Parking Meters

Analysis of answers received in the Keystone Automobile Club's parking meter survey reveals that while 83 per cent of the motorists questioned new express a liking for the meters, only 55 per cent formerly favored them. Among merchants, the percentage in favor of the meters has jumped from 35 to 55 per cent.

Survey figures for individual cities and towns show that Washington, D. C., motorists lead all others in support of metered parking, voting approximately 25 to 1 for the new system. Chester, Pa., and Salisbury, Md., both show a 7 to 1 preference for the meters; Harrisburg, Pa., 5 to 1; Upper Darby, Pa., 3 to 1, and Wilmington, Del., 2 to 1.

Opposing forces are pretty evenly divided in Atlantic City, N. J., with advocates leading by approximately 5 to 4. Two towns among those surveyed, Shenandoah, and Marcus Hook, Pa., reject the parking meter idea. Motorists and merchants in Shenandoah oppose the devices 6 to 1, while Marcus Hook showed a 5 to 3 opposition.

Questions asked were:

1. "Now that you have had some experience with parking meters, what is your opinion of them?

2. "Have you changed the opinion which you formerly held?"

Nearly 92 per cent of all persons interviewed, the Club report says, entertained definite views on the subject. Motorists were more decided in their opinions than merchants; 95 per cent of them were able to state their views, while only 83 per cent of the merchants were sure how they felt about the meters. Of those expressing definite opinions, 73 per cent favored parking meters and 27 per cent opposed them.

The Club's study was taken with a view of determining just what the public reaction is in localities where the parking meter experiment has been tried, believing that the subject is one for full and free discussion, with "pros" and "cons" having equal rights to express their opinions.

'Why Peel Potatoes?'

A new and novel business has sprung up in Seattle — a business adaptable to the needs of many with but a small capital. It is the business of supplying peeled potatoes to the housewife.

"Why peel potatoes?" is the slogan. Potato paring machines are inexpensive; and potatoes bought wholesale, pared by machinery, and sold in suitable containers, can be furnished the housewife at a fair price, and still yield a profit to the enterprise. — Robert D. W., Seattle, Wash.

Bishop McClelland Visits Cecil County

On his recent visit to St. Mary's Church North East, the Rt. Rev. Wm. McClelland took as his text, "Follow after those things that make for peace," and emphasized the danger of paying too much attention to critics of those responsible for our national welfare. Said he, "It is generally considered rude to tell anyone he does not know what he is talking about. But under the present circumstances it seems it might be wholesome to do just that. When someone begins to try to bring pressure on those responsible in these dangerous times, lets tell him "you don't know what you are talking about." And then assure responsible leaders that we are trusting them to follow the dictates of their own consciences. On the whole this seems the best way to follow after those things ha make for peace."

The Bishop was greeted by a large and responsive congregation and confirmed a class of five persons: Mrs. Mary Timmons Montgomery, Miss Martha Montgomery, Miss Ellen May Browning, Mr. Clifford Leslie McKinney and Miss Ruth Cantwell.

The Bishop has expressed a desire to visit both Perryville and Chesapeake City before the middle of December. All prsons interested in the matter of confirmation are asked to get in touch with the Rev. L. Irving Insley as soon as possible.

Services at Chesapeake City are held at 6 P. M. each Sunday evening. Services of Holy Communion second Sundays at 9 A. M.

In Perryville Parish House services are held every Sunday evening at 7:30 P. M. Holy Communion first Sunday at 9 A. M.

Methodists Meet At Eldersburg, Maryland

Methodists from throughout Maryland and the District of Columbia will meet at the Strawbridge Home for Boys, Eldersburg, Maryland on Saturday, September 30th. It is the occasion of the annual "Methodist Day" exercises, which will have unusual significance this year with the active participation of a reunited Methodism.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, D. D., LL. D., of Washington, will make the principal address, according to plans announced by the Rev. Dr. Robert L. Wood, Superintendent of the West Baltimore District, who is also chairman of the committee in charge of the program. Bishop Hughes is the respected and highly beloved leader of Methodism in this area; he has been foremost among those who have brought about Methodist union. This will be the first opportunity for him to address a large gathering of his newly enlarged flock, since the Uniting Conference in Kansas City last May. The new Baltimore Conference will be held in First Church, Baltimore on October 5th and 6th.

Singing of many of the old Methodist hymns will feature the exercises on Methodist Day. Justin Lawrie, Minister of Music at the Foundry Methodist Church in Washington, will sing and lead a large chorus choir. Members of the local church choirs are urged to reach the grounds before 1:30 P. M. and sit with this massed choir. A Hammond electric organ will be used again this year to lead the vast audience in the song service.

Bishop Hughes wil speak shortly after 2 o'clock, on the theme, "The Methodists Are One People." A public address system will enable every person present to hear perfectly. The exercises will be held in the beautiful out-door amphitheatre in front of the stone pulpit, which was erected years ago by the men of Mt. Vernon Place Church, Baltimore. It is expected that the attendance this year will reach an all-time high record. Ample parking facilities are provided for as many as may come. In other years many who came from a distance, make an all day picnic with basket lunch or purchase their dinner on the grounds.

Scientists Seek Better Grasses By Breeding

Grass breeding is "catching up" with research on other economically important plant crops, reports M. A. Hein, pasture specialist of the Federal Bureau of Plant Industry. Grass long has been recognized as the cheapest of livestock feeds, but until recently little attention was given to better grass strains through breeding. Department forage specialists cooperating with various State experiment stations have shown that grasses can be improved by breeding as much as field crops.

Recent studies, for instance, show that length of day, light intensities, air and soil temperatures all play an important part in grass growth. How to induce and increase the production of grass seed,, particularly in the Southeast and the Great Plains where many of the more desirable and most promising grasses fail to produce any quantity of viable seed, is another problem that the scientists want to know more about. Why some grasses are more palatable and higher in nutritive value than others also is being studied.

To carry out grass studies as rapidly as possible, the country has been divided into regions where there is a similarity in the problems and consequently in the methods of attack. Adaption studies of large numbers of domestic and foreign grass species are made at nurseries in the various regions. In this preliminary work studies are made of the palatability and the reaction of the introduced grasses to grazing. As far as possible those that fail or show promise in this initial phase of the breeding program are eliminated.

More Quints!

Commentator And Scribner's Merged

Charles S. Payson, owner and publisher of the Commentator Magazine, announced today that Scribner's Magazine, which suspended publication last May, will be combined with the Commentator in one large-sized, class magazine beginning with the November issue, out Octobeer 20th.

Additional departments will be added, as well as first class fiction and serials—the whole presented in a new format which will allow the acceptance of the type of advertising which appeared in Scribner's.

Francis R. Bellamy, Publishing Consultant, formerly Executive Editor of the New Yorker and Editor-Publisher of the old Outlook, who purchased Scribner's Magazine for the Payson Publishing Company, has been appointed Editorial Director and General Manager of the combined magazine.

Lowell Thomas, formerly Editor of The Commentator, will remain as an Advisory Editor. Harrison Smith and Joseph Hilton Smyth of The Saturday Review of Literature will be added in the same capacity.

U. Of Delaware Exercises

With convocation exercises held Monday afternoon in Mitchell Hall the college year was opened at the University of Delaware. While the joint freshman class will probably not be quite as large as last year, it will number 30 or more. It was expected that the total enrollment would exceed that of last year, the largest in the histroy of the university but registration slowed up during the past week. The total freshman enrollment last year was 324 of which 210 was in Delaware College and 114 in the Women's College. Class room work was started on Tuesday of this week.

Dr. William Alfred Eddy, president of Hobart College, Geneva, New York, was the speaker at the convocation exercises which was attended by the entire student body, members of the faculty and visitors, Dr. Walter Hullihen, president of the university, presided and made announcements of changes in the faculty and of proposed activities during the college year. He told of the program planned with financial aid from the WPA for beautifyiing the campus which work has already been started.

While it was known that the freshman enrollment at Delaware College will be slightly in excess of 200, the list of new students had not been announced early this week.

The list of first year girls at the Women's College was announced through the office of Dean Marjory S. Golder some days ago. There are 96 new students at this college of which 89 are freshmen. The other seven are transfers from other colleges.

Of the 89 freshmen at the Wowen's College 32 registered from Wilmington, 17 from rural New Castle County, 7 from Kent and 11 from Sussex with 22 from outside the state. Fifty four have enrolled in the Arts and Science, 19 in Home Economics and 16 in Education Courses.

National Guard To Expand

Major General Milton A. Reckord, Commanding General of the Twenty ninth Division announced this week that in accordance with orders received from the War Department the strength of the Maryland National Guard will be increased by approximately twenty per cent.

General D. John Markey, commanding the First Infantry, and other regimental and brigade commanders conferred in Baltimore Monday with General Reckord, arranging to set up the machinery to take care of the recruit problem involved.

When the additional enlistments have been made, the National Guard will be close to its authorized peacetime strength. It is expected that the additional quotas to the regiments will be completed within a period of thirty days.

Under the present plans, about 200 additional men will be added to the First Infantry, 300 to the Fifth Infantry, and 200 to the 110th Field Artillery, with a small quota being taken into the 104th Conservation Squadron, the flying wing of the Maryland National Guard.

Company officers in the various Maryland towns where companies of the First Infantry are stationed will begin accepting recruits immediately. The exact number of enlistments to be made in each unit will be announced within the next few days.

General Reckord stressed the point that the increase in the National Guard does not imply a preparation for war, but rather a preparation to maintain our peace and neutrality. He added:

"With world conditions as they are today, it would be extremely foolish to be caught unprepared to meet any emergency. Real preparedness is our best assurance for continued peace."
