A tom cat sat on a backyard fence,
With an aching heart and soul intense,
Rigged out in a style in every sense
Immense.

He sat alone in his faultless attire,
And his bosom burned with a sacred fire,
As he watched for his love, his only desire—
Maria.

He was musing upon his lonely lot,
And he said to himself, 'She cometh not,
What a terrible heartache I have got—
Great Scott!

'How terribly lonesome I feel! How queer
To be sitting alone and nobody near—
Oh, how much I wish Maria was here—
My dear!

'The thought of it fills me with horrible doubt—
I should smile, I should blush, I should wail, I should shout,
Just suppose some fellow had cut me out—
Me out!

'Ah! there she comes as soft as a rat,'
But alas, he had mistaken the soft pit a pat,
His Maria was only a brother tom cat—
How's that!

Thought Tom No. 1 of Tom No. 2,
But No. 2 bounced him without ado,
And suddenly both departed from view—

JOHN RANDOLPH'S LETTER TO A BOY.

BY REV. EDWARD S. GREGORY.

From Golden Days.

The readers of Golden Days do not need to be told that John Randolph, of Roanoke, was one of the greatest orators Virginia or the Union ever produced. He was as eccentric as he was brilliant, and more singular anecdotes are told of him than of any of our public men.

He generally attached to his signature the words "or Roanoke," which, by the way, was not the county of that name in Virginia, but the designation of his country-seat in Charlotte county.

The following is a literal copy of one of Mr. Randolph's letters, written to his nephew, when the latter was pursuing his studies in England, as was the custom among the wealthier class of Americans, and especially those of Virginia, long after the war of Independence.

The references in the following letter to the trial of Aaron Burr are very lifelike and vivid, especially when it is considered that Mr. Randolph was foreman of the grand jury by which the indictment against Burr was found.

The editor of Golden Days can vouch for the genuineness of the letter—which has never before seen the light—as he has the original in possession, in the quaint but very legible handwriting of the statesman.

"Bizarre," from which the letter is dated, was the name of a country-seat of the Randolphs in Prince Edward county.

Here is the letter, and it is well worth the reading.

"BIZARRE, Sept. 4th, 1807.

"MY DEAR BOY: I have just received your very welcome letter of the 25th of May, under cover of your good friend, Mr. Rennolds. I am glad to hear that you lie on a mattress and sleep without curtains, and that your food is plain and simple. All my fear is that you do not take exercise enough. Cricket is a fine manly game. Do you ever play at it? Do you ever swim or skate? Since they have been confined at school in Richmond, your brother and Theodore look like plants raised in the shade, or in a green-house, in comparison of what they used to be, and I am afraid that you have lost your sun-burnt face and got a sallow hue in exchange. I heard from Richmond to-day. The boys are well; but your mother has a sore throat; however, Dr. Robinson says she will soon be well again. Your Uncle Beverley is here, attending to the District Court. We have the pleasure of a great deal of his company. He is going to be married, and will live at Roanoke. I saw your Uncle Henry when I was in Richmond in attendance on the grand jury of the [illegible]eral Court, where I was detained by Colonel [illegible]ial more than a month.

[illegible]ere ten days examining the witnesses [illegible] whom we had to wait, besides, and [illegible] of indictment of high treason against [illegible]rr, Mr. Dayton, Mr. Smith, of the [illegible]he United States, another Mr. Smith, [illegible]ain Davis Floyd. I have just heard [illegible]urr is acquitted.

[illegible]ody here desires to be remembered [illegible]ely to you, particularly Daddy Essex, [illegible] wants to see you very much.

[illegible] been a very wet year. About three [illegible] the dam of Mr. Martin Smith's pond [illegible]ll his fine fish which he had collect[illegible]h trouble and expense from distant [illegible]e escaped into the river. They [illegible]y here, because Little Buffalo, on [illegible]mith's dam stood, empties into [illegible] through our land; so that there [illegible]lishing. Amongst his collection [illegible]hern chubb, not like the English [illegible] great many silver perch. The first [illegible]t near one hundred miles by land [illegible] stock Mr. Smith's pond, and the [illegible] great distance. I caught the largest [illegible]en seen of these in our river. It was [illegible]ches long, and weighed two and a [illegible]s. But the chubb is frequently caught [illegible] five pounds' weight.

[illegible] old friend Carlo is quite well, and as [illegible] favorite as ever. In a fortnight or three [illegible], I shall take the field with him against [illegible] partridges. Partridge-shooting here is lat[illegible] than in England, and our partridges are much smaller than theirs, not being half as large. But then, everybody here who pleases may shoot. I wonder that no attempt has been made to introduce the English pheasant or hare or partridge, or the red-legged partridge of France, which is better, into Virginia. When you return, I hope you will endeavor to procure them, and bring them with you.

"God bless you, my boy! Make my best respects to Mrs. Braidwood, and thank her for her kind letter to your dear mother. I am your truly affectionate uncle and friend,

"JOHN RANDOLPH.

"John S. G. Randolph."

The boy to whom this letter was addressed—known as St. George Randolph—on his return to this country, was suddenly deprived of the senses of hearing and speech, and so lost all the advantages of his thorough training.

One peculiarity of the original copy of the above is that the title "Mr." is always written with a small initial "m," with a circumflex over it, to indicate that it is an abbreviation.

A VERY remarkable horse is owned by a gentleman who lives on North Point, near Baltimore, Md. This horse, which is the pet of all the boys in the neighborhood, is remarkable not for his speed, but for his ability as a swimmer. He was owned, when a colt, on Chincoteague (pronounced 'Jink-a-tig') Island, and there learned to breast the billows of the Atlantic. His first master taught him to swim from the island to the shore and back home again. At North Point, last summer, this swimming horse swam from the light-house on West North Point to Seven-foot-Knoll and back, the distance being fourteen miles. But the most daring feat of the wonderful animal was as follows: He trotted down to the Chesapeake, near his master's farm, and struck out across the bay. He swam easily, the water being smooth, and seemed to take delight in breaking the light ripples into foam. His long mane waved above his head in the breeze at first, but soon became dashed with spray, and then floated around his neck. His master and a strong oarsman pursued him in a boat several miles out into the bay. The pursuers could keep near the swimming horse, but they did not press him too closely, lest he should become exhausted if driven hard. He swam on and on, until the oarsmen themselves were tired, and at last led them ashore at North Point, after a swim of nineteen miles.

A great general used to tell his friends an anecdote of his early life.

'I once,' said he, 'was forced to take shelter from my enemies in a ruined building, where I sat alone for many hours. Trying to divert my mind from my misfortunes, I fixed my eyes on an ant that was carrying a grain of wheat bigger than itself up a high wall. I counted the efforts it made to accomplish its object. The grain of wheat fell to the ground sixty-nine times; but the little insect persevered, and the seventieth time it succeeded, and reached the top of the wall. This sight gave me courage at that time, when I greatly needed it, and I never forgot the lesson it taught me.'

And this is a lesson we all need to learn as we go on with the "journey of life." And if we only have the confidence, the courage, and the perseverance, of which we have now spoken, as we go on with the "journey of life," our struggle will be sure to end in success. Let us all be sure to get these three things, and then it will be well with us.—Southern Churchman.

A pleasing anecdote is told of Secretary Teller and Senator Beck, who worked their way up from poverty and obscurity to high places in the nation's service.

Mr. Beck, now of Kentucky, came to this country a poor Scotch boy, and worked on the farm in Livingston county, New York, that Mr. Teller, then a poor boy also, worked upon.

One day last winter, they met on the floor of the United States Senate for the first time for many years.

'Well, Henry,' said Mr. Beck, 'when we used to drive old Brown's oxen, we never expected to meet in the Capitol of Washington.'

'No, James, replied Mr. Teller, 'we didn't know there was such a place.'

Here is one of Johnnie's compositions: 'One time a frog and hop-tode they met, and the frog sassed the hop-tode 'cos it was clumsy, but the tode it said, 'If you will come here on this flat stone, whare we can start even, I'll beat you jumpin' hi' best 2 out of 3.' So they done it, and the first time the tode it only jest cleared the stone, but the frog it went up so high that it hurt itself comin' down, and cudn't jump no more at all, and the hop-tode beat it the other 2 times.'

A MISFIT FIT.

A party of three young men from the agricultural districts entered a second-hand clothing store on Michigan avenue the other morning, and one of them finally bought a second-hand coat. He was solemnly assured that it was a fit that Shakespeare would have been proud of, and that it increased his beauty 200 per cent., and he went away perfectly satisfied. In about an hour, however, he returned and said:

'Say, this coat isn't a fit, after all.'

'Vhat ails dot goat now, eh?'

'Well, it's too short in the back, for one thing.'

'Let me look. Too short, eh? Um. My frendt who tell you so?'

'Both the boys.'

'And vhase dose poys tailors?'

'No.'

'Do they get oudt some fashion-plates from Paris?'

'No.'

'Vhell, how is it dose poys know so much? Dot goat allows for you to sthand oop und bend oafer. It allows for your back to shorten oop or lengthen oudt.'

'But the sleeves are too short.'

'Let me see. Only last night my wife sit up all night to cut off dose sleeves und make 'em in style, und now you vhant a sleeve like Noah wore in de ark! Vhell, nopody would think dot of you.'

'I can't hardly bend my arms,' continued the buyer.

'Vhell, I sold you dot goat fur Sunday. You doan't chop wood on Sundays, I hope? Vhen you desire to bend your arms put on some older goat.'

'I'm not at all satisfied with it, no matter what you say.'

'Vhell, I can't help dot. After you buy dot goat you fall down or shump around or drink beer und get your body all out of shape und den come pack und complain. My frendt, dot goat vhas for a shentleman. Vhen you wear it you must be a shentleman.'

'I paid $8 for it, and I'll take $4.'

'No.'

'Young man, let me explain. I vhas a partner mit my wife. She pays und I sell. She is now in Chicago. Take it home und wait until you shrink a leedle und you back shortens again, und you vhill den put on dat goat und set all der gals crazy und make all der young men shealous. Take my advice. I vhas in der clothing pesness forty years, und I know der cloth in dot goat. It vhants a good thunder-shower und two games of base ball to make it fit you like a handle to a goffee-mill!'—Free Press.

THE BAD BOY AGAIN.

'Ha! ha! Now I have got you,' said the grocery man to the bad boy the other morning as he came in and jumped upon the counter and tied the end of a ball of twine to the tail of a dog, and 'sicked' the dog on another dog that was following, causing the twine to pay out until the whole ball was scattered along the block. 'Condemn you, I've a notion to choke the liver out of you! Who tied that twine to the dog's tail?'

The boy choked up with emotion and the tears came into his eyes, and he said he didn't know anything about the twine or the dog. He said he noticed the dog come in and wag his tail around the twine, but he supposed the dog was a friend of the family, and did not disturb him. 'Everybody lays everything that is done to me,' said the boy as he put his handkerchief to his nose, 'and they will be sorry for it when I die. I have a good notion to poison myself by eating some of your glucose sugar.'

'Yes; and you do about everything that is mean. The other day a lady came in and told me to send up to her house some of my country sausage, done up in muslin bags, and while she was examining it she noticed something hard inside the bags, and asked me what it was, and opened it, and I hope to die if there wasn't a little brass padlock and a piece of red morocco dog collar imbedded in the sausage. Now, how do you suppose that got in there? and the grocery man looked savage.

The boy looked interested, and put on an expression as though in deep thought, and finally said: 'I suppose the farmer that put up the sausage did not strain the dog meat. Sausage meat ought to be strained.'

The grocery man pulled in about half a block of twine, after the dog had run against a fence and broke it, and told the boy he knew perfectly well how the brass padlock came to be in the sausage, but thinking it was safer to have the good-will of the boy than the ill-will, he offered him a handful of prunes.

'No,' says the boy, 'I have sworn off on moldy prunes. I am no kindergarten any more. For years I have eaten rotten peaches around this store, and everything you couldn't sell, but I have turned over a new leaf now, and after this nothing is too good for me.—Peck's Sun.

A Correspondent

From the far away State of Colorado, writes: "An old Indian at this agency remarked when he tasted New Life, the Great Cough Remedy, for the first time 'Ugh! big medicine!' After it had cured him of asthma he said: 'Ugh! heap much big medicine!' This is the general verdict. Its action in throat and lung troubles, is little short of marvelous.

A hard-hearted landlord approached his tenant and demanded the rent, and informed him that, unless it was paid him instantly, he would throw him out.

'Vat?' said the tenant.

'Unless you pay me at once, I will throw you out,' said the landlord.

'Vell,' said the tenant, 'I vill pay der day pe-hind yesterday.'

'That won't do, sir. You must pay now or I will take the necessary steps.'

'Oh! vell,' said the tenant, 'go und take der steps, und der front door ot der necessary steps in der rear of you vants. Dot's all right.'—Anon.

Deservedly Popular.

Unless it had great merit Parker's Ginger Tonic could not be so popular. Its sale has spread remarkably everywhere, because invalids find it gives them new life and vigor when other medicines fail entirely.—Ohio Farmer.—Adv.

A peasant having saved up a sum of money by hard work and peeling his potatoes close, went to the nearest village and invested in an accordion. On his way home he began playing the air of 'My Grandfather's Clock,' but scarcely had the echoes reached the forest when out came a chopper, who cried out:

'Man! Man! for Heaven's sake hang up on that! You will kill us all with your Racket!'

'Can't help that,' replied the Peasant, as he pulled away harder than ever. 'If what tickles me all over is Death to you that is not my look-out. I will now give you 'The Empty Cradle,' with variations.'

A Lady Cured of Rheumatism.

Baltimore, Md., May 7, 1880. My health was much shattered by Rheumatism when I commenced taking Brown's Iron Bitters, and I scarcely had strength enough to attend to my daily household duties. I am now using the third bottle and I am regaining strength daily, and I cheerfully recommend it to all. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Mrs. MARY E. BRASHEAR, 175 Prestman St.

Kidney Disease Cured.

Christiansburg, Va., 1881. Suffering from kidney disease, from which I could get no relief, I tried Brown's Iron Bitters, which cured me completely. A child of mine, recovering from scarlet fever, had no appetite and did not seem to be able to eat at all. I gave him Iron Bitters with the happiest results. J. KYLE MONTAGUE.

Heart Disease.

Vine St., Harrisburg, Pa. Dec. 2, 1881. After trying different physicians and many remedies for palpitation of the heart without receiving any benefit, I was advised to try Brown's Iron Bitters. I have used two bottles and never found anything that gave me so much relief. Mrs. JENNIE HESS.

For the peculiar troubles to which ladies are subject, BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is invaluable. Try it.

—, Kansas, June 26th, 1882. HARRIS REMEDY CO.—Gents—I used the Pastilles as directed and they completely cured me. In about one week from the time I commenced using them I began to sleep well and I continued to use all the box with constant improvement and since that time (Oct. 1881) I have felt like a new man. I truly hope that many of the sufferers will find out that you have a specific for nervous weakness and be cured by the same. Respectfully Yours, ——

P. S.—You will not publish my name but persons visiting you may be referred to me and I will answer them.

To every young, middle age or old man troubled with nervous or physical debility or impotence sealed circular is sent free. Send full address on postal card to HARRIS REMEDY CO. St. Louis, Mo. We want your address. You need our remedy. Send and be convinced of this.
