HE IS BURIED ALIVE.

George Simon Undergoes Voluntary Interment.

TO REMAIN TILL WEDNESDAY.

Will Fast And Go The Hospital To Recuperate After it is Over—He Describes His Experiences.

Geo. Simon, of Buffalo, N.Y., was buried on Sunday afternoon at River View Park Baltimore, and remained buried until Wednesday afternoon. In order to secuse the burial Simon did not pursue the usual course of dying, but went down into the grave alive for the purpose of eliciting dimes from thoes who want to see, or at leasth ear a living man in his grave. There is nothing mysterious about the performance, and there is not a hiat of mesmerism or occult control of the spirit which enables the operator to lay aside the weakness of the flesh and remain in a trance. Simon claims to do without food or drink during his voluntary interment.

His coffin was a box 6 feet long, 3 feet wide and 2½ feet deep. Connection from the surface was maintained by two wooden tubes, each four inches square, one at the head and the other at the foot. Inside the coffin he had a blanket, a pillow and an incandescent electric light. It was intended to place the coffin so deep that the top would be 4 feet below the surface of the earth, but when the diggers got down to a depth which would leave the top of the box about two feet under the surface so much water collected in the hole that they could go no farther. As it is, the box rested on blocks to keep it dry.

Half-past three on Sunday afternoon was the time set for the burial, but before the obsequies could begin a rainstorm caused a postponement to a later hour. After several attaches of the park had bailed the water out of the holes under the tent over the grave and had scattered cinders to furnish a dry footing Simon appeared, climbed down into the coffin, the earth was piled on, and his long confinement began.

TELLS OF HIS EXPERIENCES

Simon is a young man, being, according to his account, only 20 years old. He is thin and weak looking, which he says is due to the number of voluntary fasts he has endured. He said before going under ground:

"I began this burying business three years ago and am in it simply for the purpose of making money. I will go down today and come up on Wednesday and then go down again on the following Sunday. It was only by constant practice that I was able to develop the will power necessary to enable me to fast so long, and I assure you that I do fast the entire time I am buried, receiving not a drop to drink nor a crumb to eat.

"When I first began the trick a day was all I could stand. Later I got so I could stand a day and a night. Now I can stay down three days without much effort compared to the trouble I use to have. My longest period without food or drink was five days and four nights, and it nearly finished me. On one occasion I was down for fifteen days, but took nourishment during that time. Even at that, when it was over, I had to be lifted out of the coffin, I was so weak and cramped.

"I carry nothing in the coffin with me except a half-pint of whisky, which I use in case I suddenly become faint. When I leave the box I go at once to a hospital and there remain for a couple of days getting my strength back.

MONEY THE ONLY OBJECT.

"I become very cramped while lying in the box and get but little chance to shift my position during the day, as I have to lie on my back to talk through the tube to people who come into the tent. The box I have here is a little larger than the one I expected, and I am not sorry for it.

"Not much ventilation can be secured through the two tubes, and the condition of the air is thus made another unpleasant feature. During the day I have plenty to think about in answering the questions of people who visit the grave, but at night, when no one is around, the time passes very slowly, and if it were not for the thought that I am making money out of it I would have to give it entirely up. I sleep about four hours a night, but it is not easy to do much sleeping when you are hungry.

"I am going to keep my contract and appear here, but I am afraid the damp ground will have its effect upon me, for after one burial in a wet spot I had a severe attack of rheumatism."

On The Box Seat.

The automobiling youth of Newport have established the custom of driving with carriage dogs. The canine companion invariably accompanies his master mounted on the box seat of the "auto." This is promotion from the old custom which allowed, and trained the dogs to run under the coach.

But an "auto" flies two fast for a fleet hound to follow long, so "Fido" or "Bobs" is promoted to a seat, and that the best his master can offer.

With the Boston terrier by the side, one sees the jeunesse dorie of Newport, plying their automobiles along Bellevue avenue of a bright morning in Newport.
