LITERARY NOTES.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

The ideal magazine prints not only timely articles on events and places, but stories of the right length to read aloud by the evening lamp. The September Harper's contains "A New England Prophet," the story of an Adventist alarm, by Mary E. Wilkins; "The General's Bluff," founded on a frontier campaign of General Crook, by Owen Wister; "The Tug of War," a tale of English men and women in Greece; chapters of "The Golden House," Charles Dudley Warner's novel of New York society, and the first of a two-part story of Narragansett Pier, by Brander Matthews. The October number offers even greater attractions.

HARPER'S WEEKLY.

The amount of light that Harper's Weekly was able to throw upon the remote and little-known country of Korea, the instant that public attention was directed to it, may be taken as an indication of the almost boundless resources of the paper, and its capacity to deal promptly and comprehensively with every occurrence of interest to the public.

HARPER'S BAZAR.

Harper's Bazar is presenting a great variety of fascinating styles for the early autumn, illustrated by Laudoz and Chapuis, the famous Parisian artists, and selected from Worth's most distinctive creations. These autumn toilettes for out-door and in-door occasions surpass anything previously shown in a fashion journal. The September issues will be enriched by elegant gowns and hats for walking and driving, and by beautiful calling costumes. A brilliant novelette by M. McClelland, "St. John's Wooing," will run through several numbers. The scene of this story is in the far south, and it is intensely interesting from start to finish.

Greek Humor.

When, after Salamis, Xerxes was in full flight for Asia, and the overcrowded vessel, so the story ran, was laboring in the storm, Xerxes, getting frightened, asked the captain whether there was any chance of safety. "None," said the captain, "unless the ship is lightened of some of its passengers." Whereupon Xerxes, turning to the Persians, exclaimed, "Now is the time to show your loyalty to your king, for on you my safety depends." And without a word the well trained courtiers made obeisance and leaped into the sea.

Thus unburdened, the ship arrived at the land, whereupon Xerxes presented the captain with a golden crown for having saved the king's life, and then ordered his head off for having caused the death of so many noble Persians.—Westminister Review.

In Legal Language.

If a man were to give another an orange he would merely say "I give you this orange," but when the transaction is entrusted to the hands of a lawyer to put in writing, he adopts this form: "I hereby give, grant and convey to you all and singular my estate and interest, right, title, claim and advantage of and in said orange together with all its rind, pulp, and pips therein, with full power to bite, cut, suck and otherwise eat the same, or give the same away, as fully and effectually as I, the A. B. am now entitled to bite, cut, suck or otherwise eat or give the same away, with or without its rind, skin, juice, or pulp, anything herein before or hereinafter or in other deed or deeds, instrument or instruments of what nature or kind soever to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding."—Bristol.

Found a Gold Ring in a Sea Fish.

Lieut. James H. Minor, of the police force, was presented with a gold ring yesterday by Capt. Harry H. Haywood, who at the time of coming in possession of the ring, was in command of the Nova Scotia bark, Alice. Capt. Haywood says that while the bark Alice was on her way from New York to Havana he frequently passed the time in fishing, and on June 14, 1892, he caught a large bonito fish, which on being cut open was found to have a plain gold ring inside. It was the common belief of the sailors on the bark that the fish had bitten off the hand of a man who either fell overboard or went down with his ship. Capt. Haywood has taken a great fancy to Lieut. Minor and gave him the ring as a token of his friendship.—Florida Times-Union.

Won Her Heart.

"You have seen better days, then?"

He looked at the fine piece of pie and big glass of cold milk she set down on the big table for him to finish on, and laid down his knife and fork.

"If you mean by better days, madame," he said, "that I have always been a tramp, I will reply 'yes;' but if you mean by better days that I have ever had pleasanter surroundings than the present, or that I have surrounded pleasanter things," and he blushed, "I will say emphatically that I have not," and the good woman was so pleased that she almost wanted to take him as a permanent boarder.—Detroit Free Press.

A Plain Unvarnished Tale.

A man went into a store in a neighboring town and asked if he could rest four or five hours. The proprietor, who had just found a nest of new-born mice in the coffee grinder, told him he could, and then asked him why he didn't go to the hotel. The man replied: "I am suffering from nervous prostration, and the doctor said to get a quiet place to rest, and I see you don't advertise. I knew that I couldn't find a quieter place." And with that he settled back in his chair and watched the swallows build a nest in the cheese case.—Lynchburg (Pa.) Advance.

IT IS WONDERFUL to think of the beauty and brightness hidden away in a single, tiny, brown flower seed. It is wonderful to know that within the tiniest flower seed is hidden a mystery that the wisest men of all ages have failed to discover and that they may never know—the mystery of form and tint and color. What gives the flower its color? The scientific researches of centuries have failed to discover the secret. It is a beautiful mystery and as far beyond explanation and discovery as the mystery of the tints in the rainbow.

DID YOU EVER think of the difference in meaning between the two verbs, to live and to exist? Did you ever think how few people live compared with those who exist? Did you ever think there may be a blindness far worse than loss of vision—a blindness of the spirit's to the beauty which the Creator has so lavishly supplied in the flowers?

TO NURSING mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a priceless boon, for it not only stengthens the mother, but also promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child. For those about to become mothers, it is even more valuable for it lessens the perils and pains of childbirth and shortens labor. Of all dealers.

"I SUFFERED six years with indigestion and constipation. Got so weak and nervous I had to give up work, feeling miserable all the time.

POULTRY MANAGEMENT.

Wrong Management Causes an Annual Loss of Fifty Per Cent.

For some reason, I don't exactly know why, a great deal of the responsibility of setting the hen seems to fall upon the already well-burdened shoulders of the good wife. I sometimes think that it is owing to her kind care and attention that the chicken is enabled to make as good a record as it does. For surely the method in vogue among farmers is not particularly inducive to success with poultry as commonly understood. Were it not for the favorable conditions afforded by the farm—such as free range, much waste food and the activity that naturally follows—the fowl would not survive many generations, for the care they receive from the average farmer is only very little.

But I wish to speak of the management of the sitting hen and chick—a matter which is apt to be greatly neglected; and I doubt if I exaggerate when I say that there is annually a loss of fifty per cent. of your chicks from pure carelessness and wrong management. This is the opinion of an expert in the New York Tribune. A great deal of this loss comes from vermin, which may easily be avoided by proper care. As soon as the hen shows the maternal instinct, she should be thoroughly dusted with Persian insect powder (ruffling the feathers the wrong way), and repeating the operation as often as once a week, until she is thoroughly freed from the aggravating pest. Her nest should be thoroughly cleansed out, and the material renewed, placing a small quantity of tobacco or sulphur at the bottom. It should be in a separate apartment from the laying hens, as they are apt to be of considerable annoyance to the sitter. Feed and water her regularly until the chicks hatch.

As soon as the downy little ones make their appearance grease the heads of each one with a little lard; remove the shells and leave them alone for twenty-four to thirty six hours. At the expiration of this time remove them to a clean, commodious coop, in a warm, dry "sunny" place, and give them their first meal.

There is considerable differing of opinion as to the best food to start in with; but a little crumbled bread and hard-boiled egg may safely be given. This may be varied with millet or hay seed. The principal point to observe is not to give anything of a wet or "sloppy" nature. This is as fatal as cold or dampness to the chick. Therefore, if mashes or cooked food be given, they should be in a dry, or nearly dry, condition. Hundreds and hundreds of chicks are annually killed by this popular "old-fashioned" process, which leads with a surety, only equaled by the death of the victim itself, to "bowel trouble," so familiar to all raisers of young poultry. Refrain from this, and exercise a little becoming sense and judgment. With this as your guide, the roadway to success is straight and wide, and none, however, weak or wise, need fail.

Pech's Queer Will.

James Pech's last will and testament, hurriedly scrawled with a lead pencil on a torn sheet of grocer's paper a moment before he flung himself from the top of a lumber pile into the stagnant depths of the Chicago river recently, will be only partly carried out. The reason is because his friends say the document affords conclusive proof that the man was insane when he wrote it. This is a copy of the paper, which the officials in the coroner's office say is one of the strangest documents of the kind ever penned:

"Last will and testament of James Pech: I bid good-by to all my Bohemian and Polish friends in Chicago. I bear ill will toward none. To my father in the old country I leave the sum of $200, and to my bride that was to be I leave the same amount. I want a lot which I own to be sold, and the proceeds expended in giving me the finest burial possible. I want a fine coffin. My body must be taken to a Roman Catholic Church, and services held. After I am buried I want my grave decorated with lanterns and candles. I want little girls to come and dance and sing on the top of it. Let there be a band of music and beer. I want a headstone that must cost $500. Have my last wishes carried out."—Chicago Daily News.

Hypnotism Over the Counter.

"Have you ever been hypnotized in a dry goods store?" asked a woman. "I mean, have you ever been waited on by clerks who absolutely force you to buy what you do not want? Let me tell you what happened to me the other morning.

"I went into a store to buy a gown, and in a certain store one of those horrible hypnotic clerks fixed me with his glittering eye and positively controlled my purchase. He mesmerized me into letting him cut me off a gown pattern that I did not want; it did not suit me in color, design, or texture, yet there I stood spellbound and allowed the scissors to seal my doom. A cash boy was then called to carry the purchase to the lining counter. On the way over there I emerged from my hypnotized condition and had my revenge. What do you think I did? I turned a corner, scurried through crowds of other victims, got out a side door and went about my business. No one in the store knew me, and I have felt better ever since. If the hypnotic clerk had trouble with the proprietor about that gown, so much the better. It will teach him not to exercise his mesmeric powers over helpless women."—Albany Express.
