Digs His Own Grave.

A most unusual occurrence came to the notice of visitors to Chester Cemetery last week. A gentleman was at work in the cemetery recently cutting the grass in his lot, and he noticed three men in another part of the cemetery, whose actions excited the gentleman's curiosity. He went over to see what was doing. He found that a large hole eight feet long, six feet wide and six feet deep had been dug in the ground. Inside the hole was a large case, the interior of which was cemented to the thickness of six inches on each side, and a large cement slab had also been prepared. The gentleman asked if that was a grave they were digging and for whom it was being dug. After some hesitation one of the men replied: "The man for whom this grave is being dug is now in this hole. I have been drafted for service in this war, and before I shall go to war, I am going in this hole. I asked Mr. Pleasanton to dig the grave, but he replied that he had all that he could do to dig graves for the dead, and not the living, and that I had better go and get a permit from Mr. Simpers and dig my own grave. I did so, and I have prepared this grave just as I want it."

The gentleman stood horrified at such a statement, but reminded the man that he had done his work well. The gentleman came to town and verified the statement of the man by going to Mr. Simpers to find the name of the man who had asked for the permit to dig his grave. The matter was also brought to the attention of the Exemption Board.

Chester Bridge.

Whereas, the State Roads Commission of Maryland, through its Chief Engineer, has submitted for approval by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War, plans for a drawbridge over Chester river at Chestertown, Md., to be located just to the south of the present old bridge and occupying a portion of same; a public hearing on the subject will be held before Assistant Engineer John S. Doyle, in the main auditorium of the court house in Chestertown, Md., at 11 A. M., Saturday, September 22, 1917.

Interested parties are invited to be present at the hearing and express their views. As all the papers will be laid before the Secretary of War for his decifion, important statements, data and arguments to become part of the records should be submitted in writing, but oral statements will receive consideration.

PLOWS

Just received a large consignment of
VULCAN
Plows and Repairs. In this shipment are the first of the Vulcan Sulky or Riding Plows.

Many of you know the good features of the VULCAN, its wearing quality, how well the shears last and what fine work it does. Stop and look at this plow.

Pilot No. 4 Sulky

We have some of these plows yet that we can sell at the old price. Purchasers are all pleased at the lightness of draft of this plow. When it is put in the field along with other makes this is more noticeable. The best advertisement for these plows are the men who have them. Ask them.

Yours to serve,
