstein said:

"The Governor has announced that he will call a special session of the Legislature during the first week in March. I, therefore, would like very much to be released of my responsibility as State Relief Administrator on April 1, so that I can take up my accumulated work with the Associated Jewish Charities, to which I have been able to give so little of my time during the past two and one-half years."

The services of Mr. Greenstein were loaned to the State by the Jewish charity organization Mr. Greenstein did not receive compensation from the State during his tenure as administrator.

Cecil Tops Last Year's Red Cross Roll Record

According to an announcement by William B. Matthews, managing director of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, Cecil was one of the seven counties in the State to better its contribution to the Red Cross through the sale of Christmas Seals. The total reported to date from this county amounts to $517.12. Other counties ahead of their 1934 totals are, Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Calvert, Garrett, Queen Anne's and Washington.

Name Of Havre de Grace Hospital Changed

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Havre de Grace Hospital last week, it was decided to change the name of the institution to The Harford County Memorial Hospital. Robert M. Vandiver, of Havre de Grace, is president of the hospital.

A committee was appointed to ascertain if it would be advisable to conduct a county-wide campaign for funds. Various organizations in the county will be contacted for cooperation and advice.
