THE PROHIBITION COLUMN, published elsewhere in the TRANSCRIPT, belongs to the Prohibitionists of Kent county. The space has been regularly paid for, and all matter which may appear in it will be from the hands of the committee appointed at the recent convention, and the editors of THE CHESTERTOWN TRANSCRIPT are in no way responsible for what may be said in this column. Nor do we want any inferences drawn in regard to our sympathy with or opposition to the movement.

DEMOCRATIC MASS-MEETINGS!

Democratic Mass-meetings have been arranged to take place as follows:

At STAM'S HALL, Chestertown,

This, Thursday, Eve'n, Oct. 31,

The Young Democracy

WILL HAVE A GRAND RALLY.

Let every Democrat in the county come out and join the young men in their great meeting. Join the energies of the young with the wisdom of age.

At GREY'S INN, on

SATURDAY, NOV. 21,

at 3 o'clock P. M., the Fifth District will have an Oyster Feast & Speaking.

JAMES ROBERTSON,

OF ANNE ARUNDEL,

And Others, Will Address the Meeting.

THE speech by James Robertson, Esq., of Anne Arundel county, before the Democratic voters of Grey's Inn on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, will be a treat which should be enjoyed by Democrats from every section of the county. He says that he will certainly be there, and will talk politics to his Eastern Shore friends.

JAMES H. FRAZER, who nine years ago founded the Cecil County News, at Elkton, and who has since been editor and proprietor, has disposed of the paper to ex-State's Attorney Daniel Bratton, of Elkton. The News was started as an Independent journal but wheeled into line in earnest when Cleveland entered the presidential campaign, and will continue as one of the journalistic host of Democracy.

DEMOCRATS TO THE FRONT.

The rally of the Young Democracy at Stam's Hall to-night promises to be one of the most substantial endorsements of the Democracy and her first-class ticket which has as yet been given. The youth and manhood of Chestertown and Kent county, with characteristic energy and enthusiasm, have taken the cause of the Democracy in hand and will force the battle to a successful issue. No man who is loyal to party and true to a noble ancestry can afford to be absent from the meeting of Democratic young men, and thereby withdraw the encouraging influence of their presence. Democrats, arouse! But a short time remains in which the issues of a desperate fight must be decided. Let no man forget the importance of his vote, the duty to cast a wise and conscientious ballot is as imperative upon the citizen as any moral obligation which he is called upon to confront.

When ignorance, superstition and poor government array themselves against intelligence, religious fidelity and a wise and judicious administration of affairs by the people and for the people, the duty for the elevated moral sentiment to exert its influence through the ballot-box is one as sacred as life itself. Democrats cannot afford to neglect the demands of the occasion, and should not only cast their own ballots promptly and fearlessly, but should see that every man is impressed with the grave responsibility which rests upon him and come to the polls.

Let no false security lull you into a pleasant repose. The time for slumber and rest will be when the Democracy of Kent county needs not to rest upon its arms, but can slumber in the hallowed quiet of a victory won and the consciousness of a battle nobly fought.

DEMOCRACY IN KENT.

Enthusiastic Meetings and the Rank and File of the Party Ready for the Fight—Plain Facts Eloquently Stated.

The Democratic rally at Stam's Hall on last Thursday, will go down—if we except the Democratic majority of November 5—in the history of the present campaign as the crowning political success of the year in Kent county. Enthusiasm ran high, and as the assurances of the ticket's success were cast into the great political caldron, it fairly simmered and boiled, sending off clouds of rich odor savored strongly of Democracy and her triumph. The stage was handsomely decorated with the national colors, while a handsome picture of Grover Cleveland looked complacently a position over the stage. About o'clock P. M., Dr. Samuel Beck, n of the State Central Committee, the meeting to order, and announced llowing officers: President, James Hurtt; Vice presidents—first district, J. Scott, Stephen Boyer, A. F. Huey, F. M. Woodall, Thos. R. Quimby; second district, Alday Clements, John P. Hendrickson, I. R. Starkey, Dr. J. H. K. Jacobs; third district, James S. Harris, James T. Ireland, Robert L. Usilton, Wm. W. Stephens, Lucas Aldridge; fourth district, H. W. Vickers, James T. Dixon, Thomas D. France, H. Clay Lusby, Wm. H. Stewart; fifth district, John Brice, Wash. G. Skirven, Charles C. Strong, R. B. Wilson, Jr., Wm. Burgess; secretaries, George A. Ireland, L. C. Justis, Jr., Thomas C. Maslin. Owing to other engagements the gentlemen who were at first expected to address the meeting were unable to be present.

Mr. Hurtt upon assuming the position of presiding officer, made a stirring speech, calling upon the Democracy of the county to awake to a recognition of the importance of the issue of the hour and be found at their post of duty on November 5. Mr. Hurtt's remarks were pertinent and convincing. He said: "We come to wage war upon no one, but to bury the animosities in our midst, if any such exist. The day of slavery should be a thing of the past, but when any colored man raises the race issue in our midst and proclaims that he carries forty thousand men in his palm it is time to call a halt, and our young men must come to the front. I have no word of harshness against the colored man, but this proves them to be clannish, and because they are clannish they are unfit to rule."

O. C. Warfield, Esq., of Baltimore city, was introduced and for more than an hour gave the audience a rich treat of political good things with a most enjoyable sauce of eloquence and fact. Mr. Warfield is an eloquent speaker, a logical thinker, and a man thoroughly acquainted with political affairs. He said: "It is a matter of some moment to know how to present one's thoughts upon current issues, to a reading community like this of Kent county, but young man you have reason to be grateful to your fathers who have left you the wealth of individual liberty which shelters you and myself to-day, so full in its unqualified greatness. We must appreciate our obligations to our institutions and support them. The Czar of Russia in moving from city to city of his own dominion was isolated by protections cast around him, and hedged in by 50,000 Russian troops. Though thousands unwillingly heard President Harrison's recital of his policy at the inaugural, it was not necessary to guard the body of Mr. Harrison, this was not so much out of respect to the man as to the respect and veneration to our civil government. If our institutions have evolved to this extent of fullness which you enjoy, do you not owe some degree of gratitude? Then pay it. The colored man holds to his party out of gratitude for benefits received, to that extent we are with him, and the feeling which keeps off mixed schools and inter-marriage eminates from prudence and not from harshness, the law has been fixed by God, who created these natural distinctions between men, and we must bow to it. Why should you support the Democratic party in this State? Because it has done everything which reason seemed to demand. Laws governing mines have been passed, asylums have been built, provision made for the needy and destitute, and our administration of affairs has been in the interest of the people and by the people. Mr. Wellington has brought charges against Vic. Baughman, but the sinking fund of the State is all right, and since the party has come into power not a defalcation can be shown, and our financial condition is good; what more can be asked? Property has suddenly and unexpectedly increased in value, and a re-assessment should be made, and then you farmers and doctors would have less taxes to pay. Now my friends is not this a fair statement, and is not the demands of the Democratic party reasonable? then respond."

The address was from beginning to end dignified, eloquent and forcible. The meeting adjourned to reassemble at seven o'clock P. M.

THE EVENING MEETING.

At the time appointed for the evening meeting, Stam's Hall was again crowded, with no diminution of enthusiasm.

J. A. Pearce, Esq., the first speaker, was eloquent and impressive and fearlessly and clearly set forth his position as a Democrat in the ranks of Democracy. He said: "It would have to be under peculiar circumstances, indeed, when I refuse to honor the draft of the genuine Democracy when that draft is drawn upon me. Mr. Keating, a veteran in Democracy, trained in the faith, and has never been drawn from his principles; and Mr. Brown, who has been trained from his father down, and never wavered in his allegiance to Democracy, were expected to address you, my friends, but they are not here, and I must be of some service to the cause, and will speak. The Baltimore American asks why the voice of Pinkney Whyte, Albert Constable, Henry Page, James A. Pearce and others, has not been heard in this campaign. I will answer for myself, and will tell you why. There has never been a day in my career when I was ashamed or afraid to avow my sentiments anywhere in the land. I am an humble servant content to serve in my own county, and there I am at work. My duties have kept me here, but when called elsewhere I have always gone. My place of duty during the campaign has been at home and here I have been content to labor. When a man says 'I am a Democrat,' if he speaks from his conscience, his reason and after reflection, there can be nothing nearer the truth, but the Sacred Book itself. Nothing but negligence and supineness on our part can prevent us from carrying this election as we have done before. When the Republican party, unconstitutional in its inception, sprang into existence, the Whigs throughout the country went with the Democracy. The Republican party is unconstitutional because it had as its purpose the destruction of a class of property recognized by the constitution itself. When a man is conceived and brought fourth in sin it is hard to change him. The Republican party was so and is so to-day. It is to-day unconstitutional because it seeks to go into authority by the ignorance of the mass of its members. Our interests in this contest are in Kent county. Our ticket to a man is a good one, both in material and the mode of its selection. If you see proper to throw the government of your county into the hands of a few white Republicans backed by seventeen hundred negro voters, you can of course do so, but do it openly and fearlessly, and rest assured 'that your sins will find you out.'"

Mr. Pearce was followed by James S. Robertson, of Anne Arundel county. Mr. Robertson's speech of over an hour's duration, was a masterly effort, and the large audience was not less instructed than amused at practical facts which were adduced and clinched by sledge-hammer illustrations, for the speaker is a humorist as well as an orator and forcible speaker. Mr. Robertson said: "The Baltimore American has raised the question as to James A. Pearce's silence. I know not what effect it may have in Kent county, but if they force the question the Western Shore from her water courses to the rocks of Garrett will acquit him of the charge. It is an old trick of the Republicans to cast discredit upon party counsellors and their fealty to Democracy. When political thought was exercising itself it was Thomas Jefferson who gave it a new pathway to empire, and that was the capability of man for self-government. Some say there is no difference between the two national parties to-day except the tariff issue. If this were true and there were none other, even then the gulf between them would be as great as that between the rich man and Lazarus. Out of our over sixty millions of population there are over fifty millions who are paying unwilling tribute to build up colossal fortunes and magnificent edifices for money kings. In Baltimore city there are those who are trying to break the faith of their fathers and put the colored men in a position to do violence to themselves and cast discredit upon their race. It is Democratic inspiration to-day which is the golden cord that binds us all in a common humanity, as well as to a sense of material self-government. It is a mistaken policy which strikes down your agriculture, manufactures and commerce, since upon agriculture, manufacture and commerce rests the promise of the future. It is no experiment to try to turn Maryland over to Republican misrule, it has been tried before, and they have had control of every foot of our southern soil, and what is the result? It is not better from their control, but taxes are piled up and matters were rendered worse. Upon the young men of the country her welfare, integrity and advancement depends, and they must think carefully and act wisely in this matter. Don't make any mistake. The line of promotion is with the Democracy, so stand by the landmarks of your fathers and the principles of your party." The speech was interspersed with amusing illustrations.

Mr. Warfield was present, and in response to earnest and continued calls from an audience which gave no signs of lagging interest, made a second speech of nearly an hour's length, which was, if possible, more thoroughly enjoyed than that of the afternoon.

DEMOCRATS AT THE "CLIFFS."

The Rain Casts No Damper Upon Democratic Enthusiasm.

A well-attended and enthusiastic meeting was held at the "Cliffs," in Quaker Neck, on Saturday afternoon. Notwithstanding the fact that a disagreeable, chilling rain commenced to fall early in the afternoon, quite a number were present. The beautiful pine grove on the banks of the Chester has given shelter to many heroes in local political battles before, and a number of those present on Saturday felt that they were on familiar ground, while other younger voters were for the first time called under the trees to hear the great fundamental principles of Democracy and its operations upon local affairs discussed. Many oystermen were at the meeting, and plighted again their fidelity to the party which their fathers had voted for and sustained, and which has been handed down as a goodly heritage, as worthy to-day of the confidence of the son, as it was of the support of the father in years that are passed.

Marion deK. Smith, in a short but impressive speech, pointed out the issues of the campaign, and impressed upon the voter the importance of an undivided support of the Democratic ticket. To the young voter he appealed in a manner which commanded the attention of all from the earnest and forcible way in which it was presented.

Mr. Samuel Vannort was present, and in a short but well-chosen speech, defined his position in regard to the political situation, and received the hearty endorsement of every one present.

Affairs are constantly assuming more satisfactory form in the lower portion of the county, and even the faint-hearted are looking forward to a successful issue. After the speech-making a genuine, old-time oyster roast was enjoyed, and not until darkness set in did the forces at the "Cliffs" disband. Unless all signs fail the lower portion of Kent county, and, indeed, all portions are in line and ready for a Democratic majority.

The Meeting at Kennedyville.

The Democratic meeting at Kennedyville on Tuesday night was in every way an enthusiastic affair. The hall of the Carlisle Democratic Club was crowded to its utmost capacity, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Every one present was glad to meet every other one and have a free and full expression and interchange of political ideas on the situation. L. C. Justis, Jr., president of the club, made a neat but forcible speech. Mr. Samuel Vannort followed, and though he insisted upon it, that he was no political orator or public speaker, discussed the issues of the day in a plain, substantial way. Lewen W. Wickes made his maiden speech, and in a clear and forcible manner gave his reasons for being a Democrat, and showed why every young man should join his destinies with that of Democracy. Mr. Wickes made a good speech, and though from stress of time, his remarks were confined to but few of the issues of the campaign they were directly to the point. James A. Pearce, Esq., in his usually impressive manner made one of those speeches which have always characterized his political talks as dispassionate, statesmanlike and abounding in good substantial facts. J. W. Hurtt next discussed the issues of the campaign in a forcible speech. Samuel Comegys, Esq., also made a short but impressive speech.

COUNTY TAX RATE FOR 1889.

Following are the tax rates of the counties of Maryland for 1889 for county purposes on each $100, as furnished by Dr. S. R. Waters, clerk to the State tax commissioners:

Alleghany	81¼
Anne Arundel	89
Baltimore county	36
Baltimore city (municipal tax)	$1.90
Calvert	87½
Caroline	92½
Carroll	50
Cecil	67½
Charles	92
Dorchester	85¼
Frederick	70
Garrett	$1.08
Harford	75
Howard	60
Kent	88
Montgomery	92½
Prince George's	95
Queen Anne's	91
Somerset	92
St. Mary's	97
Talbot	73
Washington	86
Wicomico	97½
Worcester	80

Baltimore county has the lowest tax rate, Carroll county is the next lowest, and Garrett county the highest.

The State tax is 17½ cents on the $100.

REMINISCENT OF RICHARD HYNSON.

EDITORS TRANSCRIPT:—In Philadelphia on Thursday last, I purchased a copy of the Baltimore Sun and saw with sorrow the announcement of the death of Mr. Richard Hynson. Though I knew, from information which I had received shortly before, that he was in a critical condition of health, the announcement of his death came, as such news always comes, with a shock.

In the fall of 1883, when the term of the late Governor Hamilton was about to expire, there was a lively interest throughout the State, as to who should be put forward by the Democratic party as his successor. In that connection the name of Mr. Hynson was favorably discussed by a large portion of the State press, a number of influential papers endorsing him as a preferred candidate. The writer of this sketch called on Mr. Hynson at his home early one morning and showed him a strong editorial in one of the State weeklies, urging him as a candidate for governor. He read the article, and laid the paper down with a smile. I told him that my object in calling was to say that I believed the nomination for Governor would come to him easily if he would allow his name to be placed in the list. He showed me several personal letters from people prominent in State politics, assuring him of support if he would only let his name come before the public. But he said he must say to me, as he had replied to those who had written to him concerning the matter, that he could in no event allow his name to be put forward as a candidate or accept the nomination even if it came to him without the seeking. In an hour's conversation which followed, Mr. Hynson referred to a great many interesting episodes in his personal and professional history, all of which I cannot now recall. But one matter I remember distinctly, because it was directly connected with the purpose of my visit. He said that when as a young man he first began the legal profession, he resolved that he would adhere strictly to his professional duties. This rule he had observed all the way along. There had been times in his life when he had had no reason to doubt that political positions of very considerable honor were within his reach, but he had never in any instance, allowed himself to be tempted to depart from his early fixed resolution. Success in any profession or calling he believed to depend principally upon strictly adhering to the duties involved, and it did not, in his opinion, pay any lawyer who had an ambition to succeed in his profession to interest himself in politics with personal motives.

Occupying as he did the sphere of a county lawyer, and declining, as he did, all positions that might bring him into more conspicuous prominence—Mr. Hynson's intellectual capabilities were probably not fully understood or appreciated outside his own county. Certainly those who knew him well and who were at all capable of understanding him, knew that he possessed an intellect of much more than ordinary clearness and power. Not only in questions that arose in his profession, but in disputed questions that arose outside of his profession involving reasoning in the abstract, he was able, as few men are, to sift sophistries and fallacious deductions and to extract the logical kernel of the matter under consideration. He possessed very noticeably a peculiarity of most superior minds—the power of concentrating all his mental forces and bringing them to bear directly and exclusively upon the matter which he was considering. So thoroughly did he become engrossed in the consideration of what held his attention, that he frequently became oblivious to all outward surroundings. There is no one of his acquaintance, probably, who has not had the experience of passing him on the street without receiving the least sign of recognition. Especially was this likely to occur when he had a "case in court." Those who knew him well, understood at such times that his mental vision was concentrated upon some special matter, and that even a member of his own family would have to touch his shoulder to attract his attention.

If I might presume to designate Mr. Hynson's most marked trait of temperament, I should say it was a large contempt for humbuggery and false pretense under whatever form it presented itself. Few men were fonder of congenial companionship. He took great delight in discussing matters of current interest in politics, in science, and sometimes in religion. His range of reading embraced matters outside of his profession, and he brought to bear upon all questions a judgment not dogmatically fixed to certain conclusions. Exact in business matters, but that he was kindly and generous, a great many people have reason to know. Of a genial temperament and fond of raillery, he lost few opportunities of turning a good natured laugh on his friends. He possessed many qualities that will make him widely regretted and long remembered. Many years from now, when boys of this generation have grown to be old men, the name of Richard Hynson will be recalled as one of the great lawyers of the Kent bar, and one among the distinguished sons of the old county.

Balt. & Delaware Bay Preferred Stock.

A NUMBER OF APPLICATIONS having been made for the Preferred Stock of the Baltimore and Delaware Bay Railroad, the management have decided to offer a limited amount at $70 in lots of not less than three or more than twenty shares to any one person. The total amount of Preferred Stock is 3,650 shares. Par value $100. When completed to Tolchester the road will have a bonded indebtedness of about $800 per mile, the smallest of any road in the country, considering the amount of money expended on its reconstruction. Judging from the present earnings of the road, despite poor crops, the Stock is more than likely to earn a dividend within the next twelve months. An important factor is the rapid increase of the passenger business, and the fact that the Baltimore and Delaware Bay Railroad is run on strict business principles, for the benefit of the stockholders, and in the interest of the country it traverses, it is to be hoped the new enterprise will be endorsed and supported by all citizens along the line, who have the interest of the road at heart and wish to see preserved an independent outlet to New York and points East. Subscription will be received at the Chestertown National Bank of Maryland. Sept. 26—tf.
