Why Parker Is Top 7th GOP Candidate

By MAX JOHNSON

Facts involve why Peter Parker, people's counsel on the Maryland Public Service Commission, is seen as front-running GOP candidate with integrated party organizational support — though there is a black candidate in the seven-man race Earl Koger.

Black Republican officials helped to pick Mr. Parker — and they think the choice was the best for their party and the district.

The decision-making group included, in addition to Mr. Carl Adair, black G.O.P. District chairman, such persons as John Fullon, George Holley, Thomas Hickin, John Thompson, Mrs. Audrey Taylor, Elmer O. Harris, Edward Prettyman, Samuel Barber, and Archie M. Jones—all ward executives.

Mr. Jones, an insurance executive, is Treasurer of the Republican State Central Committee of Maryland— and the only black person in such a post in the two major parties throughout the country.

Two days before the deadline filing date they decided on Mr. Parker—whom they knew since his earlier days as president of the city's Board of Supervisors of Elections.

"Well," Mr. Jones later explained to this writer, "that was the best candidate and more sensitive to the needs of the communities in the 7th District.

"After considerable discussions with Mr. Parker, we became even more certain and we made the choice.

"We are supporting him 100 per cent, because we still feel that way."

The city area 7th District GOP officials want to win during what they consider this an opportune period, and they feel they have the strongest candidate in Mr. Parker.

They see the Parker campaign under the slogan "People Power", more geared to the district— and needs of the district.
