The 'Cross-the-Bay Railroad Once More.

Down-the-Peninsula papers are talking Eastern Shore Railroad again—the same old Eastern Shore Railroad that runs from Ocean City to some point in Talbot, and has to be transported across the bay. A party of Baltimoreans recently went down and looked over the situation. The visiting party was banqueted, &c., &c., and expressed itself as highly pleased with the outlook. The fact that the whole party came near being called off by a stroke of lightning while on the tour of inspection, might possibly be a Providential hint. Providence has, at odd times, killed off more promising undertakings than this proposed Eastern Shore Railroad. It is said that the proposed road will cost $750,000. To raise this sum Baltimore city is asked to guarantee bonds to the extent of $500,000, and the counties directly interested the other $250,000. In other words, the city and the counties are to be asked to build this road and to take chances of its proving a paying investment.

The Transcript has more than once urged that the railroad which the Eastern Shore just now specially needs is a line running from Elkton down through the counties. That such a road will be built within the next four or five years, is more than likely, —indeed, circumstances point very strongly to the belief that such a road is under consideration by the B. & O. Eastern Maryland already has intimate water connections with Baltimore city. We believe there is not a county on the Shore that has not such daily connection. What the Eastern Shore needs is a railroad connection that will open to it the markets east, west, north and south for its peaches and other products. The reason why Baltimore is losing a large part of the Eastern Shore grain trade is not because of a lack of facilities for reaching the Baltimore markets. It is because Philadelphia grain dealers send agents down the Peninsula, who buy and pay cash for grain on delivery at the stations. The grain classification in Baltimore is a thing of uncertainty. No farmer can tell when he ships what his grain will bring. But with a trunk line Peninsula railroad, and local buyers, Baltimore could be upon an equal footing with Philadelphia for the Peninsula grain trade. She could also get as much of our peaches and other fruits as she can consume, and that is all she should ask.

—Senator Jackson of Wicomico will undoubtedly go to the State convention with a good lively influential Eastern Shore delegation. In the lower part of the Peninsula, he is especially strong, and in Kent he has warm friends who urge his claims. Mr. Jackson, from the present outlook is just as likely to be struck by gubernatorial lightning as any other good man.

Peach Talk.

We gather the following peach talk from our exchanges. Representing as they do various sections of peach territory, some general idea may be gathered from their reports concerning the peach outlook, taking the Peninsula over.

From the Delawarean.

There can be no doubt now that the peach crop in many sections of this State and Peninsula is injured to such an extent that there will be no more than one-half a crop. Along the bay shore the injury is so great that there can not be exceeding a-fourth of a crop, while in other sections the crop has not been so seriously injured, yet it is injured and the peaches are dropping in an unprecedented manner. The late frosts hurt the peaches and the east winds that have prevailed for the past week have finished the work. While here and there below Dover there is an orchard not seriously hurt, we are safe in saying that in the great majority of them there will not be more than half a crop. We also learn that in some parts of Maryland the crop promises to be very short.

From the Wilmington Every Evening.

Notwithstanding some unfavorable reports the coming peach crop promises to be a heavy one. If other indications were lacking, the continued interest that growers are taking in preparations for marketing the fruit would be a sufficient earnest of this. So many men scattered over several counties cannot be brought to act together so steadily except in the very face of an emergency requiring them to take the time, at the cost of much personal inconvenience, to give the subject in hand serious and active attention. One of the most practical looking outcomes of the recent convention in Dover is the prospective growth of the fruit exchange system. Our Dover correspondent has noted the receipt of applications for the establishment of branches of the exchange at Laurel, Milford, Clayton, Felton and Ridgely.

From the Dover Sentinel.

There seems to be three sizes of young peaches, the largest of which are growing and will undoubtedly remain on the trees; but whether there will be enough of these to make a fair crop is what puzzles the closest observer. Of the two other sizes the smaller ones will most assuredly drop, and it is feared the greater portion of the larger size will do likewise. This condition of things does not seem to differ very much from the canal to Delmar. It is universal all through the State and in Maryland. What caused it? Some attribute it to the frost in April, while others say the heavy fog and prevailing east winds. The peaches in the necks along the water courses are injured very badly and some orchards will not have a-fourth of a crop, while others are comparatively bare of fruit now. This is attributed to fogs and east winds, the peaches rotting in the caps. Some of the young wood looks as though a fire had singed it, and in many orchards the trees are shedding their leaves. In the central portion of the county, about Woodside, the trees are said to be attacked by a fly at the roots something similar to the Hessian fly in wheat, and the trees are dying from the effects of the attacks. That there will be a large number of peaches is sure, but the immense crop that was anticipated on the Peninsula a month ago cannot be realized.

From the Denton Journal.

Many orchardists in Caroline county say the crop is badly hurt, and that the prospect for a good yield has been greatly diminished within the past few weeks. The yellow varieties will be the poorest bearers this year.

From the Milford News.

The annual cry has been heard this week that the peach crop is ruined. There is just enough of truth in the statement to give imaginatives and pessimists a foundation for their fears. It is true that the trees are shedding about half of their fruit, in many orchards, but one-half of the remainder must also go. It seems very strange that men who have grown peaches for many years should raise the cry that peaches are all falling off, when, in fact, nature is only dropping from the branches what the trees cannot possibly mature. While it is true that about nine out of ten who complain are only frightened needlessly, it is yet true that some orchards have been injured by frost, some by hail, some by dropping too much of their fruit and some from punctured twigs, yet from all the facts and fancies which we gather from our exchanges and from individual reports, there need be no apprehension that the crop will be short this year, but rather that it will be too large and too general to get good prices.

From Communications to Baltimore Sun.

From Caroline county:—GREENSBORO', Md, May 29.—The farmers and fruit-growers in this portion of Caroline county are greatly excited over the discovery of a wholesale invasion of the peach orchards by a small bug known as the rose bug, which is destroying the young peaches. A. B. Roe, one of our largest growers, who examined his orchards yesterday, says millions of them are sweeping the orchard. Wm. Massey says they are gutting his peaches to atoms, and are also on his wheat, but as yet he can see no damage done to the wheat. Other farmers are making similar statements.

From Calvert county:—Ex-Senator Jonn Thomas Bond reports that nearly the entire peach crop of Calvert and adjacent counties has been destroyed by the late frosts of last April. He says the trees generally look unhealthy, and he does not expect to get a hundred boxes from 6,000 trees. This is the proportion of expected yield throughout the county and the losses will be heavy.

GENERAL NEWS NOTES.

The Empress of Japan proposes to follow an illustrious example and "come to America."

Mr. O'Brien is about 5 feet 10 inches in height, spare in build, with dark-brown hair and sparse beard of a lighter shade. His eyes are blue and sunken. He seemed to be laboring under some physical ailment. —Albany (N. Y.) Journal.

The gay Bostonians entertained Queen Kapiolani to the extent of $25,000, and now some of the newspapers are making a fuss about it. What chiefly galls the scribes is that 200 gallons of liquor were consumed at an entertainment where there were but 100 favored guests.

Some people have a way of talking as if they know everything and could manage everything so well if everybody else would get out of their way and let them direct it all. As you look upon them you wonder how the Lord got on without them before they came and how he will get on without them when they go.—Richmond (Va.) Religious Herald.

General Benjamin F. Butler, it appears, still listens to the whisperings of political ambition, notwithstanding the rude rebuff that he received in 1884. It will doubtless be gratifying to the Democrats of the country to have the assurance that the General is "the same old Democrat;" that is to say, the same old Democrat he was in 1884.

The news from Chicago is discouraging. It seems likely that all building trades will be drawn into the strikes, and the army of the idle is swelled by the shutting down of the rolling mill of the Union Steel Company. The works have stopped on account of the deficient supply of coke caused by the Pennsylvania strike. St. Paul, Boston, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and points in Wisconsin and Michigan, are drawing bricklayers from Chicago, thus relieving the situation to some extent.

"The Prohibitionists' Political Hand-Book" is impartial in its denunciations of opponents. It spares neither Republicans nor Democrats. Ira Davenport and Sheridan Shook in New York, Congressman Townsend, Messrs. Schuebert and Englehardt, nominees for Commissioners of Cook county, and Mr. Cox, candidate for County Clerk of Hamilton, both the California Senators, R. C. Keller, of Pennsylvania, and Arthur Bingham of Alabama are among the Republicans who are blacklisted as friend of whiskey rule.

THE PRESIDENT'S VACATION.

Poor Sport on Saturday, and a Quiet Rest at the Hotel Yesterday.

PROSPECT HOUSE, N. Y., May 29.—The President on Satuday had a day of the most dismal weather. He made his first fishing excursion, but his usual good luck did not attend him. He came over from his cabin soon after 8 o'clock in the morning with Mrs. Cleveland, each wearing a suit of corduroy. The President's short sack coat over a gray flannel shirt gave him a very sportsmanlike appearance. Mrs. Cleveland's costume was a close-fitting one, very becoming and complete with a sailor hat. Colonel and Mrs. Lamont joined the President and his wife at breakfast, which was eaten in the public dining room at the Saranac Inn. At 11 o'clock Dave Cronk, the guide, got the President's new forty-five pound pine boat, built by him for the President's use, and the two went off down the lake. Colonel Lamont, also accompanied by a guide, followed in another boat. Both boats returned three hours later. The president and his secretary found the wind unfavorable, and did not try very hard to catch anything. At all events, they did not get any fish. Another trip on the lake was made in the afternoon with no better results.

There was a brilliant sunset, with prospects of fine weather to-day, and the weather came according to promise. The President's party breakfasted at 10 o'clock, the President and his secretary appearing in the camping costumes they wore on Saturday. Mrs. Cleveland wore a tailor-made suit of black and a cardinal felt hat, about which a quantity of white mull was twisted. Mrs. Lamont's dress was a close-fitting one of gray, and she wore a gray felt hat with a blue band. The President strolled about the hotel, chatted with the guests and rested quietly at his cottage until 2 o'clock, when he and his party joined the other guests in the general dining room. There were no excursions or fishing expeditions to-day. The ladies went to the little chapel not far from the hotel, and in the absence of a clergyman held a little singing service for an hour. The President expects to have some good sport to-morrow.

The South and the Tariff.

Wilmington (N. C.) Star.

Nothing is farther from the truth than the confident assumption, repeated with stereotyped sameness, that the South is rapidly turning to the high tariff theory. It is true that in some sections this is so. Louisiana wishes a tax on sugar, Alabamians living at a few mining centres are advocating a barbed wire fence, fondly believing that such an instrument of cruelty is essential to make them rich, and in the very teeth of the fact that they can make iron cheaper than Pennsylvania or than English iron can be imported. But let it be remembered that the South was never a unit on the tariff. There was an almost equal division in sentiment prior to the war, the low tariff men preponderating to some extent. There are not one-tenth as many protection Democrats in the South to-day (including under this name all who affiliate with the Democracy at present) as there were in 1860. And yet Randall and his fuglemen, North and South, talk of the rapid growth of protection in the South. There is no doubt of it that the Democratic party in the South to-day is full nine-tenths in favor of a speedy reduction of the dangerous surplus, the general lowering of taxation, the most economical administration of the Federal and State Governments without trickery or rings, and a repeal or great reduction of the tax on the common, every-day necessaries of life. If Randall does not know that much then he is supreme in his ignorance.

ALL THAT VALUABLE FARM

312 ACRES OF LAND,

MORE OR LESS.

This has been well-known for many years as one of the finest tracts of land and most desirable residences in the county, and is now in a high state of cultivation, and the improvements are in excellent condition.

The Dwelling

This house is built in the most substantial manner—the partition walls being of brick, and the arrangement throughout being thoroughly convenient. There is a large cellar running the whole length of the building, and fine pump of water at the kitchen door. The house stands in a large yard, surrounded with fine shade trees, and has a large lawn running to the public road.

There is an unusually large and well-arranged vegetable garden and flower garden in the rear of the house running back to a Fine Orchard.

All the enclosures are substantial and neat and there are many attractions about the place. There is a comfortable Tenant House conveniently located, not far from the dwelling, and all conveniences, such as Meat-House, Ice-House, Poultry Yard and House, &c.

The Barn is unusually large and substantial and in good order. The first story is of stone, containing stalls and feed-room for a large number of horses and other stock. The superstructure is frame with ample room for grain and hay. Adjoining this there are other Stables and Sheds for Stock, also a pump of good water in the barnyard.

of land, more or less. This has long been known as one of the most productive pieces of land in Kent county, and is now in a high state of cultivation and under excellent fencing.

The Buildings are only ordinary.

This farm is but 1½ miles from Shallcross' Landing, where is a daily steamer to and from Baltimore, and about the same distance from Black's Station on the Balto. & Del. Bay Railroad. It has every advantage of soil, location, proximity to rail and water carriage, and the whole front is available for building lots as the village extends. This is a rare chance for a home and investment for persons of limited means.

CHAMPION

HARVESTING MACHINES

We invite inspection by those in need of

for the season of 1887.

WE MAKE FOR OUR MACHINES THE FOLLOWING CLAIMS:

1st.—That they are leaders in all valuable improvements.

2d.—That our machines are better built, we use better material and will outwear, stand heavier work than any machine on the market and run as light as the lightest.

3d.—Some points to consider: We were the first to use moleable instead of cast iron others claimed no good. We next lowered our machine by reducing our driving-wheel. They all cried horse-killer. We next made main frame Solid Steel, they claimed wood was better. We now have our Folding-bar Binder, they stand at bay trying to decide how to follow us in this as in the other improvements.

4th.—We have over 200 Machines now in use throughout Kent county, and all of them are settled for.

We invite the Farmers of the 1st and 2d districts to call upon J. W. JACOBY, of Galena, SHAFER & MEDDERS, of Kennedyville, and G. W. ROEDER, of Still Pond, who will be glad to supply their
