DEMOCRACY'S DAY!

A GRAND DEMOCRATIC RALLY AND RATIFICATION MEETING

At STAM'S HALL, Chestertown,

TO-DAY, OCTOBER 24, 1889,
AT 3 O'CLOCK P. M.

Democrats, Conservatives, Doubters and ALL who desire to hear a clear, unvarnished statement of the issues involved in the present campaign, come. Some of the most profound thinkers and the most eloquent speakers of the State will address the meeting. Those who have promised to be present are:

COL. L. VICTOR BAUGHMAN,
Nominee for Comptroller;
HON. GEORGE GRAY, of Delaware;
HON. JOHN P. POE, of Baltimore;
HON. J. FRED. C. TALBOTT,
of Baltimore county;
HON. HENRY PAGE, of Somerset Co.

Let Democracy rise en masse and make this the greatest political success of the campaign, and one which shall be a grand endorsement of the three great names, Democracy, Cleveland and Reform.

Meeting to be organized at 3 o'clock.

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

DEMOCRATIC MASS-MEETINGS!

Democratic Mass-meetings have been arranged to take place as follows:

At the "CLIFFS," in Quaker Neck,

NEXT SATURDAY AFTERNOON
AT 3 O'CLOCK.

Oyster Feast & Speaking.

At STAM'S HALL, Chestertown,

Thursday Evening, October 31st,

THE YOUNG DEMOCRACY
WILL HAVE A GRAND RALLY.

At GREY'S INN, on

SATURDAY, NOV. 2d,

at 3 o'clock P. M., the Fifth District will have an

Oyster Feast & Speaking.

The "Carlisle Club," of Kennedyville, will also have a grand demonstration one night next week.

OF THE one hundred and fifty-four names registered and not polled at the last election in the fifth district, one hundred and thirty-eight were white and but sixteen colored. Democrats cannot afford to be voted down in this way.

QUEEN ANNE'S POLITICS.

Queen Anne's Democrats were out in force on Saturday last, and rousing Democratic rallies were held at Church Hill and Sudlersville. Church Hill has long been considered the cradle of Queen Anne's Democracy and the banner Democratic district of the county, and never fails in her allegiance to the political faith of her fathers. The meeting was called to order by Wm. E. B. Faithful, Esq., while a number of sterling Democrats occupied the stage. At the meetings held at Church Hill, the one in the afternoon received pure and unadulterated Democracy, meted out in full measure by Rev. A. G. Harley, Major T. G. Ridgely and Olin Bryan. In the evening Edwin H. Brown made a stirring and eloquent address, and was followed by other speakers. Factional feeling has to a great extent been overcome, and though an undercurrent of dissatisfaction still exists, it is generally conceded that on November 5 unbroken ranks will be presented and a handsome majority rolled up by the Church Hill Democracy.

The meeting at Sudlersville was enthusiastic and well attended, and it is said that the forces are in working condition and no fears are entertained in regard to a handsome majority from the upper district. P. B. Hopper, Wilmer Emory and other speakers were present.

Kent Island district is still somewhat unsettled, the factional feeling of the campaign being rather more difficult to overcome in that section than in the other districts of the county.

DEMOCRATS, TURN OUT!

To-day is the time appointed for the grand Democratic rally, and it behooves every individual member of the party to throw off any feeling of luke-warmness which may have existed, and be present. It should be remembered that negligence of duty means defeat and defeat means a local calamity which it were hard to overcome, and which must expand in its influences and affect in a depressing manner the good government of the nation at large. Kent county is a part and parcel of the great national political system, and any blot upon her shield must mar the symmetry and beauty of the whole Democratic structure.

Should personal feeling check your political ardor, remember that your inactivity will not affect so much the individual members of the ticket as it will have a tendency to blight and deaden the effects of the great fundamental principles which underlie the party to which we have plighted our faith. Your influence will be felt for good, so do not fail to be present.

BALTIMORE POLITICS.

Democracy's Hard Fight—All Parties Uncertain in Regard to the Political Forecast in the Monumental City.

BALTIMORE, MD., Oct., 22, 1889.

TRANSCRIPT:—The sentiment pervading the rank and file of the political workers of Baltimore city just now might be termed an exaggeration of the well-known cry, "Lay on Macduff, and damned be he who first cries hold, enough!" On Friday night of last week, the Hon. Isador Rayner electrified the masses of the Democracy by one of his telling speeches at the Concordia Opera House, and on the next night at the same place, the matchless eloquence of John K. Cowen cheered on to renewed efforts the army of Fusion. Each day the battle waxes warmer and warmer, and the smoke of conflict grows denser as the momentous hand-to-hand struggle of November 5, draws nearer. Whatever the result may be, and no human eye can pierce the veil of uncertainty, this will go down to history as one of the most memorable political battles ever fought in Baltimore.

I said the issue was uncertain, the result in doubt. There are many potent causes for this uncertainty. In the first place the opponents of the dominant party were never better supplied with the sinews of war than now. In the memorable "New Judge" revolution there was no question of patronage or public control involved and the people rose en-masse to rid themselves of a judiciary about which the corroding taint of corrupt influences are said to have lingered. In the great revolt of 1885, when Judge George William Brown bore the banner of reform, the fatal weakness of the coalition movement was a lack of funds. But the present Fusion movement is better off. Organized by James A. Gary to promote ultimately his own political welfare, he has poured money like water into the campaign coffers. Major Alexander Shaw, their candiate for mayor, is a millionaire many times over, and is said to be "bleeding" freely for the cause. The members of the "silk-stocking" Jefferson Independent Democratic Association are among the wealthiest lawyers, bankers and manufacturers of the city, and all are "putting up" in a most liberal style. In fact the plentitude of money that is apparent in the Fusion ranks causes cold shivers of apprehension to run down the backs of the Democratic leaders. The latter have money too, but if laid side by side, the available pile of the Fusionists would probably be much the larger. This, therefore, is a very potent element of uncertainty, viewed from a Democratic standpoint.

On the other hand, the Fusionists have much to fear from the threatened disaffection of the colored vote. The colored brother has, as Mr. Rayner puts it, stood so long hungry in the Republican kitchen inhaling the savory odor of the tempting dishes sent steaming up the dumb waiter to his white brethern of the faith in the banqueting halls above, getting nothing but the empty platters to lick, that his famishing stomach is beginning to cry out in revolt. Then the masses of the colored voters were at the beginning bitterly opposed to fusion. They didn't want to see any outside allies as candidates for the offices to be dished out, for every one such lessened the colored man's chance. It was a difficult task then to prevent open revolt, and a straightout colored ticket was talked of. The most strenuous efforts have been made to cajole, coax, and taffy the colored voters into line, yet there is still so much disaffection and apathy that the Fusion leaders are a good deal exercised. Many Democrats claim that they will poll enough colored votes to offset the Slater votes for Fusion in East Baltimore, but this is scarcely probable. One thing is certain, the Fusionists must poll the solid colored vote to be successful. Then there will be a great deal of trading, and this will prove the most uncertain element of all. Viewing the situation as a thoroughly impartial observer, one comes to the conclusion: The Democrats want the Legislature and will trade Davidson for this end controlling the city council as a check to the municipal executive, they can afford to allow Major Shaw to warm the mayoralty chair for two years, but they cannot afford to lose the Legislature. The Independents are after the control of the city, and, animated by a bitter hatred of the Democratic managers, will let the legislative ticket go to elect the municipal ticket. The Republicans don't expect much in the legislative line, but seeing a chance to get within the citadel of the City Hall, will direct all their efforts in that direction, and Wellington will suffer should the political wheel land them on top, and with the aid of the Independents they secure control of the Legislators, an effort will undoubtedly be made to dodge the constitutional provision and repeal the present senatorial law. Then the next United States Senator is slated to come from Baltimore city, and his name will be John K. Cowen. So in the midst of all this contemplated wire pulling, hauling, double-dealing and trading, which is vehemently denied by both sides, but which is inevitable, political prophets to-day are dazed and speechless. Time alone must tell.

At this time a review of the situation leads to the following forecast; If Davidson is elected, it will be by not over 5,000 votes; if Shaw pulls through, his margin will be less than 3,000. The legislative delegation from Baltimore looks like six Democrats from the first district, six Democrats from the second district and six Republicans from the third district. The City Council horoscope is: First branch, Fusion 9: Democrats 7; doubtful 6. Second branch, Fusion 4; Democrats 3; doubtful 4.

This seems rather a lugubrious outlook, doesn't it? But I do not write in a despondent vein, I am simply giving the Fusionists the benefit of the doubt and allowing their claims to show that this fight is for the Democracy of the Monumental City no child's play. The most conservative and careful Democrats, who have helped pull the party through many a crisis before, are not seriously alarmed and are confident of retaining control of city and State. The party is alert, watchful, and full of fight, and withal excellently organized. I am confident, therefore, that on the morning of November 6, the sturdy Democrats of Kent will join their rejoicing voices with those of their brothers of the dear old city of Baltimore in paeans of victory over the faith so nobly kept and the battle so grandly won.

"To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

B. J. FREDERICK.

THE EASTERN SHORE.

A Sanitarium for the Sick—A Holiday-ground for the Wealthy, and a Refuge for the Oppressed.

We are in receipt of the neat little volume writted by C. W. Chancellor, secretary of the Maryland State Board of Health, on "The Climate of the Eastern Shore." The striking tribute to our highly favored section is dedicated "To the People of the Eastern Shore." Dr. Chancellor does not hesitate to draw comparisons between the advantages offered by the Eastern Shore and those presented by more widely known sections, which have for years been desirable spots for the summer and winter sojourn for the delicate and afflicted. Dr. Chancellor says:

"It is not pretended that the climate itself exercises any specific agency in the cure of consumption; on the contrary, there is scarcely any known climate that does not foster its growth and dissemination. It is widespread throughout all latitudes and under every meridian, but it is probably less frequent and destructive on the Eastern Shore of Maryland than in any other locality known. It was formerly supposed to be a disease of cold climates especially, and that a change to a very hot climate was the best means of averting or curing it. We know now that very nearly the opposite of this obtains. Consumption is seldom met with in the Artic Regions, or in places of very high latitudes, such as Iceland, the Orkneys, or Siberia.

"The Eastern Shore of Maryland undoubtedly possesses many climatic advantages. In the lower peninsula the temperature in the winter is comparatively mild, and the atmosphere remarkably clear and bracing. Indeed, it would seem that mother nature had predestined this particular locality as a winter resort; but while the intentions of "Mother Nature" may be excellent, something more is necessary before the place with its countless advantages can rise to the position for which nature may have designed it. It must first be brought into public notice, and popular favor will soon follow.

"It is worthy of note that the peninsula of Maryland possesses extraordinary advantages as a health station. It is one of the few places that offers to one class of invalids the attraction of a comparatively mild and moderately dry climate in winter, and to another class excellent sea-bathing in summer. There is no reason, therefore, why, if properly adorned by art, it should not be crowded with strangers during both the winter and summer seasons. The watering places in the south of England, though much inferior, in point of climate, to the Eastern Shore of Maryland, are resorted to all the year round; but the class of patients visiting them during the winter season is a very different one from that which is found at them in the summer.

"It is generally supposed that the climate of the peninsula is intolerably hot in mid-summer, but this is an assumption which is not justified by the facts. The heat of the summer is not by any means oppressive; on the contrary the temperature is so modified by the south and southwest winds passing over large volumes of salt water, that the extremes of temperature are nothing like so great as at many mountain resorts, where the thermometer will frequently register over blood-heat at mid-day and but little above freezing at night. The mornings and evenings on the Eastern Shore are usually cool and charming, during most of the summer, and no one who has not visited the locality at that season can form a notion of how enjoyable the climate really is. The richness of the verdure and the luxuriance of the vegetation mark it as a spot rich in climatic advantages.

"Of that fertile section of the State of Maryland, known as the "Eastern Shore," we need only speak in general terms at this time, as it will be, for the purposes of this work, sufficiently brought before the reader in succeeding chapters.

"The Chesapeake and Delaware Peninsula contains an area of six thousand square miles, bounded on the north by the State of Pennsylvania, on the east by the Delaware Bay and the Atlantic Ocean, on the south and west by the Atlantic and the broad Chesapeake Bay. Its extreme length is about one hundred and eighty miles, its greatest breadth from sixty to seventy, and its least about ten miles. This territory lying between 37.50° and 40° north latitude, and longitude 75° and 76° west, belongs to three States and is divided as follows: Eastern Shore of Maryland, five-ninths; State of Delaware, three-ninths; Eastern Shore of Virginia, one-ninth.

"How the idea that the Eastern Shore of Maryland is more than ordinarily malarious and unhealthy originated, it is not of importance to inquire; but that this opinion is founded on error we shall be able to prove, by reference to historical facts and statistical data.

"In regard to the social aspects of the Eastern Shore, not much need to be said. The people are proverbial for their culture, refinement and hospitality. The native retidents are for the most part descended from the cavaliers and still preserve, in a striking manner, the characteristics of that brave people.

"Always distinguished for his attachments to "creature comforts," such as canvas-back ducks and diamond-back terrapin, the Eastern Shoreman is renowned for cordial and unaffected hospitality, and is never better pleased than when the refinements and pleasures of his home are shared by friends and strangers. The latch string hangs on the outside, at all times, and with true hospitality he delights to "welcome the coming and speed the parting guest."

"No proper accommodations have yet been made for the public, except at Tolchester and Rock Hall, in Kent county; Oxford, in Talbot county, and Ocean City, in Worcester county, but nature's materials are here for a great sanitarium, and there will soon be a disposition—a savior faire—to make use of them. The climate is undoubtedly a pleasant and salubrious one, during both winter and summer, and when this fact becomes more widely known the means for enjoying it will be amply supplied.

"In addition to its mild and temperate climate, the peninsula of Maryland is particularly suited for a health station, on account of its proximity to the great centres of population, and the facilities of approach by both water and rail.

"To families with children, during the years of development, the Eastern Shore of Maryland offers a most desirable home. Transplanted from northern regions—from a severe to a moderate climate—they recuperate in a marvelous fashion. The happy results of winter's genial influence is here felt immediately. They can walk or be taken out into the fresh air almost daily, which is by no means the case in their native home.

"Many localities on the Eastern Shore of Maryland might be pointed out which offer attractions as a winter resort, or all-the-year-round home, preferable to either Florida, South Carolina, Georgia, California or Colorado, or to many of the famous winter resorts in the South of Europe, all of which lack the atmospheric tonicity of the former place with its almost entire immunity from consumption.

"For a long time the Eastern Shore of Maryland has rested under a reputation such as is likely to arise from a careless observation of her physical constitution and relations; but the light of investigation and experience has in a measure dispelled the dark shades that mantled her fair name with the insidious onslaught of that morbific agent known as MAL-ARIA, or bad-air.

"The Eastern Shore of Maryland is justly renowned for its varied dietetics and excellent cuisine; there is no other locality in the world so abundantly supplied with fine and refining food. The every-day diet of the people of this section—fish, oysters, crabs, wild ducks, partridges, &c.,—is "food fit for the god's." Savarin said, "Tell me what you eat and I will tell you what you are," and in this assertion, frivolous though it may appear, there is a great deal of meaning.

"If the residents of the Eastern Shore of Maryland are gay and happy, generous and hospitable; if they are distinguished above other people for their Amor patriæ, and their domestic felicity; and if, so far as the superficies is concerned,

'Society is smoothed to that excess
That manners differ more than dress.'

it is not to be attributed altogether to the circumstances of the people of that section being descended from cavaliers, but, in part, to the climate in which they live, and to the fact that they eschew the coarser articles of food to a great extent, and feed almost exclusively on fish, shell-fish, terrapin, game, poultry, vegetables and succulent fruits, notwithstanding the country is abundantly supplied with the best of viands, which are only used to the extent of maintaining the highest standard of good health. To paraphrase an often quoted aphorism—"Fine food makes the gentleman, and want maker the fellow; all the rest are leather and prunella."

Colonel William Henry Legg, less charitable than Dr. Chancellor, in his anticipated book "A Cure for the Blues," proposes to confine the health-giving and delightful influences of the Eastern Shore to the romantic and beautiful "Island of Kent," to the exclusion of many not less favored sections than his own romantic island.

STATE AND PENINSULA.

A silver communion service has peen obtained for Holy Innocents P. E. Church, Claiborne, Talbot county, in memory of Rev. E. F. Dashiell, D. D., rector of St. Michael's Parish, who died in 1886.

The barn and outbuildings on the farm of Enoch Gallaher, about two and a half miles from Port Deposit, were burned on Saturday night last, with all this season's crops. The fire was supposed to be the work of an incendiary. The loss is about $2000, partly covered by insurance.—Elkton Appeal.

Mr. Washington Walls, a highly esteemed citizen residing in the first district, near Sudlersville, was found dead in the barnyard of his son-in-law, Mr. Nathan E. Benton, last Monday about noon. Dr. J. C. Hackett made a thorough examination of the dead man and pronounced "palpitation of the heart" the cause of death.—Centreville Record.

The body of a white man drifted ashore at Oxford, Talbot county, on Monday of last week. It was not identified. The body was that of a young man, five feet nine inches high, who would apparently weigh 145 pounds. The throat was cut from ear to ear—whether cut before the body went into the water or done by crabs afterwards is unknown.

The Baltimore and Drum Point Railroad officials have asked the county commissioners of Anne Arundel to issue the bonds for the county subscription of $200,000 to the road authorized by an act of the Legislature, agreeing to deposit them with a trust company until the road is completed, but the proposition was not acted on. It is said a majority of the board will resist the payment of this claim, as was done at a former meeting, until the courts have decided the matter.

We think that Anne Arundel is destined to attract attention as an important section of the great peach belt. With soil adapted to the growth of vigorous and healthy orchards, with a climate tempered by the contiguity of the Chesapeake bay, with accessibility to market by steamer and trains so that only a few hours intervene between the picking and delivering of fruit, there is nothing wanting to complete the advantages of this county as a peach-growing district.—Maryland Republican.

Balt. & Delaware Bay Preferred Stock.

A NUMBER OF APPLICATIONS having been made for the Preferred Stock of the Baltimore and Delaware Bay Railroad, the management have decided to offer a limited amount at $70 in lots of not less than three or more than twenty shares to any one person. The total amount of Preferred Stock is 3,650 shares. Par value $100. When completed to Tolchester the road will have a bonded indebtedness of about $6800 per mile, the smallest of any road in the country, considering the amount of money expended on its reconstruction. Judging from the present earnings of the road, despite poor crops, the Stock is more than likely to earn a dividend within the next twelve months. An important factor is the rapid increase of the passenger business, and the fact that the Baltimore and Delaware Bay Railroad is run on strict business principles, for the benefit of the stockholders, and in the interest of the country it traverses, it is to be hoped the new enterprise will be endorsed and supported by all citizens along the line, who have the interest of the road at heart and wish to see preserved an independent outlet to New York and points East. Subscription will be received at the Chestertown National Bank of Maryland. Sept. 26—tf.
