WESTMINSTER:

FOR PRESIDENT:
GENERAL ULYSSES S. GRANT,
Subject to the decision of the Republican National Convention.

☞To our advertisers we make the request, that hereafter they will enter on all advertisements which they send to us, the number of times which each is to be inserted, so that we may be enabled to make our charge for the same.

OUR NEXT PRESIDENT.

The time is fast approaching when the Republican party will meet in convention to nominate a man to succeed Mr. Johnson in the Presidential chair. We have no doubt as to whom that man will be, for the people have already chosen U. S. Grant whose courage and patriotism have been fully tested, and whose name, everywhere associated with the great victory over disunion, is now found at the head of those that sustain Congress in its demand for a thorough and just reconstruction of the Southern States. The time has been, however, when his nomination appeared to be very improbable, for the party was unwilling to select a man who, from his silence in regard to all political measures, seemed equally fit and available as a candidate for its opponents. For this reason he was for a long time a great stumbling block in the way of all political schemes—the party was afraid that it would have to contend with his great military renown and the popular gratitude toward him, if it did not nominate him; and was also afraid that if elected he would not represent its principles. But now, since the Sheridan letter has been published and since Grant has so plainly shown his determination to sustain Congress by his at once giving up an office that the President was so anxious for him to hold, there is no longer any ambiguity about his views, and the Republicans have everywhere united upon him. As long as there was a doubt about his opinions, the Democrats, to whom his name would have given immense strength, made every effort to secure him. Their conduct could not be too cringing, nor their words too laudatory. But when it became plain that he had refused his adherence to their narrow creeds, and declined to regulate his political actions by their square and rule, they at once sought to overwhelm him with exaustless Billingsgate and vile denunciations. When Andrew Johnson was attempting, by every means at his command, to rouse again the spirit of insurrection in the South, although he well knew that if a recurrence of rebellion should recall the Northern people to the field, it would call them there with a cry of extermination on their lips, Grant was silently and surely counteracting his influence, and doing all he could to allay every excitement that might be raised. His appeal to the President "in the name of a patriotic people who had sacrificed hundreds of thousands of loyal lives and thousands of millions of treasure to preserve the integrity of the country," and his warning against the machinations of men "who did all they could to break up the Government by arms, and now wish to be the only element consulted as to the method of restoring order," endeared him to the people, guaranteed to him the next Presidency, and gained for him the hatred of every Rebel and Democrat in the land. Unfettered by previous party ties, a man of the age, progressive and liberal, he is eminently fitted for the high office we wish to bestow upon him; and his great services in the Cabinet and in the field entitle him to it. From all parts of the country—from the great busy West—the inventive, intelligent East—the money making North, and the soon to be reconstructed South—we hear the demands of the people that they shall be allowed to vote for Grant. In his own words we say, 'This is a Republic where the will of the people is the law of the land—let their voice be heard.'

SECRETARY STANTON.

On the 13th, inst., the United States Senate took action in the case of the removal of Secretary Stanton from the War Department. They refused to concur in the removal. Notices were sent to the Mr. Stanton, President Johnson and Gen. Grant. On the 14th Gen. Grant quietly delivered up the War office to Mr. Stanton and wrote the President a letter, saying "According to the provisions of section 2 of 'An act regulating the tenure of certain civil offices,' all my functions as Secretary of War ad interim ceased from the moment of the receipt of the within notice," &c. Mr. Stanton immediately took possession of the War Department and has since that time been conducting the business of the office. Gen. Grant forwards from his Headquarters to Mr. Stanton, all papers requiring the attention of the Secretary of war. Warrants for money signed by Mr. Stanton as Secretary of War are honored at the Treasury Department. A number of rumors are afloat as to what the President intends doing but as yet nothing definite is known.

☞In the Maryland Legislature a number of bills of local character have been introduced, but few acted on.

☞The CECIL WHIG comes to us this week enlarged and greatly improved in appearance.

POOR TOM'S A-COLD.

Ever, remorselessly, in the track of villainy follows the avenging spirit of Justice. Her uplifted dagger, may be turned aside again and again by the thick panoply of wealth and power, but at some unguarded moment it inevitably strikes the doomed victim of her wrath and in darkness, blood and death, he lies prostrate helpless and undone. The world's eye, indeed, may sometimes be blinded to the stroke, but still it falls, and in secret agony, the vulture gnaws at the ever-living vitals of the wretch, hopelessly bound like Prometheus to the rock of retributive vengeance. History but repeats herself in the infamous career, and deserved fate of Swann the traitor Governor of Maryland. Dragged, by the devotion of as true friends as ever man had, out of the cess pools of political infamy and disgrace, which he ceaselessly stirred and agitated to promote his greedy and base ambition, and clothed in Gubernatorial mantles in hope that his moral nakedness might be hidden and his past record of sin redeemed by future decency and honor, it was but natural to expect that his heart would respond to some trifling sentiments of gratitude.—How that expectation has been gratified, the world knows. Scarcely had he assumed the duties of his high office, before he began to scheme for a higher position, and to destroy all who stood in opposition to him. As soon as he discovered that the party which had so generously and faithfully sustained him had within its ranks, others whom it preferred for the United States Senatorship, he determined like his great prototype Arnold, to desert to the enemy, and to transfer all the power he possessed to those who had sympathised with treason and had aided and encouraged traitors in their murderous assaults on the integrity and life of the nation. By perjury, and bribes, and bargains, and corruption that stink in the nostrils of honesty and virtue—by the appointment of pliant tools to do his dirty bidding—by disregarding, and setting aside laws he had sanctioned and had sworn to enforce and support—by employing in every department of the government, for a price, willing creatures to assist in his elevation, by every means that low cunning, and dastardly baseness could suggest he secured the reward of his treachery and was elected United States Senator. Snaking his slimy path, from the foul swamps, and alleys and dens, in which his miserable schemes were concocted and executed, he came up to the very doors of the temple whose atmosphere of purity his rottenness and leprosy would have contaminated into stifling suffocation, but there his craven soul deserted him. He heard from within a warning voice, "Avaunt and quit my sight" and in gibbering, trembling and horrid agony he skulked back to his Annapolitain cover, and in the bitterness of his despair and disgrace, sat himself down and wept.

His past deeds of iniquity rose before him in ghastly array—he knew he could never enter those halls, whose soft and pleasant places he had sunk so low to attain, and so, flaunting an official lie in the face of the world, as an excuse, instead of the known facts, he resigned. As a climax to his littleness and meanness, he vainly endeavored to fix the responsibility on that meekest and most milk-and-watery incarnation of nothingness Cream Cheese Cox, Esq., the then Lieut. Governor, who, it was charged had been bought with radical gold to do terrible things when the "White Bird" had gone to his lofty roost at Washington. Then another bargain was effected: He and his chosen friends agreed that every traitor whose hands were yet unwashed of the blood of patriots should be restored to perfect political rights, that the Government should be overthrown, and that the rebellion should be established as a success, and a triumph throughout the entire State, provided for all this "thirty pieces of silver" contract, Swann should be elected again to the Senate. His and his friends' part of the bargain was faithfully kept, but the pure "white bird of Maryland" finds alas to his sorrow and dismay that "there's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip," and that scholars may be taught to know the master's tricks of ingratitude and treachery.

He finds his confidence misplaced—his pitying appeals for help, tauntingly refused—the contract of sin cancelled—the bond of corruption torn up and destroyed—the golden harvest he had sowed in crime, gathered by another who was no sharer in the sowing—and he, himself, sacrificed in the household of his friends, Acteon, eaten up by his own dogs! Alas poor Tom is really a-cold! Had he maintained an honorable bearing, and resisted temptation he might to-day have been the trusted representative of principles—beloved and respected by all. He chose rather to draggle his official robes in filth and nastiness and crime, to sound every note in the gamut of treachery, to smother with the shroud of falsehood every aspiration of truth to gather around him sycophants and toadies who feasted their hungriness on the crumbs from his sin-loaded table, to encourage the rowdyism and scoundrelism which so delighted him, and distinguished his administration as Plug Ugly Mayor of Baltimore, and for all this he has his reward. Well may he exclaim, contemplating the height of respectability he might have reached, and the depth of ignominy he has reached

"Of all the sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these it might have been."
My May of life
Is fallen in the sere—the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honor, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have, but, in their stead,
Curses, not loud, but deep, mouth-honor, breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, but dare not.

☞All the Hon. gentlemen from Carroll in the Legislature, cast their ballots for Swann for Senator.

☞Our thanks are due to Rev. L. Van Bokkelen for a copy of the Report of the Superintendent of Public instruction.

EXIT THE WHITE BIRD.

Three times three and a tiger! The Swann is plucked and his carcass left out in the cold. With all the praise lavished on him, by himself, and all the cheering done for him, by himself, he has been politically killed in the house of his friends; he has been snubbed by those he turned traitor to his party to serve; he has been sold by those who bought him. His treason has been rewarded by defeat; his desertion of his party has gained him the contempt of all parties. The final ballot was taken on Friday, the Hon. Wm. T. Hamilton of Washington county received 56 votes and Thos. Swann received 46 votes, and Mr. Hamilton was elected.

The Swann has sung his parting song and the curtain falls on the tableau of the "Dead Duck." "He has fought his last fight, he has won his last battle, no sound shall awake him to office again," but "doubly dying he shall go down, to the vile dust from whence he sprung, unwept, unhonored and unsung."

POLITICAL PROMOTION.

Our fat and jovial friend Jesse Brown Esq., of Hampstead District who with patriot watch and vigil long, has a la Micawber, waited for something to turn up, has at last been successful and in base ball parlance has taken that something on the "fly." By one bold stride he has been elevated from the humble position of a Justice of the Peace, to the responsible and dignified office of Page to the Legislature. The interesting event is happily over, the Legislative mother is doing as well as could be expected and the child's name is Jesse. We congratulate the gentleman on his deserved promotion from the ranks to official station, and fondly hope that the career so auspiciously begun may be prosecuted till it end in a brilliant blaze of glory, and be recorded

"One of the few—the immortal names
That were not born to die."

WHISKEY vs. GREENBACKS.

The result of the elections in the Legislature has demonstrated that "Bobby" Fowler's whiskey is more powerful than "Tommy" Swann's greenbacks. Or perhaps the chivalry have not sufficiently recovered from the heavy doses that Bobby administered to them, to be able, to see Tommy's pictures. At any rate the Senatorship big as it was, could not be seen by Swanny and his friends. What a pity!

☞The Reconstruction Committee reports to the House of Representatives a new bill, Supplemental to the Reconstruction acts. It declares invalid and illegal the governments existing in the late insurrectionary States, gives Gen. Grant full supervisory power over the acts of the military commanders in these States, with authority to remove them if he thinks proper and detail other officers, and also to remove any civil officers acting under the existing Provisional Governments.

☞Gen. Meade, who was appointed by President Johnson to succeed General Pope in the command of the Third Military Distrsct, promises to be even more radical than his predecessor. He has removed the Governor and Treasurer of Georgia for refusing to pay the expenses of the Reconstruction Convention.

☞At the annual session of the Union League of Maryland held in Baltimore on the 8th inst., the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved by the Maryland State Grand Council of the Union League of America, That General Ulysses S. Grant is our first choice for President of the United States.

Shriver was unanimously re-elected President and Mr. G. S. Haines, Vice President.

LIGHT FOR ALL.—Capt. Billingslea has shown us a specimen of the Chrystaline oil for which he is the agent. For our benefit he lit a lamp containing this oil, on which was a burner of the kind required. The oil makes a clear, bright, light which can be increased or lessened at pleasure. As the burner used is a gas generator trimming and cleaning the lamp is unnecessary. Persons wishing a good light would do well to examine into this.

NEW RAILROAD PROJECT.—A large and enthusiastic Railroad meeting was held in Manchester, on Saturday last, to take into consideration the project of a branch railroad from Manchester to intersect the West. Md. Road at some convenient point. They appointed a committee to wait on the President of the West. Md. Road to see if they could make arrangements in regard to hauling freight &c., and if they are successful they propose to apply at once for a Charter.

Feeser; President, Horatio J. Weaver; Vice President, Austin H. Yingling; Secretary, Miss Emily J. Yingling; Treasurer, Miss Matilda S. Bankert; Usher, Perry O. L. Tagg; Board of Managers, Ezra J. Yingling, Uriah J. Bankert, Mrs. Anna J. Yingling and Miss Rebecca Tagg.

ACCIDENTS.—Miss Susan Rinehart, a young lady residing at Mr. Wm. Rineharts about two miles from Westminster on the Uniontown turnpike, met with quite a painful accident on Wednesday morning last. While kindling a fire her dress caught and in a few moments her clothing was ablaze. Mr. Rinehart and his wife, after considerable effort, succeeded in extinguishing the flames, but not until the young lady was very badly burned.

A few days previous Mr. Wm. Rinehart while engaged in threshing was from some cause thrown on the connecting rod of the machine and was only saved from a more severe accident by reason of his clothing resisting the power of the machine. As it was he sustained severe injuries in his right shoulder and arm.

SUDDEN DEATHS:—On the 14th inst., Wm. Meredith residing near Uniontown, died very suddenly. Mr. Meredith a few days previous, was thrown from his horse from which cause he was confined to the house. On the Evening of Tuesday last, while seated at the stove he complained of pain in his side, and while being led to the bed, was found to be dying. Before medical aid could be called, he ceased to breathe.

On the morning of the 16th, while the relatives and friends of the deceased were preparing to follow his remains to the place of interment, his sister Mary Grace Meredith, while crossing the room to put on her wrappings, fell to the floor, and before she could be carried to a bed in the adjoining room had expired. Both of the deceased parties were unmarried, and had for years resided together. In death they were parted only for the space of about 48 hours.

SONG OF IRON.

I am mighty in the saber,
Fiercely wielded by the brave,
Glorious in the stalwart steamer,
Laughing at the storm and wave.

Beauteous in the palace pillars,
Saying in the pointed rod,
As it brings the deadly lightning,
Quelled and harmless to the sod.

But there is a glorious essence,
Where I take my grandest power,
Giving to the RACE my surest,
Sweetest aid, in danger's hour.

See! before me fly diseases!
See the darker hydras bow!
See the rose of health and beauty
Take the palest cheek and brow.

Fly, dyspepsia! fly, consumption!
Yes, all ills are crushed at length,
For I give what human nature
Only ever needed—STRENGTH!

Shall I tell in what great essence
I can thus your spirits cheer up?
Pallid, trembling, dying sufferer,
'Tis the famed "PERUVIAN SYRUP."

The PERUVIAN SYRUP is a protected solution of the Protoxide of Iron, a new discovery in medicine that strikes at the root of disease by supplying the blood with its vital principle or life element—Iron.

The genuine has "PERUVIAN SYRUP" blown in the glass.
