JAMES S. BRADLEY

Chestertown, Md., Dealer in

DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, NOTIONS, BOOTS AND SHOES, and a GENERAL STOCK OF MERCHANDISE, embracing everything to be found in a well-stocked establishment. For 20 years our business has enjoyed a steady increase, and to-day we number among our customers some who started with us in our infancy. In looking over our stock we find that we have too many goods at this season of the year. They must move, consequently we have reduced the price. Many useful articles in

Dry Goods & Boots & Shoes, are included in this sale, and the advantages to our customers will be more appreciated when they see the goods. GOOD WOOLEN BLANKETS are now in the reach of everybody, as the prices are lower than ever. Our Underwear in Shirts and Drawers are especially cheap, while the complete line of other goods are never higher, but sometimes less than others. Thanking my friends who have dealt with me in the past, I respectfully ask a continuance of the same in the future.

OFFICE OF THE

Local Board of Health.

CHESTERTOWN, MD., Feb. 28, 1895.

It is necessary to take the greatest care and precaution to prevent the spread of contagious diseases, especially diseases of so serious and much to be dreaded a character as scarlet fever and diphtheria. The observance of the rules of sanitation, antisepsis and quarantine will quite surely result in the protection of the well and limit the number of cases of such diseases.

The State law imposes a penalty on all parents or guardians who heedlessly or carelessly expose those under their care suffering with contagious diseases, and while the sick, of course, do not attend school, the other children are too often allowed to continue at school, the teachers being in entire ignorance of the existence of contagion at home. This with other instances of willful and careless exposure and disregard of the welfare of others, is greatly to be condemned, and teachers, parents, and guardians are requested to assist in the enforcement of Sec. 5, Chap. 155, Laws 1882, which section has especial reference as above referred to.

Whenever a case of scarlet fever or diphtheria occurs, it should at once be isolated, the room most remote from those occupied by the family should be selected. All articles of furniture, carpets and curtains removed—a mattress and bed-clothing that may be disposed of or thoroughly disinfected—a chair and a table is all the necessary furniture. The one who is to do the care-taking and nursing should be the only person to enter the room. Disinfectants should be freely used about the room, the patient and the nurse. The doctor will order such as he considers effective. Clothing wrung out in Bi-chloride solution, Platt's Chlorides dilude², Chloride of Lime, Carbolic Acid or other suitable fluids, should be hung about the room and wetted at regular intervals. As the disease subsides and the "peeling" stage goes on the patient should daily be anointed with vaseline charged with some disinfectant, this not only hastens the exfeliation, but helps to destroy some at least of the germs so well-known to be living on this dead skin. All spoons, glasses, cups, &c., used by the patient should immediately be put in boiling water. All clothing, napkins, towels or cloths should be disinfected by immersion in Bi-chloride of Mercury 1-1000, Carboli: Acid 1-40, or other solution, then boiled. Such as are of small value or not likely to be wanted again, should be burnt.

After convalescence is complete and the peeling entirely done, the patient should be freshly dressed in another room, the sick-room fumigated with sulphur, scoured with Bi-chloride solution 1 to 3,000, the wall whitewashed and thoroughly aired for several days. Bedding, if a cheap mattress, had better be destroyed, if valuable it should be exposed to air and sunlight for days after having exhausted all means of cleanliness. The bed-clothing should be treated as the cloths and napkins above mentioned.

The same directions may be followed in diphtheria.

Of course to follow the above will give work and trouble, the expense, however, is slight, and however much trouble or work is caused, the benefit accruing therefrom are so manifold and so reassuring as to warrant any amount of trouble.

The occurence of a few cases of any contagious disease does not necessarily mean anything alarming. "To be forewarned," however, means to be "forearmed."

Should death occur from scarlet fever, diphtheria, smalc pox or any malignant contagious disease, there should by no means be a funeral. The body should be wrapped in a sheet or other article saturated with Bi-chloride of mercury 1 to 500, placed in a coffin and quietly buried.

Children and others who have had either diphtheria or scarlet fever, or who have been exposed to the contagion of either, should not go in public places, church or school until three (3) weeks have elapsed since complete desquamation or exposure, and teachers should not readmit to school except upon certificate of physician that such admission is safe and prudent.

The secretary of this board would be greatly obliged to physicians, parents, teachers and others if they would at once notify him of the occurrence of cases of diphtheria, small-pox or scarlet fever. Stress should be laid upon the fact that mild cases may be the cause of the most severe and malignant, and that what is sometimes called "Scarletina" is Scarlet Fever, even though it be light or mild, as the technical name of scarlet fever is Scarletina.

cal actions in the use of their elective franchise and influence by saying "I did that as a servant of my political party and not as a servant of my church." This action reminds us forcibly of a certain clergyman who was accused of a sinful and unministerial act and acknowledged it, but endeavored to justify himself by saying, "I did that as a man and not as a minister." "Yes" responded the deacon of the committee "but when the devil gets the man what will become of the minister?" And so brethren with regard to political action and influence. When we are judged in our action as partisans and punished or rewarded accordingly, what will become of the Christian who lived in the same house and wore the same clothing as the man who cast his vote against purity and temperance reform? We do not hesitate therefore to say as we face this monster iniquity, that in our country it is and always must be a political factor. And no matter how strenuously some may object to the mixing of politics and religion, as they call it, it must be mixed, and a man's conscientious convictions in this matter must be reflected in his ballot on election day.

Now we acknowledged there is a wide difference of opinion as to methods of opposing the liquor traffic. Some hold that it should be fought on a non-partisan basis, all moral elements uniting to oppose it regardless of party affiliation. We acknowledge this would be well if it could be accomplished. Much has been accomplished. Prohibitory laws have been incorporated in the Constitutions of several States. Let us pause here to say that prohibitory laws are the only satisfactory laws. Restriction has long been tried and its efficacy proven to be almost useless. High license has proven equally unsatisfactory. "No license" is the watchword now, and the view adopted by our branch of the church. "It cannot be licensed without sin," is the battle-cry of Methodism, and largely the sentiment of all Christian churches. Prohibition has been accomplished in some places—we are glad to say it is adopted in Kent county by a united effort on the part of all moral forces regardless of party. But we confess that in this way the mills of God grind slowly, more slowly we are certain then God Himself desires that they shall grind. Political parties are so fearful of the saloon-power, and the estrangement of their vote, thus endangering the dominance of their party, that little has been accomplished, and men who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness in this matter, have often become discouraged as Ephraim joined to his idol has forced his neck to the yoke and his hands to the shackles of his political party year after year, regardless of the cry of the prophet who in the name of his God, to whom they also claim allegiance, is crying "Make straight in the wilderness a highway for our God."

We must confess that as we stand every year and uncover our heads at the graves of the 90,000 victims of strong drink; as we contemplate the woe and sorrow made bare in the statistics, part of which have been collated and presented this morning, and knowing that the carnage increases instead of decreases, we can but cry "Oh Lord, how long" and find our sympathy going to that party which says make the destruction of this monster the central plank in the platform of a party. Give us a ticket composed of men pledged to the framing and execution of prohibitory laws and we will support them, trusting that with men seeking first the kingnom of God and His righteousness in this matter all things else of wise legislation will be added thereto. Such men are called by some, "Temperance fanatics," but I ask you candidly, where is their fanaticism? They stand and hear the champions of the dominant parties advocating various financial policies for the relief of the business interests of the country, and the payment of the national debt. They turn to the statistics we have considered this morning and see that in this chasm of waste and woe $2,000,000,000 is sunk annually, enough to pay the national debt in a year and relieve every vestage of financial depression if poured into the avenues of legitimate trade, and to make the desert places to bloom and blossom as the rose.

Instead of crying for protection against foreign manufactures, they say give us protection against those who are manufacturing paupers and criminals at home and flooding our country with misery and woe. Instead of calling for free trade to bring the cheapest goods to our people, they say give us freedom from the trade that robs our laborers of the means of purchasing the comforts and necessities of life at any price They look at the jail, the poorhouse, the asylum, the grave yard and they say give us a party that will practice a policy that will tend to depopulate these places and stop the agonizing cry of drunkards' wives and children that continually grate upon our ears and hearts. Is there such a party with which I can cast my vote? Is there a party given to this new deliverance from the bondage of sin? If so we ask, Why do campaign orators stir up the animosities of thirty years ago to carry victory to their party? Why do men hang importance upon minor matters and past issues? Why do they not, as Wendall Phillips counselled at the end of the war, "Close the ranks and go forward to new reforms?" Why do they not do as St. Paul counselled when he said, "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, I press forward to that which is before."

The question arises, Are the old parties doing this? Are they adopting new reforms, looking forward to the purification of our beloved land? Or are they trying, to say the least, to serve God and mammon. The Christian's command is, choose, "If the Lord be God, serve Him, if Bael, then serve him." The old parties are too often on the knee to Bael, to hold the patronage of those that sigh and that groan over these abominations. You remember that the Lord commanded in the prophecy by Ezekiel, the man clothed with linen, to take a writer's inkhorn in his hand and go through the city and set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof. If such an order were given now in regard to this matter, the majority of the men upon whom would be placed the mark would be found in the ranks of the party pledged to the Prohibition of this accursed traffic. And why? Because patience has ceased to be a virtue will those who had hoped for deliverance through the dominent parties now existing. The saloon element dominates every time, prevents a declaration against this wrong and even procures a declaration in favor of this wrong. When the present chief executive of the United States was a candidate, the National Brewers' Association waited on him and demaned a declaration of his attitude on that question, and in order not to offend, he declared himself opposed to all sumptuary laws regarding the drink traffic. A few years ago the Secretary of State of the opposite party, the idol of that party and once its standard bearer as a presidential candidate, so far prostituted his office as Secretary of State, in the Brewers' interests, as to send out circulars to the American consuls in foreign ports inquiring as to the possibility of establishing a market for the products of American breweries and distilleries in those countries, and at the same time an American missionary, pointing out of his window to the senseless bodies of a dozen natives made beastly drunk on American liquor, said, "How are we going to counteract these influences sent before us to hinder our work and damn this people, from our so-called Christian land." And so we too often blindly labor for good, sending a few thousand dollars to convert the heathen and voting into office men who prostitude the machinery of the government to more than neutralize all the good the missionary can accomplish. It is a significant fact that this party idol was overthrown when aspiring to the presidency by such methods, by the Prohibition vote of the State of New York, and that all such idols may be buried in the dust of defeat is the prayer of every voter whose chief purpose is the reign of righteousness and the overthrow of sin. True reformers grow sick at heart as year by year they see the parties with which they have labored, groveling in the dust before the organized whiskey traffic and crying for their favor.

The Methodist Church has had no more worthy and influential layman than Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, and the Republican party never had a more faithful supporter, and yet for years he and men of like mind besought their party to make the abolition of the liquor traffic a principle of their platform, but without success. And finally, when Gen. Fisk learned that a petition prepared and signed by his wife and a host of the best ladies of the land, zealous in temperance reform, and presented to the committee on platform at a convention for the nomination of a president, asking them to put a plank in the platform endorsing the prohibition of the liquor traffic, had been thrown under the table with contemptuous jeers and spat upon with the remark? "Do they think we are such consummate fools as to do a thing so suicidal to our party." When he learned this, Gen. Fisk retired forever from that party and as candidate for president on the Prohibition ticket polled 250,000 votes (which were counted to him) in the campaign of 1888. The action of this fearless servant of God now passed to his reward, is worthy of the thoughtful consideration of all men. We must remember the duty of man, not to place any idol before God. The Lord, our God is a jealous God." The kingdom of God and His righteousness must be first sought. If renunciation of party idolatry is as the plucking out of a right eye, or the cutting off of a right arm, the Scripture teaches us what is best to be done. As we have said honest men differ in opinion in this matter, but we must say that considering the awful carnage of this national evil, men of all parties ought to be willing to step out on a platform erected with an eye single to its overthrow and support by their sufferage no party that does not make its overthrow one of its basal principles. But how this is to be accomplished we cannot say, but that it must eventually prevail we do say. "It may not be my way, it may not be thy way, but yet in His own way the Lord will prevail." The monster is doomed. It is for the church as containing the masses of God-fearing and God-serving men, to say when. We can be apathetic and indifferent and put off the day of redemption indefinately. Or we can be energetic, burning with holy zeal and hurry the battle and gain the victory in an amazingly short time.

As Lord Nelson said prior to his great naval conflict: "England expects her every man this day to do his duty." God, the captain of our salvation, says to us:

"Onward, Christian soldiers,
Marching as to war;
With the cross of Jesus
Going on before."

Constantine saw the cross in the heavens and heard the words, "By this sign conquer." So the one who hung upon the cross says to all who would take up His warfare and fight His battles, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against you." I am glad that we have in this community a large body of men pledged to the antagonizing of this evil. I congratulate the Law and Order League of Chestertown upon their purpose and zeal. I beseech of you that you lay not off the armor in this warfare. But remember that the latitude of your responsibility is not confined to this town or county. This is a battle, the field of which is the world. Caesar violated the law when he plunged his spurs in his steed and urged him beyond the Rubicon. Alexander and Napoleon erred in carrying personal ambitions too far. But in this matter there is no Rubicon, no limit to ambition. Let your voice be heard. You have a one man vote and power, not only in your own municipality, but "Maryland my Maryland" should challenge your love and redemptive power so far as this evil is concerned. The whole "Land of the free and home of the brave" should be rescued before you rest. Yea, the kingdoms of this world should be ruled by God in this matter e'er you think to say "amen and amen." Remember the commission; Seek not peace, peace, when there is no peace. Jesus Christ said: "I came not to bring peace, but a sword, and a man's foes shall be they of his own house." Don't hesitate to agitate. Let your voice be heard in the church as well as the State.

You remember the language of the patriotic rector in the days of the Revolutionary Rising. After preaching a sermon urging his people to rise up and fight for their country's freedom, he threw aside his robes and revealed a full suit of uniform and asked who would follow him personally to the field. In the language of the poet's description of the scene, one cried out,

"Cease, traitor, cease,
God's temple is the house of peace.
Then others answered nay, not so,
When God is with a righteous cause
His holiest places then are ours,
His temples are our forts and towers
That frown upon a tyrant foe,
In this, the dawn of freedom's day,
There is a time to fight and pray."

The last sentiment is true. The saloon power would ask no greater victory, if they could drive back the men of God to the church to pray for deliverance from this curse, and not come forth to fight for it. But, thank God, we have not so learned the divine law.

In the days of the great temperance crusade, when our sisters set us such a worthy example of faith and work, they went to the house of God to pray and from there to the saloon they carried the warfare with wonderous success. From the days when God ordered Joshua and David to the field He commissions His servants to draw the sword and smite the serpent's head. This is the serpent of to-day and the time when his head shall fall to the dust will not be far from the millennium morn. Let the servants of God be not weary or discouraged in well-doing. Look at Gideon's two hundred and fifty men and the retreating forms of the millions of Midians! Behold! the youthful David with his foot on the neck of the giant Goliah and his head in his hands and the thousand of Philistines whose slaughter followed his faith and work. Mark all the Holy wars in which the Lord of Hosts has armed the right. You are in the right if you enlist your power in this, the greatest of righteous wars of all times. "Oh fail not, faint not, but arise, the judge is at the door." Be faithful in local issues, but see no Rubicon bounding your efforts. Enforce this law and order on all. Grasp every weapon, be conscientious in the use of that great factor of responsibility and power, the ballot. See no face and hear no voice as you take it up, but the face and voice of God. If the Lord be God, serve Him. If the Bael of political party serve him; but remember that in this matter we cannot serve God and mammon. So live, so act, so pray, so die, that when your action stands, as every man's must, for Divine scrutiny, God can say "Well done good and faithful servant." And remember the promise of the text, The gates of hell shall not prevail against you," the ultimate issue on the truth of God must be victory.

Closing the ranks and pressing to this greatest of reforms, may these words of St. Paul at the close of that wonderful XVth of 1st Corinthians steady our hands, our heads, our hearts. "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in (this) work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Baker's Store

Looks as Fine as the Beautiful Snow

It's being whispered all around by our folks, "how does Baker sell goods so cheap?" Well, indeed, we do not steal them, but time's have been so hard, that I, the leading merchant of Fairlee, rule the prices, and I propose to make them go regardless of price, so now is your chance. We quote a few leading articles. Granulated Sugar 4½c. E. Leverings Coffee 22½c. Men's Shirts, worth 50c. 44c. Overalls, 44c. Tobacco, worth 50c. now selling for 29c. Cigars, best 2 for 5. Call.

ALLIE BAKER,

Jan. 31, 1895. FAIRLEE, MD.
