Spring Clothes.

When you buy a suit of clothes, you're pretty much at the mercy of the clothier. The suit looks good to you, but then you don't know what's back of the looks. The inside making—the parts you don't see—is what counts, and you have got to leave it to the merchant's sense of honor to give you a suit that's properly made.

Our clothes are made especially for us. We know what's inside; you see the outside, and we guarantee every garment and to back up its good looks by giving good wear. The same can be said of Youth's and Children's Suits.

Yours for business,

J. D. LUCAS.

To be Imposing Structure.

Those who have not examined the plans and drawings of the new administration building at Washington College, which is now under course of erection, have no idea what an imposing and handsome structure it will be. We hope to be able to secure a cut of the building shortly, and the people will then have an opportunity to get a better idea of the size and scope of the building. These are the main points in connection with the structure:

It will be three stories high with basement. The top of the building will be on a line almost with the top of the west domitory on the terrace, which statement will give some idea of the commanding height of the building.

The building will be of fine red brick with elaborate ornamentation. The basement will be occupied by the boiler and heating plant rooms and by the manual training department fitted up with the latest equipment, and which will be an entirely new feature in the college course.

The first floor will contain class rooms, the president's public and private offices, and the large auditorium, which will form an L to the building. This auditorium will seat from 450 to 500 persons, and will be the scene of future commencements and college entertainments.

The second floor will contain large and convenient class rooms, cloak rooms and corridors leading to a commodious balcony overlooking the stage in the large auditorium on the first floor.

The third floor will be devoted almost exclusively to the department of physics. Here will be located the physical, chemical and biological laboratories with lecture room fitted up amphitheatre style, and class rooms. Each of the laboratories will communicate with the other, so as to render the transfering of apparatus from one to the other room easy. The interior of each room will be finished in the most modern style, and the building will be heated, lighted and ventilated on the most modern plans. The sanitary conditions will be as perfect as they can possibly be made. The building will cost when finished and furnished about $50,000, and it will be one of the finest college buildings in the State. Contractors W. S. & A. M. Culp will spare no pains to make the architectural features perfect, and it is already rumored that this is only the beginning of a new era in the history of our beloved institution. Let the Alumni Association work for the success of the college.

Wedding Bells.

SMITH—WEBB.

A beautiful home wedding was solemnized on Wednesday eve at 8 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Cleaver when their popular and accomplished granddaughter, Miss Elizabeth B. Webb, became the bride of Mr. Charles Medford Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Smith, of near Kennedyville. The parlor of the home was artistically decorated for the occasion, and under an arch of evergreen and white lilac from which was suspended a beautiful bell of white lilac the ceremony was performed. The bride, attired in a handsome gown of white Paris mousseline trimmed with point de esprit with tulle veil and carrying a shower bouquet of bride's roses and maiden hair ferns, entered the parlor on the arm of the groom, preceded by the little flower girl, Mary Watkins, prettily decked in wite silk and doing her part nicely. Miss May Webb, cousin of the bride, attired in silk batiste over blue silk carrying white carnations, Miss Mary Smith, sister of the groom, attired in white silk mull over pink silk carrying pink carnations, acted as bride's maids, and his two brothers, Messrs. John and Will Smith, and Mr. Will Weist, of Millington, and Reese Sparks, of Sudlersville, acted as ushers, wearing full dress suits, buttoneers of white and pink carnations.

Promptly at the hour of 8 o'clock to the enlivened strains of the wedding march rendered by Miss Annie Brock, attired in a white princess suit, the bridal party entered the parlor.

During the ceremony performed by Rev. G. J. Hooker, pastor of the M. P. Church, Miss Flora Johnson, wearing white silk with chiffon trimmings, sang very sweetly, "O, Promise Me." The matrimonial knot securely tied, the way was then open for congratulations received by the bride and groom. Proceeding to the dining-room which was beautifully and artistically draped, the table was filled with every requisite pleasing to the eye and catering to the taste. They were the recipients of many valuable presents. The goodbyes and kind wishes sounding amid the rain of rice falling in all directions with a song of gladness that will never lose its sweetness, the guests which numbered 250, left for their homes. May every blessing attend the happy pair.

AN EYE WITNESS.

CHESTERTOWN

GROWS DAILY IN PRESTIGE AND POPULARITY AS A TRADE CENTER.

Exceptional Educational and Resident Advantages.

Sketches of Local Business Enterprises, Their Owners and Their Methods Whose Enterprise and Alertness are Successful Trade Builders.

CHESTERTOWN, the county seat of Kent county, one of the richest agricultural districts of the Eastern Shore, is located along the left bank of the Chester river, about sixty miles from Baltimore, and a three hours ride from Philadelphia. Its population will reach thirty-five hundred persons, of which it can be said that the best class of citizenship is embodied, and which is manifested in cultivated tastes and manner, in the preservation of a refined moral tone which is uplifting, and in a home pride which is always the incentive for progressive and generous effort in any proposition or measure tending to advance the general welfare.

Chestertown is conveniently accessible by four trains daily whose connections place one within a few hours ride of Philadelphia and New York; and by a steamboat line, whose daily arrivals and departures for Baltimore places that city withing easy reach. Long and short distance telephone service maintains constant communication with the world at large, and several rural routes, radiating from the local postoffice, provide the conveniences of modern postal methods. Chestertown has several good hotels and the best of banking facilities, and along these lines the facilities are thoroughly representative. As a place of residence no town offers better inducements. The climatic conditions are superb for the promotion of health, and the water supply cannot be excelled in purity and reliability of service. To these natural advantages may be added the entire absence of the demoralizing influences of the saloon, the enemy of the home, for none are permitted in the community. Chestertown has four churches, representing the leading denominations, and presided over by men of pronounced learning and piety, whose zealous efforts promote and foster a christian spirit, which in the last analysis is the foundation of the best citizenship. It has also incomparable educational facilities which are maintained by Washington College, an institution presided over by an eminent faculty, and whose students, male and female, come from all parts of Maryland, Delaware and Virginia to secure an education in literature, the sciences and the arts. A public school system, reaching the high grades, and in charge of educators of pronounced ability and experience, supply popular needs in a highly efficient manner; and the results achieved and the high standard maintained place Chestertown's public schools in a prominent position among Maryland's educational institutions.

Chestertown's municipal advantages include excellent water and sewer systems and a volunteer fire department, all of which contribute to safeguard health and protect property from the ravages of fire.

All the leading fraternal organizations thrive in Chestertown, and they foster a spirit of fraternity and fellowship which are reflected in the characteristic of pronounced hospitality.

No town on the Eastern Shore surpasses Chestertown as a home location, a statement verified by the handsome and pretty homes to be found all over town, and especially on Washington avenue and along Front street, whose residence features and appointments command admiration and are the source of a justifiable local pride. The conveniently located park in front of the court house, with its handsome fountain and refreshing shade, the work of Chestertown's fair ladies, is another evidence of a becoming public spirit, crystallized in an achievement both beautifying and deservedly popular.

As a trade center Chestertown's merchants offer the best possible inducements. They carry large stocks, the productions of the country's leading manufacturers, and by their alertness to popular needs and by their constant enterprise conditions are secured that consults best the interests of the public in supplying living accommodations. Chestertown's merchants hourly in their trade relations prove the oft repeated assertion that ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS GOES FARTHER IN THEIR STORES THAN IN BALTIMORE, for they buy direct from the maker at the lowest wholesale prices, conduct business at small expense and are satisfied with a reasonable profit. There is no excuse for going away from home, and all will agree that it is only right and fair to give preference to the home merchant, whose taxes help to build our roads, support our schools and churches, and otherwise provide the benefits which, as a cummunity, all enjoy.

Chestertown's industrial advantages are evidenced in a basket factory, a strawboard factory, a large canning factory, ice plant, two fertilizer plants, overall plant, brick kilns, a planing mill, flour mill, etc. The conditions that contribute to the flourishing career of these enterprises are the inducements for other enterprises of an industrial character which would be welcomed by the business fraternity and the general public, and any propositions along this line will receive attention, and any sound measure need not lack for active co-operation and substantial support.

THE TRADE REVIEW WRITEUPS WILL BE FOUND IN THIS ISSUE ON PAGES 4, 5, 6, 7 AND 9.
