FOR PRETTY GIRLS.

Beautiful Suits for the Tennis Court.

Here are a few suggestions from Bon Seline which some of our pretty tennis players might follow without detracting to any extent from their grace and beauty of form, and at the same time add to their many attractions, for as the rose is rendered all the more queenly by the richness of her robes, so are the natural charms of bright and laughing girls enhanced by a happy selection of the colors and styles of their suits. Now, girls, don't think that your old friend, who always has her "weather-eye" open to the ever varying fashions is finding fault, for she is not, but feels only too well assured that a few pointed references in regard to dress are not always in bad taste or out of season. As your lives are pure, symmetrical and beautiful, showing a beautiful harmony of all that goes to make a well-rounded character, let your outward apparel show a corresponding attractiveness and richness of coloring.

Since we have adopted the out-of-door sports of our "English cousins" it would be wise to adopt their simple comfortable style of dress also, that we may as thoroughly enjoy the benefits of the exercise. Now that so much time is spent upon the lawn, the tennis suits should receive as much consideration as any gown in the wardrobe, for a pretty, graceful girl is nowhere so pretty or graceful as when, with racket in hand, she is ready for a "set," if she is costumed suitably and becomingly. The white suit of the summer will be worn late in the fall, but the bright colors are much more pleasing as the days grow cooler, and the blaizer, which has grown in favor all the season, proves now to be just the thing. Those who have the plain white serges can brighten them up with a blaizer jacket and cap of striped red and white, or any combination they prefer. The striped flannels make the most effective skirts, and when made in accordian plates are particularly so. The colored stripes showing on the edges have the appearance of a skirt entirely of that color, until the motions of the wearer flash the white stripes forth in beautiful contrast. A blouse there must always be, but the loose effects of last season are not so popular. Old rose and white is a new and pretty combination. A striped skirt with a pinafore apron of plain rose strapped over the shoulders and belted at the waist, the square front and back showing the stripes, with striped cuffs make a novel dress; and when finished with a white felt hat, caught up on the left side with old rose ostrich tips, is truly picturesque. Another very serviceable dress has a skirt of brown and red striped wool, a blouse of red surah, and a blaizer of the striped goods, which buttons once across the chest and slopes off sharply to the waist lines. A small red felt hat and russet shoes complete this costume. Navy blue is always popular because so universally becoming. A navy blue skirt in large plates, with a blouse of blue and yellow striped flannel made Directoire style, with wide revers of blue, opening over a chemisette of white wash silk, with a turnover collar and yellow silk cravat. The sash tied low in front, or on the left side, may be of the blue with the stripes around it. There are perfect studies in green and gold. The green must be of a soft bright shade and the gold a genuine gold to be effective. One style has a box plated skirt of solid color—green, on each plate of which, about an eighth of a yard from the bottom of the skirt, is embroidered the "National." This has a plain or accordian skirt of blue wool. A scarlet Zouave jacket over a blouse of white wash silk. With this a military cap of red or blue, as suits the wearer, would be in good taste. These are only a few of the many charming and attractive autum styles, but enough to give an idea of the prevailing mode. BON SELINE.

THE FLAG THAT TRIPPED UP BOOTH.

A handsome mahogany case containing a silk flag with gold bullion fringe occupies nearly all of the space available of the wall in the southern part of the room of Capt. Cobaugh at the Treasury Department. Each visitor is shown the flag and attention is generally invited to a tear in one of the stripes. The flag formerly belonged to the Treasury Guards, a volunteer organization formed during the war for emergencies that might arise at the capital of the nation. After the fall of Richmond, and the night that President Lincoln went to Ford's Theatre, the flag, which was then attached to a stout rosewood flagstaff, was borrowed by Mr. John T. Ford for decorative uses about the box occupied by the President. When the assassin fired the shot whose echo was heard throughout the civilized world, he leaped from the box; in doing so, he caught the rowel of his spur in the silken folds of the starry banner protruding from the President's box. That slip probobly cost Booth his life, for the flag tripped him and caused the broken leg which impeded him in his efforts to escape and rendered him an easy victim for Sergt. Boston Corbett's rifle ball. Subsequently the flag was returned to the Treasury Department, and during the few days that President Johnson had his office in the Department the flag was in a corner of the apartment. It was removed, however, by Capt. Cobaugh to its present resting place and the staff was made into three canes and presented to officials of the Treasury Department.

SEPTEMBER FARM NOTES.

Pick the tomatoes as fast as they ripen—this will hasten the maturity and ripening of the crop. Pick off all imperfect and spotted specimens as you come across them.

More time is spent and poorer results obtained if work is not done at the proper time. To no work does this apply more truly than that done on the farm or in the garden.

Poultry is everywhere the best meat for summer eating, and especially so for farmers who cannot always get fresh meat of other kinds. Old hens past the age of profit will usually be found better eating than the half-grown chickens of this year's growth, unless the latter are the breed for broilers.

Many dairymen are too ready to dispose of a good bull before he gets "too old." The fact is, as the experience of many has proven, that a good dairy bull in a herd of dairy cows should be kept until he fails or at least shows signs of failing, and this is not often till he nears the age of 20.

The young hog is converted into a more creditable product, commands a better price, is generally ready for a better market, gives quicker returns and requires less attendance. He can be fed when on pasture, the droppings are not wasted, and food is not expended in keeping up animal heat during the entire winter.

Thoroughly aired milk will keep much longer than ice-cooled milk, for as soon as the influences of the ice is removed and the temperature goes up the germs that produce lactic acid manifests themselves at once and the milk sours very quickly; and even when milk is cooled it should be first given a thorough aeration.

THE JEWEL SNAKE.

India's Remarkable Reptile which Developes a Jewel in Its Head.

There is a belief current in all parts of India that a certain variety of snake, called Shesh Nag, when it attains the age of 100 years, has a precious jewel formed in its head. This jewel, it is affirmed, possesses the quality of sucking up the poison of the deadliest snake if applied to the wounded part. Strangely enough, a Paris gentleman is reputed to possess this invaluable jewel, according to a correspondent of a Gujarati weekly, published at Wadhwen, in Gujarat. The correspondent says that when the present owner—who by the way is now 63—was 23 years old, he lighted upon a snake of the above mentioned variety, which he killed. Then he found the jewel in its head. It has already saved several lives. Last year when Mr. Vidal, the collector of the district, was there, it was shown to him, too. The jewel is said to contain a thin, crescent-like fibre, which unceasingly oscillates in the centre. The gaikwar of Baroda, the maharajah of Kolhapur, and several other native princes are said to have offered several hundred thousond rupees for this unique jewel. The name of the owner is Mr. Framji Dadabbai Govekar, Tarapu, Bombay presidency. There is another belief prevalent in India that if a man be sleeping, no matter where, and a Shesh Nag comes and sits beside him with the hood spread over the sleeper's face, the latter is sure to be a son of fortune. Popular tradition assigns the same reason to the rise of Haida Ali, of Mysore, from a common soldier.—Notes and Queries.

Eclectic Magazine.

The September ECLECTIC recommends itself as usual to the readers and lovers of good literature. The distinguished artist and writer, W. W. Story, under the title of "Recent Conversations in a Studio," gives us a racy and suggestive discussion of various topics in art, politics, and social life. Karl Blind, the veteran socialist and reformer, has a word of importance to say on the New Italy as in some measure the outgrowth of seeds planted by such men as Giordano Bruno, the philosopher, who died from freedom of opinion in the year 1600. There is a most reliable paper of a scientific turn, but amusing and racy, on "Potatoe's Place in History," which is a model for articles of popular science. A clever anecdotial paper on Goethe and Carlyle makes the reader wish it were longer. Professor Sayce's discussion of "The Primitive Home of the Aryans" is of superior scholastic interest. A much wider clientel, however, will be found for Goldwin Smith's striking article on "Progress and War," one of the best of recent papers by this able writer. "Dr. Johnson on Modern Poetry" is an interview in the Elysian Fields with that bluff old intellectual giant, and is cleverly done by Mr. Watson. Father Barry contributes a seasonable word entitled "Wanted, A Gospel for the Century," indicating those needs which demand a revivication and even revolution in religious methods. Mr. John Rae tells us about the Russian peasantry in his article "An Empire of Crofters." Sir Morrell Mackenzie contributes the second part of his article on "Speech and Song." For most of our readers, however, the remarkable contribution entitled "The Papacy: A Revelation and a Prophecy," will be the most interesting paper in the number. The minor articles are well chosen.

Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond street, New York, Terms, $5 per year; single copies, 45 cents; trial subscription for 3 months, $1. ECLECTIC and any $4 Magazine $8.

Miss Trimount—And to think that after all these thousands of years there should be so much water in the sea! One would supposed it would have dried up long ago.

Miss Kornpackir—Yes, that's so, but then, you know, it has heaps of salt in it, and papa says that the way salt preserves things is wonderful.

MY FRIEND, look here! you know how weak and nervous your wife is, and you know that Carter's Iron Pills will relieve her, now why not be fair about it and buy her a box?

She—Listen to the complaining of the winds.

He—What language do they use in complaining?

She—Gaelic.
