EASTERN SHORE KISSING.

Normal School girls close their dreamy eyes
When invited to osculate;
And let the vandal steal the kiss,
Though they really find it first-rate.

The Marion girl, the pride of the State,
In her clinging and soulful way,
Absorbs it all with a yearning yearn,
As big as a ton of hay.

The Princess Anne girl removeth her specs,
And freezeth her face with a smile;
Then sticks out her lips like an open book,
And cheweth her gum meanwhile.

The Asbury girl gets a grip on herself,
As she carefully takes off her hat;
And she grabs the prize in a frightened way,
Like a terrier shaking a rat.

The Pocomoke girl says never a word,
And you'd think she was rather tame,
With her practical views of the matter in hand;
But she gets there just the same.

The Onancock girl, a creature divine,
Whether wife or widow or miss,
Looks into your eyes with starlit orbs,
And puts her whole soul in her kiss.

The Cambridge girl, so gentle and grand,
Lets her lips meet the coming kiss
With rapturous warmth; and the youthful souls
Float away on a sea of bliss.

The Salisbury girl neither sighs nor pines,
Nor acts in a manner rude;
But she goes about kissing in a business-like way
That catches the average dude.

The Centreville girl bows her stately head
And she fixes her stylish lips
In a firm, hard way, and lets them go
In spasmodic little snips.

The Easton girl will at first refuse,
Just to have you insist and plead,
But when she finally gives her consent,
Her kiss, you'll confess, takes the lead. Ex.

QUEEN ANNE'S COUNTY.

What a Harford County Editor Thinks of Our Sister Across the River.

Queen Anne's county was carved out of Talbot and Kent and received for record its first wills and deeds in 1707. A part of this county is Kent Island, a narrow strip of land about thirty miles long, where tradition says a landing was made by Claiborne before the settlement of St. Mary's in 1634. The present population of the county is 18,000 with a taxable basis of $8,000,000 and a tax rate of 93 cents.

The principal towns are Centreville, Church Hill, Queenstown and Winchester. The latter town is the least prominent but probably the most populous in the county. It contains about 2,000 inhabitants. All the male members, about 500, who are large enough to paddle a canoe are engaged in oystering and kindred pursuits.

Church Hill, so named from the number of its churches, is a town of 600 thrifty people. Queenstown, the first capitol of the county, has about the same number, and Centreville, at the head of Corsica river, the present shiretown, about 1,500. Here is the same court house, slightly added to and improved, that stood for justice when the gallant Tilghman made his famous cross country ride to notify the Continental Congress of the surrender at Yorktown. The town contains two principal streets, one of which, together with the connecting lanes near the court house, is devoted to trade, traffic and tribulations incident to lawyers, newspapers and banks. The other is a well-shaded avenue ornamented on either side by comely private residences, homes of refinement and generous hospitality. Near by is the residence of General McKenney, once a merchant, now an agriculturist, who numbers his farms by fifty and his acres by the twenty thousand. The land is level but sufficiently rolling to drain and produce good crops of wheat and corn, and peaches when seasonable. Oats are not profitable and there is not sufficient hay raised in the county to winter the stock. Harvest is over and the wheat is shocked in the field waiting for the steam thresher. The peach orchards, of which there are many that usually yield five hundred baskets or two hundred dollars revenue to the acre, are as barren as the blasted fig-tree that encumbered the ground in ancient times. Next to peach raising, if not in front of it, stands the oyster industry. Twelve hundred men annually engage in tonging for the luscious bivalve during the open season. In the interim, from April to September, fishing and crabbing are the favorite pursuits of the watermen, and their craft of various kinds cover the water of Chester river and inlets from early morn until dewy eve. The oystermen are not agreed as to their wants and interests, and to please them all engages the attention of the local statesmen in which Queen Anne's abounds. Like Harford, one district is controlled by the "weis," subject, however, to the approval of the grand jury, and the rest of the county goes publicly "dry." Public sentiment supports the laws in each section, the physicians are honorable men, have regard for the ethics of their profession and as a result rum is never prescribed as a beverage, and drunkenness and disorder from drunkenness are almost unknown.

The people are divided on the merits of their next representative in Congress but are united in their efforts for building the proposed railroad from Chestertown to Easton. The capital stock, $500,000, has been subscribed and nearly all the right of way has been secured. The route has been surveyed and found to be practicable and inexpensive and the waterfront at Queenstown bought and paid for. The purpose is to build a steam road to connect Easton, Centreville, Church Hill, Denton and Chestertown by rail with the waterfront at Queenstown one of the best land-locked harbors on the shore with a good country behind it, and the nearest in point of time and distance to Baltimore. Forty miles of rail, with a seventeen mile branch to Denton, will connect all these important towns and all the other towns on the Shore, and at Queenstown they will be out thirty-two miles—two hours' sail—from Baltimore. This road will not only be a comfort and convenience to the people of Lower Maryland, but a source of great wealth to the business men of Baltimore. Now the Delaware Railroad and all the branch roads of the peninsula counties lead to Philadelphia and carry there all the produce of the shore and a large proportion of the citizens, except from the narrow belt along the bay and its navigable tributaries. The construction of this road would do much to revolutionize this travel and traffic. It would place almost the entire Eastern Shore nearer Baltimore than Philadelphia and, with the shorter haul and cheaper transportation, the wealth of this garden spot of Maryland would be emptied into the lap of Baltimore, from which her merchants would reap a golden harvest and the citizens of the entire State be brought into the closer commercial and political relation that would promote individual prosperity and the greatness of the commonwealth.

POINTS ABOUT HUSBANDS.

The Clear-eyed Young Matron Instructs a Pair of Shy and Ignorant Girls.

"Marriage may be a lottery," remarked the clear-eyed young matron, twirling a plump red cherry in a sugar snowdrift, "but I was lucky in having a wide-awake mamma who looked after my interests.

"I wonder if you girls," she continued, glancing at a pair of debutantes on the opposite side of the luncheon table, "recognize any of the outward and visible signs of good or bad husband-material when you see them? No? Well, then, while you drawl over those ices I'll give you a few tips that are worth their weight in gold. They are valuable, I know, because mamma first put me on to them, and for years I have taken notes, compared them, and never found the results fail by a hair's breadth.

"First, my dears, when a man gets in as a possible party, you want to take the most critical and minute observations upon his dress. It tells half the story. I should add, however, that these rules apply to Americans only, foreigners being brought up with such different ideas. Now, if one of our men affects a showy ring his stock as a husband drops a dozen points. The sort who wear elaborately set cabochon gems on their third fingers are no good at all according to my standard. They may be moral, but are seifish as pigs. And there's one thing you may count on, he will cut your bonnet bill to extend his tailor's account, and insist on having a valet before you are allowed to have either a victoria or a tiara. Personally I should refuse to consider the addresses of any man who decorates his hands, waistcoat, or tie with fancy jewelry. The sign is fatal and infallible.

"My advice is to choose a man who is radically clean and immaculately neat, without a suggestion of dandyism about him. The ideal American husband should be so absorbed in earning money to dress his wife that he has no time to study style or detail in his own attire. Another unfavorable symptom is too intimate knowledge of the ruffs and cuffs and farthingales and things we women wear. A man who can distinguish the difference between chiffon and alpaca or moire and muslin is a risk I should hesitate to assume. Appreciation of the tout ensemble is all we ask, and inquisitive fussiness is the most deplorable trait I can think of in a husband.

"Then, too, there are certain deductions to be drawn from physiognomy that deserve serious cosideration. For example, you can set it down as an axiom that blue-eyed men are invariably susceptible and sentimental. They are simply incapable of resisting feminine flattery, are bowled over by an ardent glance, and will stand more watching than a chicken thief during the dark of the moon. For curiosity, just observe all the blue-eyed men of your acquaintance and see if I'm not right. Of course I don't mean that they are devoid of sincerity or fidelity, but it is a fact that the woman who contracts to live with a pair of azure orbs has her work cut out for her. Some people may like that sort of thing and value a possession according to the anxiety it entails, but for my part the effect is too exhilarating. Therefore I give preference to gray or brown eyes.

"Other unpromising features are white hands, small feet, long lashes, curly hair, and slim waists, and above all else avoid men with the slightest approach to a stride or a strut. Some very superior brands of husbands have a slouchy gait, but a nervous or mincing step speaks volumes, and implies either hysterics or tyranny for the unfortunate female forced to keep pace with it through life.

"The best variety I should say were medium sized. Very little men are apt to be arbitrary, supersensitive, and vain, while the overgrown species are characterless and morally flabby. Are those all the signs I know? Oh, dear me, no! If you girls drop in about 5 o'clock to-morrow afternoon I'll read you the advance sheets of a pamphlet I'm preparing. It's called 'Husbands in the Rough, or Blind Lead.' Good-by."

TO WORTON MANOR.

East Baltimore Business Men's Annual Excursion—Enjoyment Afloat and Ashore.

The East Baltimore Business Men's Association had a jolly time on their excursion to Worton Manor Beach on Wednesday of last week.

At 8.30 o'clock in the morning the steamer B. S. Ford, Capt. John A. Clark left Henderson's wharf, Baltimore, with 800 persons. On the trip to the beach Messrs. Nathan Rosenstein and C. J. Healey enlivened the party with topical songs. Dickinson's Band was on board.

Mr. John Gale, proprietor of Worton Manor Beach, had a country dinner and supper prepared, and the appetites of the diners were appeased by the bountiful supply.

Soon after dinner the band played in the pavillion for the dancers. The razzle-dazzle machine and see-saw were also put in operation.

A seven inning game of ball was played by a team captained by Benjamin Hihn and another by Alfred Rickes. Hihn's team won by a score of 21 to 8.

At 2.30 P.M. the whole party went to the race-track just in the rear of Mr. Gale's house and saw two exciting races. The first race was a three-minute class, and was participated in by the following horses: Tyler, owned by George Hudson; May, by Noble Gears; Billy S., by W. B. Stevens, and Lady L., by Bert DeCorse. The course was over a half-mile track, best two out of three heats. May won. Time, 3.01 and 3 02. The second race was a free-for-all. The entries were: Regulus, owned by Bedford Roe; John Belton, by Richard Lockwood; Daisy B., by Bedford Roe, and Grover S., by W. W. Stevens. Grover S., won. Time, 2.39½ and 2.36. The judges were Thomas Gale, A. J. Hynson and Dr. G. Allen Jarman. Mr. Hynson was the starter.

After the racing an exhibition of fancy dancing was given at the pavillion, under the direction of Prof. C. W. Frampton, the following taking part: Misses Alice Thomas, Julia Kunkel, Carrie Baum, Florence Adler, Emma Frampton, Stella Lauer, and Messrs. Milton Frompton, Albert and F. W. Frampton and Harry Stuhmann.

The steamer left the beach shortly after 7 P. M. Henderson's wharf was reached three hours later, and the party disbanded amid cheers for the managers of the excursion.
