THE COUNTY CONVENTION.—The delegates from the several districts assembled in County Convention on Tuesday last, and organized by calling William Janvier, Esq., to the chair, and making William A. Vickers, Esq., secretary.

The following gentlemen responded as delegates from the several districts:

First District—G. W. Spencer, Stephen Boyer, R. S. Griffith

Second—William Janvier, John Bosee, Thomas H. Hudson.

Third—Stevenson Constable, George T Williams, William V. Lucas.

Fourth—William A. Vickers, James M. J. Byron, John Loud.

Fifth—Richard Jones, William Stevens, George A. Jessup.

The ticket at the head of our columns was selected after a short conference.

Messrs William A. Vickers, William S. Walker and Jervis Spencer were appointed Delegates to the State Convention to assemble in Baltimore on the seventh of October next.

There was a large expression at the primary meetings on Saturday last, and the result has proved our predictions—the politicians were badly beaten by the people, the masses of the party.

ARREST OF HORSE THIEVES.—For some months past the counties of Kent, Queen Anne's, Cecil and Kent, Del., have been continuously excited by frequent thefts of horses, carriages, and harness. Last week a negro man offered for sale in Philadelphia a horse and carriage for a very small sum, and he was arrested on suspicion of having stolen them. Immediately thereafter he confessed that he and two confederates, J. W. Morris and John L. Harrington, white residents of this county, were the parties who had been committing the depredations aforesaid. Morris was in Philadelphia and immediately arrested. A Philadelphia police detective started for Sassafras, the residence of Harrington, and with constable Eugene Gooding searched Harrington's premises. They found secreted in the hay-loft, taken apart, one carriage, the property of Mr. David Jones, and one new top-buggy, the property of McLeary & Kendal of Wilmington, Del., and some ten sets of harness. Harrington had fled, but was followed and overtaken near the Talbot line, by constable Gooding, and lodged in our jail. The negro, Henry Green, and Morris, were surrendered by the Mayor of Philadelphia and voluntarily accompanied Mr. Gooding to our jail—write having been procured for their arrest here. The facts we learn from Mr. Gooding, who says all the parties freely confess their guilt, all the that they commenced operations some time last Spring. The carriages would be taken apart and secreted in Harrington's stables till such time as they could be readily sold. The horses also would be kept there for some days, and disfigured by burning their hair with some kind of acid. The gang consisted of but these three, and they will doubtless suffer the penalty of the law.

Suicide.

Samuel Smith, residing in Kent county, near Millington, put an end to his existence Monday last by taking five grains of strychnine, sufficient to kill three persons. After it was known he had taken the poison, medical aid was called in, but too late, as he died in a few hours, after suffering excrutiating pain. He gave no reason, so we are informed, for committing the rash deed. He took dinner in the Railroad Hotel on that day, and from some remarks made during a conversation, disappointment in love and pecuniary embarrassment is supposed to be the cause. He was aged about 28 years, unmarried, and resided with a relative, John T. Smith, about 2½ miles from Millington.

Since the above was in type we have received the following from a correspondent:

Mr. Smith called at the drug store of Mr. Matthew Boyer, on Monday, and purchased five grains of strychnine, stating that it was for the purpose of exterminating rats. The clerk, a well-behaved lad, some 17 or 18 years of age, informed Mr Smith that he had a rat exterminator which would answer every purpose. Mr. Smith excused himself from purchasing it, because a member of the family had a few days previously gotten a box or bottle—which fact was known to the clerk—and that it had proven worthless; hence the clerk was induced to sell him the amount demanded. Mr. Smith returned home in the early part of the afternoon, and complained to some members of the family of being sick, and said he would lie down, requesting to be wakened between five and six o'clock. It is supposed he took the poison immediately after repairing to his room. About six o'clock he was discovered in excrutiating pain and convulsions, and inquiry being made by his friends as to the cause, he confessed that he had taken five grains of strychnine—two of which would have been certain death. Dr. Clark, of Millington, was sent for, who administered all the antidotes known to the profession, but of no avail, the dose proving too large to be arrested in its deadly effects. When Dr. Clark entered the room the patient said, "Doctor, I am afraid you are too late," and shortly afterward died in the most excrutiating pain. It is supposed that Mr. Smith mistook altogether the effect of the poison, from the fact of his retiring upon the administration of it, and requesting to be aroused at a certain hour, leading to the belief that he thought he would be put sleep and die unconscious of its effects. It is said he narrated certain circumstances of his life to some parties, which is supposed to be the cause of his destroying himself—Crumptonian.

[COMMUNICATED.]

REES' CORNER, Sept. 28, 1869.

Dear Transcript—All have been busy with Politics of late, judging from the lack of local correspondence in the Kent favorite. But all this has passed away; the final contest is over, "the great, the momentous day" is with the things that were; and still all nature smiles as sweetly forth, as if important candidates had not been defeated; as if no hopes were crushed; no money squandred.

There used to be a Boat, that sailed for Salt River about this time in the year; but that now has been taken from the route, as the office-seekers are so many, that the disappointed could not be accomodated, for their name is Legion.

The Transcript must now redeem its name, and in future, not engross all things by Politics and Business.

Semi-occasionally the News favors us with such a spectacle as a comet biting at its own tale. 'Tis a singular way for this luminary to present itself—the Sharp tale, two weeks ago, and now the nucleus. It started a little North-west of Rees' Corner, and wended its scimillating way towards Edesville, where it hovered over the Bush. And played "Hub" with a certain citizen there. By-the-by, that is a queer citizen, who lives in the woods, and is a woman. Comet struck Citizen hard; but then it left no mark, and but few saw the blow. In his other affairs of the heart he is mistaken; what he took for earnest, was only a little by-play to make the game interesting, and cheer the lookers on the while. I wonder Comet was not too much of a diplomate to be so easily gulled.

Worton's pen I find gives not up all things to Politics, No! The euphonious "Squeeze" devotes a good part of his spare time to that often more deceptious thing called Love.

A long time ago there was [illegible] unknown quantity, represented [illegible] effusions were spicy, sarcastic and [illegible] giving delights to those who such [illegible] her hand, and pleasing other, is a [illegible] times deemed her man, and ye happy [illegible] the zest with which she wrote, [illegible] she now silent? No matter to [illegible] But we remember once a certain [illegible] turning from his fatherland, to [illegible] the valleys of Virginia [illegible] The love of woman had taught him

"There's many a slip Twix't the cup and the lip,"

and holding the handof the noble boy in the metropolis of our State, we could but look on him and say

"Friend of my heart this goblet sip,
'Twill chase the parting tear,
'Tis not so sweet as woman's lip,
Tut Oh! 'tis more sincere."

Bilious[illegible]ther has been hot and sultry!—Dame Natu[illegible] Political the climate. Older crops, and [illegible] this year given us future in my short [illegible] health, than ever before she is bending [illegible] of life. But up vegetation, and try [illegible] gies to kill People of the Eastern Shore [illegible] of man. Bilious climate, and yet for all [illegible] through thick and thin [illegible] Wednesday place on the nation's roll, and justly if perseverence and pluck can insure success. Who can tell if this answer be not prophetic? And why may not that be a correct answer some day not far distant.—'Tis true the place is now Grant-ed, but Bennett of the Herald may yet see our "funny little man" funny enough to be President of this funny country, that found it costly fun to laugh at Lincoln's jokes.

Politics ran high here last week, candidates were plenty and all prominent, and all working like bees, and in the gorgeous language of the Royal Oak Poet

"Politics are not in statute quo,
While oyster treats, are all the go."

Treats down in this district have been going pretty fast, but the oysters faster—Politics seemed to make people hungry, for I went to two treats, and the Bi-valves had each time disappeared before I got there. But on Friday last, the Oystermen gave a treat, and a nice one it was too, excelling anything of the season in the quality and quantity, more than 50 bushels of splendid oysters were left behind after all the great crowd were satisfied, and a Grey's Inn Creek crowd, know how to get outside of such delicacies, I don't know whether to attribute it to the better quality of liquor, or to the Good Templars, for plenty of both were on the ground, but there was little intoxication at the meeting.

Nothing yet has been said of the Tournament held on the farm of Capt. Geo. H. Wilson, near Grey's Inn some three weeks since. It was a fine affair although confined to the neighborhood. The reason it was so select, was to test the horsemanship of the young men without previous practice. There certainly was good riding on that occasion, perhaps the better the contest as no one knew how he stood in comparison with his neighbor. It was a home affair, the more enjoyed for that reason, gotten up for the benefit of a beautiful daughter of Kent, before whom all felt eager to display their gallantry.—The Queen was grace ully crowned, and looked every inch a queen, a fitting shrine for knightly valor to kneel at, and do homage to.

The Peach crop is over, the bustle and confusion consequent upon the gathering, hauling and selling, has died away, as all things in life must. Peaches did not bring a great price all the season, but we find that there is considerably more money afloat than if the crop had been a failure. "Blessed are they who expect little, &c." Our farmers expect too much from the crop of fruit, and wish to get rich too soon. Even some who have tried California are better gratified from peaches than they were in that land of gold and earthquakes.

The Good Templars are going ahead in this neighborhood, a great many persons, and some of them hard cases, have joined in this part of the county. They may do a great deal of good if they keep to one track.

N B—'Tis distressingly healthy about here and we have four Doctors just above the Corner, almost within call of each other.

'It wont try ones patience much to wait until he can see a Doctor.

LITTLE WILL.

Walk When You Begin.

When Chief Justice Oliver Ell-worth commenced the practice of law, he lived in Bloomfield; and as his pecuniary means were not large, he was accustomed to come from his office on foot. There was at the time a dashing merchant in the city—Mr. H., who rode in a showy vehicle drawn by a pair of showy horses; and as he often rode to Bloomfield, he often met Mr. E. Meeting him one morning he reined up his team, and saluted him with "Good morning, Mr. Elsworth, what are you walking for? why don't you ride?"

"Because," was the reply, "I have found that persons must walk at some period of their lives, and I choose to walk when I begin."

It would be well if all who are setting out in life were of this opinion; but they are not. Hence such numbers, determined to ride when they are young, are forced to walk when they are old.

A few years having elapsed, Mr. H. failed in business and was obliged to go afoot; while Mr. E., ascending from small beginnings, became Minister Plenipotentiary to France, and rode in his coach.—Walk when you begin.

The Farm is divided into five fields, four of which are watered by a stream running through them, and the whole enclosed by a new Chestnut Rail and Board Fence. The soil is good and well adapted to cereals; 2100 bushels of lime have been put on the land during the last four years. There is not an acre of waste land on the farm. There is on the farm a
