THE CHRONICLE.

CAMBRIDGE MD.

SATURDAY MORNING, March 23, 1844.

EXTRA SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE.—There seems to be considerble excitement in certain portions of the Western Shore, on account of the failure of the Canal Bill in the last House of Delegates. Meetings have been called and resolutions adopted recommending an extra session of the Legislature. There can be no doubt but circumstances may sometimes arise making it expedient & necessary to have an extra session, but we do not think those circumstances now exist. If it were a settled point that it was important to the State that the Canal should be completed according to the provisions of the rejected bill, still we have no reason to believe that that bill could be passed, even if an extra session was called. The same members have to assemble, and we presume that all the light was thrown upon the subject that the friends of the bill possessed, we hope therefore that the Governor will not call an extra session.

STATE STOCKS.—Immediately after the adjournment of the Legislature, the State Sixes fell from near 80 to 75. Whether this fall was occasioned by the defeat of the Canal Bill, as many suppose, or because the holders and purchasers of Stocks had not faith in the efficacy of the bill to enforce the collection of the direct tax or from causes independent of both, we are not skilled enough in these matters to decide But for the last week they have again rallied, and were selling at the beginning of this week at 71 1-2 with an upward tendency.

JOHN C. CALHOUN.—This gentleman has accepted the office of Secretary of State, and is expected daily at Washington.

TEXAS.—We have published in another column, the important news of the negotiation going on for the annexation of Texas to the United States. It appears from more recent information from Washington, that this subject is not a matter for mere speculation but that it will in all probability be brought before the Senate for their action. that it will recieve the sanction of that body we cannot for a moment believe. Independent of the Constitutionnl question, there are many and serious objections to this measure.

To "A QUIET MAN."—

SIR, It is not my desire to disturb the peace of any man in this community, much less the peace of one who assumes the character and name of a "Quiet Man."—My self respect and my regard for truth (to both of which you have taken occasion to allude) compel me however to address you this letter.

You have virtually acknowledged in your communication that you knew I was the author of "A Democrat." You state that you knew "A Democrat" had access to the "Congressional Globe," and you state this in the most emphatic language. To know that "A Democrat" had access to the "Congressional Globe," is to know first who "A Democrat is." For if you have that information which amounts to the absolute certainty of knowledge as to "A Democrats" access to the "Congressional Globe," "A Democrat" must be known to you before you can speak with certainty of his privileges or his connexions.

I never denied I was the author of that call. On the contrary a day or two after its publication, on being questioned, I admitted the fact. I mention this to show the Public the difference in the positions we occupy.—You have taken occasion to dodge behind an anonymous signature, and from this rampart you are firing a shot who is not only ignorant of his foe, and the whereabouts he stands, but from your secret position, defenceless. If you are an honest and brave man you cannot refuse to hand over to me, in the same public manner I now address you, your real name. Then, if I find the game "play worth the candle," I will answer your arguments and resent your satirical allusions. Yours &c.,

B. D. JACKSON.

N. B. Since the above letter was prepared for the Press, I have received a communication signed "A Quiet Man" containing the following remarks.

"Since you have avowed yourself to be the author of "A Democrat," and thus made a personal application of the remarks of "A Quiet Man," it is due to you to state, that nothing in my article was intended as an insidious attempt to enjure your character as a gentleman, or in any manner reflect upon your honor. The personal allusions were made in sportiveness, without any unkind motive, and with no other view than to expose your inconsistency. If the author had wished to injure your character he would have made his attack openly and fearlessly."

In the next paragraph, which is the conclusion of the letter, "A Quiet Man" invites me to a public discussion, and says the terms of that discussion can be settled through Thomas H. Hicks Esq. B. D. J.

To the Editor of the Baltimore Patriot:

SIR:—The bill for the completion of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, which has been so long under consideration in the House of Delegates, was defeated by a decisive vote on the last day of the session. This result is the more to be lamented, as the plan submitted would have finished the work without cost to the State, while the expense of delay, in the accumulation of interest and the suspension of dividends, is jnst $420,000 per year, or $1,150 per day. Men therefore, in whom was vested, for the time, the law making power, have come to the seat of government, remained a whole winter, done nothing and returned home. When I say they have done nothing, I speak of course in reference to the Canal, the completion of which, as a means of prospective relief to the tax-payers of Maryland, is in the opinion of well judging men, infinitely more important than all the financial schemes ever proposed for contemplation.

If this were the first instance that a session of the Legislature has been permitted to pass over, leaving the canal untouched, the case might admit of some explanation—some excuse. But it is not the first, nor even the second. It is in fact the fourth year that the same thing has been repeated at Annapolis, and the policy has grown into a legislative habit, by which the people of Maryland have been burthened with a debt of $1,600,000, accruing from mere inertness and delay. The idea of the sale of the State's interest in the work, however captivating it may have appeared to some at the last session, is looked to by scarcely any one now, as affording the slightest prospect of relief. Yet even the scheme of a sale, though modified by the bill which passed the House of Delegates at the last session, was in the opinion of its friends made worse instead of better, and was therefore properly rejected by the Senate.

It is due to many of those gentlemen of the House, by whose votes this lamentable result was brought about, and upon whose course I intend to cast no censure, to say that they came from portions of the State in which the popular voice of the late election, was understood to be opposed to the completion of the Canal. They had pledged themselves to their people to go against that specific measure. And when by a most extraordinary intervention from another quarter, a proposal was made in effect, to supersede the completion of the Canal in the transportation of heavy burthens and at rates of charge below all former experience, it was natural that they should seize upon an alterative, by which they were persuaded the great object all had in view could be accomplished, and at the same time no pledge made to their people at home, would be violated.

The above explanation will be intelligible to the gentlemen alluded to, and is sufficiently specific for all present purposes. The object of this note, however, is to say, that I intend to claim a portion of your columns for a series of papers, addressed to the people of Maryland, and intended for their information. I propose to examine in one detail the whole Canal question, as it is termed, and shall be mainly solicitous to state facts, which though extant in various authentic forms, are still, as I believe, unknown to the great mass of the people, who by recent events have become so deeply, not to say vitally, interested in their promulgation.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient serv't,

Baltimore, March 11, 1844. WM. PRICE.

THE UNITED STATES AND TEXAS.

Important developments are made in the National Intelligencer of Saturday, which go to show that the reports which have heretofore been current, but were not believed, of the negotiation of a Treaty for the annexation of Texas to the United States, were substantially correct. Want of room prevents us from publishing the entire article of the Intelligencer, but the following extracts from it will be found to embrace its principal parts:—Balt. American.

It is proper that we should state to our readers what knowledge we have recently acquired on this subject, from sources to be relied upon, and endeavor to open their eyes to the dark cloud which overhangs the public peace and the national welfare, if not the existence of this Union.

It is now some months ago—probably not long after the retirement of Mr. WEBSTER from the Department of State—that an overture was made. by this Government, through the Secretary of State, inviting from the Executive of Texes (Gen. HOUSTON) a proposition for the annexation of Texes to the United States. This overture was, at first, if we understood rightly, rather cooly recieved by the Cheif of the young Republic. But, since the meeting of Congress, the Government of Texes having been again approached—we will not say importuned, though circumstances almost justify the use of that phrase—by the Executive of the United States, Gen. HOUSTON did at length consent to negotiate on the subject. The terms of an arrangement between the high contracting parties are already arranged; and, if not already done, they are to be reduced forthwith to the form of a Treaty, through the agency of a Special Minister from Texes, (Mr. HENDERSON,) who is already on his way to this city for the purpose, if before his paper goes to press, he have not already arrived.

So far as the President of the United States and the President of Texes are concerned, the Treaty is all but made.

This information has, we confess, filled our minds with humiliation and apprehension. Humiliation at the unauthorised and almost clandestine manner in which, after having heretofore solemnly rejected, for unanswerable reasons, a proposition for annexation, when sought by the Government of Texes, our own Government has gone a wooing to that of Texes and solicited its favours; and apprehension of the consequence of the consumation of the Treaty, which the President at least has been made to believe will be promptly ratified by a constitutional majority of the Senate of the United States.

The sudden occurrence of this question, we have already intimated, is one of those occasions of engrossing interest, which, like that of a foreign invasion, or a rebellion at home—a pestilence, or an earthquake—ought to suspend for a time all mere party differences and contentions. It is a question of peace or war, of self preservation, of national existence, in comparison with which the ordinary topics of party controversy dwindle into absolute insignificance.

While speaking thus, we know and feel that we are expressing sentiments not in accord with those of some of our political friends. We sincerely regret it, on our account and on theirs. But when, in our opinion, a great danger impends, we must not be deterred by such considerations from sounding the alarm, and calling upon public opinion to make itself heard at the Capital in tones which can neither be misunderstood nor disregarded.

The annexation of Texes to this Union, under present circumstances, is opposed, in our judgment, by a host of considerations, of which it will not be possible for us to-day more than to enumerate the chief.

Our first objection to the annexation of Texes is, that it cannot be accomplished without involving the country in war; too great a price to pay for any territorial acquisition whatever, which the National honor does not demand.

Our second objection is, that, far from demading this acquisition, the National honor forbids it. So long as war continues between Mexico and Texes, and a solemn Treaty of Peace and Amity exists between us and Mexico, we cannot, without violating the sacred faith of treaties, undertake to possess ourselves of the Territory, to which Mexico still maintains her right. We have, it is true, acknowledged the independence of Texes, as we had a right to do, for certain international purposes, but that recognition did not extinguish or in any manner affect the rights of Mexico upon Texes. The obligations of our Treaty with Mexico remain untouched, and Mexico would have the same right to posess herself (if she could) of any State of this Union as the Government of the United States has to posess itself of Texes.

Our third great objection (whic would be conclusive without the preceding) is, that the Territory of the United States is already large enough. It is infinitely more important that we should people and improve what we have than grasp after more, especially when its acquisition would be inevitably attend with discord and dissatisfaction. It is far more important to the happiness of the people of the United States that they should enjoy in peace, contentment, and harmony, what they already have, than that they should place all those blessings at hazard by this new experiment.

Our fourth objection is, that, if the "annexation" of Texes were in other respects desirable, one entire third of this Union at least forbids the bans, doubts the constitutional right to establish connexion, and declares its determination to resist it. The proposition to annex or incorporate a Foreign Nation in this Union, moreover, is entirely new, and the authority to do it is solemnly questioned. This objection would have much less force had we, in this case, instead of recognizing the independence of Texes, negotiatee with Mexico, with or without the consent of the People of Texas, for the acquisition of that territory. We would not, merely to acquire more land, (of which we have already more than we want) jeopard the existance of the Union, which ought to be dearer to the heart of every American citizen than any consideration extraneous to it.

Fifthly, we dread the beginning by the United States of a system of acquisition of foreign territory by conquest (which, as things stand, the annexation of Texes would effectively be,) or even by purchase. Once begin it and where will it end? Shall we ever have territory enough for ambition, though we have enough for our wants?

I remember hearing of a dear lover of books, who had his library burned down to the ground. When his friends expressed their surprise that he should bear his loss with so much calmness, his reply was, "I must have learned but little from my books, if they have not taught me to endure the loss of them."

Important Invention.—Mr. James Liggett, of Ladiesburg, Frederick county, Md., has just completed the working model of a machine which is considered by many to be the greatest discovery of the age. It is the application of the power of the screw to wheel machinery, whereby the gain of power is so great that, with a screw weiging from one to one and a half tons, a man would be able to propel a train of cars on a railroad with as much force and velocity as is now attained by the locomotive. It occupies but a small space, and can be applied to any kind of wheel machinery. By reason of the infirmities of age, together with pecuniary embarrassments, he has been, thus far, unable to have an effective machine costructed, and his wish now is to call public attention to the subject, in the hope that some enterprizing person may be induced to embark in the matter.

A Brisk Little Place.—In giving an account of a lively little town out West, it is said that in one day they recently had two street fights, hung a man, rode three out of town on a rail, got up a quarter race, a turkey shooting, a gander pulling, a match dog fight, had preaching by a Methodist circuit rider, who afterwards run a foot-race for drinks "all round;" and as if this was not enough, the judge of the court, after loosing a year's salary at single-handed poker, and whipping a person who said he did'nt understand the game, went out and hanged to Lynch a man for hog-stealing.

A negro, who was called on as a witness in a Court in North Caroling, a few days ago, on being examined as to the nature of an oath, was asked if he knew what would be the consequence here and hereafter, if he swore to a lie. "Yes," said he, "ears off, and no share in the Kingdom!"

Carpenters.—The journeymen house carpenters of Philadelphia held a large meeting on Monday evening, and resolved not to recieve any trade in payment for their labour, to demand hereafter as their wages, $1.25 per day, and piece work at proportionate prices.

Millerism.—A negro man belonging to Mr. James P. Richardson living near Centreville, has gone crazy from attending the Millerite discussions. He imagines that the world is about to be destroyed, and that he is commissioned to begin the firing of it. On Sunday night he escaped from his confinement, and ranging six or eight miles from home, howling, crying and praying in great agony. He has been retaken and confined in jail.—Centreville Times.

A Duel Prevented.—The police of Philadelphia were called upon on Monday, to suppress a duel which was about to take place between two "colored gentlemen." The following is a true copy of the challenge:

Mr. Fostor—I am informed that you have bin saying A greateal about me. that you had no Bisiness to say, and i consider you No gentleman. and fore the same i demand satisfaction.—you can meete me. at any our. that you appoint. JOHN LEWIS.

Later from the West Indies.—The St. George's Grenada Chronicle contains a communication from Mr. Stephenson stating a fact worth recording namely, that on the occurrence of the earthquake in that Island on the 19th January, those clocks of which the pendulums oscillated from east to west were almost all stopped, while those whose pendulums vibrated from north to south were not affected. The Dominica Colonist states that the same shock was felt in that Island, and that there have been frequent recurrences of them. for example, on the 30th and two on the 31st January. and one on the 3d inst. We observe also in the St. Lucia Indpenent Press a notice from a Martinique paper of a meteor which was seen there on the 14th of January.—Antigua Register, Feb 15.
