FARM NOTES

BRIEF ITEMS THAT WILL BE OF INTEREST TO OUR KENT COUNTY AGRICULTURISTS

Fine Hothouses.—Mr. E. R. Anthony, of Queen Anne's, near Chestertown, has recently completed the installation of a new heating plant for his hot houses. Mr. Anthony also had another hot house erected recently, which gives him four fine hot houses, equipped with every modern convenience and appliance of that business. Mr. Anthony has one of the finest hot house plants on the Eastern Shore, and they are now filled with beautiful flowers and young plants.

Tractors On Kent Farms.—The tractor has come to stay in Kent county. A few years ago and it was considered in an experimental state—and there are some now who content that it is still an experiment—but the high cost of labor has made it one of the necessiies of a progressive age. It is very common to hear the statement that "the tractor is all right on the right farm, but there are many farms where it cannot be used to advantage," the inference being that the situation is hopeless as fa ras the latter class of farms is concerned. Nevertheless the fallacy of the statement is being demonstrated on hundreds of farms in the United States right now. There is no doubt that tractors are frequently put on farms where conditions are not suitable for them. In some of these cases the purchaser may decide that the tractor is a failure as far as his farm is concerned, or he may do what a great many men are actually doing—namely, reorganie his farm business so as to use the tractor to advantage and make it profitable. As a matter of fact there are comparatively few farms where a tractor can be added as part of the equipment and used to best advantage without making some changes in the acreages of crops, methods of doing different jobs, and so forth. It is unreasonable and illogical to expect it to be otherwise. The Transcript is carrying the advertisements of a number of Kent county dealers who are selling tractors that are not in an experimental stage by any means, and purchasers who are contempalting the buying of tractors would do well to see them.

The Pigeon Industry In Kent.—Many Kent farmers have shipped pigeons to the city markets during the past few weeks and we have heard many that were extremely disappointed when the checks came from the commission merchants. One farmer told us that he shipped over a hundred pigeons to Baltimore recently and when the express and all the other expenses were taken out he had cleared less than ten cents each for them. While the pigeon on the farm costs the farmer very little in actual feed costs, we think this a poor return for them. Mr. Argus Robinson is one of the Chestertown pigeon raisers. He has about fifty pair and gets a good price for the squabs by shipping them to New York City. Personally, we have found the New York market far superior to any other when you have first-class farm products to ship.

****

Bee-Keeping In The County.—Bee-keeping was not on the financial basis of other branches of agriculture a few years ago. Primitive methods of bee handling were the usual thing, and the market was flooded with the low-grade product of haphazard bee-keepers. Four to six cents a pound was considered a good price for extracted honey. The schoolboy bee-keeper was too young to be up-to-date,when the obstacles to his chosen work were explained to him. He kept on adding colonies to his apiary and talking of the wonders of the bee lore to the yellow-haired girl who afterward married him. But bee-keeping is now on a scientific and profitable basis, with the result that there are many successful bee-keepers in Kent county. Mr. Spencer Biddle and Mr. D. W. Ingersoll, of Quaker Neck, and Mr. M. A. Toulson, of Chestertown, are perhaps the largest keepers in the county. Messrs. Biddle and Ingersoll find it a source of considerable profit, while Mr. Toulson finds it profitable and a great deal of pleasure to him.

****

A Hard Winter On Wheat.—Many Kent county wheat fields have been covered with ice since early in December. This is considered hard on wheat by the farmers and some think that he wheat has ben damaged.

****

Foxes Plentiful In Kent.—Foxes are plentiful on Kent farms—too plentiful for some of our farmers. It is, however, unlawful, to kill them unless they are caught marauding. The prices of fox hides are high and are about as follows: Black $800; Silver, dark, $600; Silver, light, $175; Cross, dark, $125; Cross, light; $50; Alaskan $60; Red, $30; Gray, $4.50.

Live Stock On The Farms.—"And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, fatfleshed and well favored; and they fed in a meadow." In Pharaoh's dream as interpreted by Joseph the seven fat cattle were seven years of plenty with which Egypt was about to be blessed. Pharoah's dream has been dreamed by almost every dry lander in our Western States. Your dry farmer looks forward to the time when he can see fat livestock grazing in his fields. He may not be able to provide a river, for there are not quite enough rivers in the country to go around. In this section of the Eastern Shore—in Queen Anne's county in particular—there are many acres upon which wheat and corn are planted and which seldom yield a profit, upon which live stock could be substituted, we expect, with more profit.

May Have Baseball Team Here This Summer.—A number of prominent retired business men of Chestertown are contemplating backing a Chestertown baseball team this summer. This team will be a member of the Peninsula Baseball League, which made such a big success last year, and will be composed of the same teams as last year, with the addition of Chestertown and Sudlersville. The gentlemen who are reported to be in favor of starting the league team here are progressive men in busines affairs and are all baseball fans. We understand that if the plans of these gentlemen are successful, Captain J. Thomas Kibler, coach at Washington College, and a baseball manager and player of prominence,will manage the team, while such players from Chestertown as Usilton, Gordy, and men of this calibre will be secured. This is a move in the right direction and if the plan materializes it will be of great interest to the people and will help boost the old town.

BETTERTON

The musical drama, "The Minister's Wife's New Bonnet," given at the school house on Tuesday evening by the members of the M. E. Sunday School was a great success. There were sixteen characters in the cast and every one was good. The assembly hall was filled to the doors.

The special revival services, which have been held the past three weeks at the M. E. Church, closed on Sunday evening. Twenty five new members were received into the church Sunday afternoon and the entire church has been greatly revived.

Lenten services are being held at the Episcopal Chapel every Wednesday afternoon during Lent.

Mrs. Bayard Crew and Mrs. Arthur Brice are spending the week with Mrs. Edgar Hurlock at Church Hill.

Mr. T. H. Moore, who has been in Philadelphia for the winter, has returned to his home in Betterton.

Betterton extends its sympathy to Mrs. Estella Crew McDorman in her bereavement.

Mrs. Harvey Moore is spending the week with Mr. Moore at Love Point.

Misses Sarah and Mary Taylor spent the weekend with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Taylor.

Miss Elizabeth Brice is visiting friends in Wilmington and Baltimore.

Mr. Minor Crownhart, who has been in Philadelphia for the winter, has returned to his home in Betterton.

—Mr. William T. Bratton, editor of the Cecil County News, is ill with pneumonia.

THE TOWN THAT CAME BACK

Every town, big or small, reflects the personalties of the people that make it up. If the people are progressive, the town will be progressive. If the people are backward so will the town be. So that in general, what may be said of a town is a compliment or a slur on its population.

Take the town of Massey, in Kent county, Maryland. Old timers remember Massey as a thriving center of a successful peach growing country. They tell of gigantic fruit trains; cars overflowing with the juicy fruit of the soft skinned peach; one, two and 3 engines puffing and snorting, pulling and pushing their precious freight to market. And as the trains pulled out, the money flowed in and Massey prospered.

And then came the peach blight, bringing destruction and desolation with it. But while the blight could kill the peach trees, and it did, it could not kill the spirit of the fighting people who live in and around Massey. Stunned by the magnitude of their losses; appalled by the immensity of the disaster they faced, they pulled themselves together and faced the future bravely, determined to find a way out.

The dead trees were uprooted, the land plowed, crops planted, and drawing their belts one notch tighter, the Kent county people fought for new successes in new fields.

And Massey has come back. True, no more peach trains leave it as they did but other things have come to take their place.

Two large packing houses are now thriving in Massey taking care of the bountiful crops the rejuvenated farmers are raising.

One is the Massey Packing Co. and the other that of C. S. Hurlock. The Standard Oil Company has a large station in the town from which it supplies the County with necessary material.

The Harbeson Dairies of Philadelphia have a large station in Massey and now find it necessary to double its capacity to take care of the great amount of dairy products the surrounding farmers are supplying them in ever increasing quantities.

A large and new modern grain elevator is in prospect, and rumor has it that 1921 will see it in operation.

The new Concrete State Road has been surveyed and will soon be put through, and Massey is on it.

And finally, Massey is going to have electricity and the many comforts that electricity brings.

The Massey Electric Light and Power Company has just been formed and has ordered from S. W. Granbery the well-known Electrical man of Chestertown, Maryland, a complete Western Electric equipment that will supply every resident of Massey with electricty, every hour of the day or night, every day in the week and the year.

This equipment, modern in every respect will place Massey on a par with the largest cities in the contry, and will enable every Massey man, women and child to have the conveniences of running water in their homes, will give them the benefits from electric lights, will furnish them with power driven washing machines, vacuum cleaners, electric irons and every other convenience that any resident of any large city now enjoys.

The streets will be lighted electrically, the stores will break out into electrical brilliancy, and the homes will know the comforts of a thousand electrical helps.

Among the far sighted and public spirited men who have made this great and valuable addition to Massey possible are:

Messrs S. J. Johnson, E. Thomas Massey, A. M. Malsberger, M. P. Dunn, G. R. Moffett, I. F. Huey, L. C. Clark, C. S. Hurlock, Burton Edwards, Harry Holt, Isaac Gibbs, Jr., and others.

Massey has come back; all glory to her and the men and women who constitute her population.

Never mind how many cows but—how much milk?

Don't count the number of cows but count the gallons of milk; then ask yourself if you are feeding your cows the best producing ration.

A properly balanced feed for dairy cows must not only contain sufficient quantities of protein, fat and carbohydrates to keep the cows strong and healthy; but it must also contain the proper combination of proteins to produce the greatest efficiency and the maximum milk yield.

No matter what you use, you yourself cannot mix feeds as scientifically correct nor as economical as feeds which we sell ready for use.

Insure the general good health of your cows by giving them dependable feeds like Krause Dairy Feed. It will mean healthier cows, more milk and more profit.

We will be glad to tell you all about these feeds if you will call.

The feed with a HOMINY FEED BASE.
