HOUSE KEEPERS' HELP.

All About Salads—Recipes Worth Keeping.

MAYONNAISE DRESSING.—Put the uncooked yelks of two eggs in a clean, cold soup dish, stand on the ice for fifteen minutes. Place the oil also on the ice. When both are perfectly cold add to the yelks a half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne, and, if you like, a half teaspoonful of mustard. Work these well together, and then add drop by drop, a half-pint or more of good olive oil. You must stir rapidly while adding the oil. Do not reverse the motion or it may curdle. After adding one gill of oil, alternate occasionally with a few drops of lemon juice or vinegar. The more oil you use the thicker the dressing. If it becomes too thick add about a half teaspoonful of vinegar. More or less oil may be added, according to the quantity of dressing wanted. With care a quart bottle of oil may be stirred into the yelks of two eggs, alternating with a few drops of vinegar or lemon juice, after adding the first gill of oil. In case the dressing should curdle, i. e., the oil and egg separate, which makes the dressing oily and liquid, begin anew at once with the yelks of two eggs on another plate, and after stirring them well, add by teaspoonfuls the curdled mayonnaise, stirring rapidly and steadily as before, then finish by adding more oil as directed. This dressing, if covered tightly in a jar or tumbler, will keep in a cold place three or four days. It may be varied and improved by adding plain or tarragon vinegar, whipped cream, a half teaspoonful of powdered corlander seed, cervil or onion juice.

CAULIFLOWER SALAD.—One medium sized head of cauliflower, half pint of mayonnaise. Boil the cauliflower as directed; throw into cold water until wanted; then pick it apart carefully, dry with a soft napkin, put in the dish, pour over the mayonnaise, let it stand fifteen minutes and then serve.

CUCUMBER SALAD.—Two young cucumbers, half teaspoonful of salt, quarter teaspoonful of black pepper, four tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Pare and slice the cucumbers very thin, soak them in cold water one hour, then drain and dry. Put them in the salad bowl, sprinkle them with the salt and pepper, and pour over the vinegar. Serve immediately.

SALAD FOR STRING BEANS.—Trim one pint of very young beans, put them in a sauce-pan, cover with boiling water, add a teaspoonful of salt and boil thirty minutes. When done drain and throw them into cold water until very cold; then dry them with a soft towel, cut each bean in four pieces lengthwise, arrange them on a salad dish, cover them with French dressing, let stand one hour and serve.

EGG SALAD.—Boil six eggs fifteen minutes; while they are boiling make a French dressing and add to it one tablespoonful of tarragon vinegar, one teaspoonful of onion juice and one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley. When the eggs are done remove the shells, cut into slices, and arrange them on a salid dish so that one overlaps the other; pour the dressing over while the eggs are still hot, stand away in a cold place for one or two hours, garnish with parsley and serve.

Fenimore Cooper.

From an "Open Letter" on "The Centenary of Fenimore Cooper" in the September Century, we quote the following: "Time is unerring in its selection. Cooper has now been dead nearly two-score years. What survives of his works are the 'Sea Tales' and the 'Leatherstocking Tales.' From these I found myself forced to cite characters and episodes. These are the stories which hold their own in the libraries. Public and critics are at one here. The wind of the lakes and the prairies has not lost its balsam and the salt of sea keeps its savor. For the free movement of his figures and for the proper expansion of his story Cooper needed a broad region and a widening vista. He excelled in conveying the suggestion of vastness and limitless space and of depicting the human beings proper to these great reaches of land and water—the two elements he ruled; and he was equally at home on the rolling waves of the prairie and on the green and irregular hillocks of the ocean."

Shakespeare Shown Up.

There is a school teacher in Texas who has recently been "showing up" William Shakespeare. In his own opinion the bard has been extravagantly overrated. He sees nothing in him—can't account for his popularity. He finds his meter irregular, his rhymes harsh and his grammer abominable; besides his spelling is bad, "and there is a total lack of the appearance of revision." Ah, there's the rub. Revision is a pedagogue's fiercest passion. He will revise or die. Whatever he may neglect he will attend to his revision. Many school teachers are fond of nice, smooth jingle, in which nouns, prepositions, verbs, adjectives and other adverbs keep strictly in their proper places. They are not particular about ideas, but they will fight until the last darned foe expires for words.—Texas Siftings.

IF YOU ARE NERVOUS or dyspeptic try Carter's Little Nerve Pills. Dyspepsia makes you nervous, and nervousness makes you dyspeptic; either one renders you miserable, and these little pills cure both.

HIS INNOCENT CLIENT.—Great Lawyer—I want you to tell me candidly, did you really shoot the man?

Client—Do you suppose that I am such a donkey that I would pay you a $5,000 fee if I was innocent?—Texas Siftings.

MY FRIEND, look here! you know how weak and nervous your wife is, and you know that Carter's Iron Pills will relieve her, now why not be fair about it and buy her a box?

"And where do you go, my pretty maid,
With a microscope in your hand?"
