Gapes Among Chickens.—Now that much of the young stock has passed the danger point of disease—if it is ever passed—gapes have begun to take their annual toll. We never have gapes in our flock. We believe this is due entirely to the fact that we plant several times each year on our runs. At any rate we have raised chickens for seven years on the same runs and have never had a single case of the gapes. We understand that the trouble is that little worms have attached themselves to the internal surface of the windpipe of the birds. These parasites suck the blood from the mucous membrane and obstruct the passage of air to such an extent that if the affected birds do not get relief they will die soon. Ground that has been used and unplanted for a number of years seems to encourage the growth of the little red worms, who, if not gotten rid of, will soon deplete your flock. The horse hair loop run into the windpipe of the gapy chickens has been in use so long that it seems that it came with the ark. This home-made fixture has now been imitated in the poultry supply houses by doubling and twisting a small, flexible wire, which carries a few stiff hairs to carry off the worms. Extractors have also been made of a small feather, stripped to a small tuft at the end, and moistened with kerosene or oil or turpentine, injected in the windpipe carefully. This extractor also gives satisfaction. Good results are said to have been obtained with 15 grains of salicylic acid to a quart of water. These methods may be all right, but we believe it is best to keep the gapes off the premises by continually planting some growing crops in the yards, when possible. This also keeps down the other diseases with the gapes at the same time.

Poultry Business Today.—The poultry business today is not carried on as it was five years ago. Today it is not a plaything, but a real business proposition. Mammoth incubators, insuring a flock to be all the same age and getting them out in time to make winter layers of them, and also hatching a larger percentage of all eggs set. Mammoth brooders are another thing which have saved thousands of chicks. Larger, deeper houses, and larger flocks together, saving time in caring for them, are part of the present-day equipment. To make money out of poultry one must adopt the new methods and get out of the old ruts.

Get Chickens On Range.—As spring advances into summer, the poultry raiser should make arrangements—if he has not already done so—to get his growing stock on range. A little forethought and planning in this problem may help to obtain more satisfactory quality in the birds that reach maturity this fall. One of the weakest links in the chicken business is the getting of youngsters on range, which will almost insure them growing steadily all summer. Give this problem careful thought. In these days, when so many poultrymen are raising their chicks by artificial means in incubators and brooders, they are attempting to imitate the mother hen on a large scale, and we have not learned all there is to know by long shot. Yet many methods are giving success in a measure. They vary in different regions, but, after all, the general priciples are the same everywhere. It certainly is true that in order to come through with a profit at the end of the year, the factors that enter into successful poultry raising must be carried out.

Feed To Raise Three-Pound Chickens.—At the government farm it was found to take White Rocks 12 weeks, White Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds and Buff Orpingtons, 14 weeks and White Leghorns 16 weeks to weigh three pounds. These figures covered the cockerels. Females required 14 weeks in White Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and Buff Orpingtons; 15 weeks in White Wyandottes and 24 weeks in White Leghorns. The figures available on the growth of White Rocks seem to indicate that it takes 9 to 10 weeks and about 5 pounds of grain and about eight pounds of skimmed milk to produce 2-pound White Plymouth Rock broilers. These figures are from Purdue University. They have also found that based on the first 12 weeks of life, a Leghorn chick takes 5.69 pounds of grain and mash and 5.70 pounds to milk to feed the bird for that period of time.

Keep The Brooder House Floor Clean.—One is liable at this time to neglect the cleaning of the brooder house floor. You have lost so many chicks this year, and the epidemic has passed, that you are almost indifferent to success or failure. The season has, no doubt, been a very unsatisfactory one for many raisers of baby chicks in Kent county. The mortality has been high; the season has been damp and disagreeable, and the problem of whether to continue in the business another season has been a problem to many. This is a bad frame of mind to get into, but it is, nevertheless, human. No one can stand continued failure and maintain a perfect and serene equilibrium. If we could we would be super men and women and not the ordinary human mortals that we are. When a person puts five hundred to a thousand chickens in a brooder house, costing him around 20 cents each, and every morning for weeks goes out and finds from ten to thirty dead, if he is not disturbed he is not an ordinary human being. But the raising of chickens, like every other business, has its bright sides. At any rate, it is best not to relax one's efforts and cleanliness, above everything else, is one of the essential requisites for good results. To facilitate cleaning and insure cleanliness it is essential that all parts and corners of the brooder house be clean and sanitary. By this we don't mean that it should be cleaned out every day but it should be cleaned out every week. When you do this a little disinfectant sprayed about the floor and room will help to elimnate the germ life that is no doubt lurking there.

CHURCH NOTES

Rev. N. O. Gibson will preach a special sermon to the P. O. S. of A. tomorrow, Sunday, at 7.30 p. m., in Christ M. P. Church.

Mr. Ballard, of Washington College, delighted the audience of the Chestertown M. E. Church with a beautiful baritone solo on Sunday evening. Mr. Ballard has a voice of exceptional charm and force.

Dr. George T. Alderson is drawing good crowds at Elkton and the church there is taking on new life under his pastorate.

Rev. A. M. Forman, of Princeton, N. J., has accepted the call to the Presbyterian Church at Chesapeake City and will take charge tomorrow.

Preparations have been completed for the Fifty-second annual convention of the P. E. Diocese of Easton, which will assemble in St. Andrew's Church, Sudlersville, on Tuesday next, June 1. The most important business before the convention will be election of a bishop to succeed the late Rt. Rev. William Forbes Adams, Bishop of the Diocese of Easton. The clerical delegates from Kent will be Dr. H. B. Martin, of Chestertown; Rev. C. R. Birnbach, of Massey; Rev. S. S. Hepburn, of Worton; Rev. W. F. Dickerson, of Fairlee; Rev. C. L. All the Chestertown congregations are well pleased with their new ministers and the attendance at all the churches seem on the increase. On last Sunday Rev. O. E. Jones delivered two sermons in the interest of the M. E. Centenary Movement which were greatly enjoyed; in the afternoon the various "teams" of the Centenary Movement visited the different members of the congregation and have made an excellent report. Rev. Mr. Gibson, of the M. P. Church, preached two sermons to big congregations on Sunday. Rev. C. L. Atwater was in the pulpit of Emmanuel P. E. Church morning and evening Sunday and the congregation greatly enjoyed his discourses. Chestertown is fortunate in having such good and able workers for the cause.

Dr. T. H. Lewis, president of Western Maryland College, was elected president of the Methodist Protestant General Conference on Saturday afternoon on the second ballot, being within seven votes of election on the first ballot. Dr. Lewis is well and favorably known in Chestertown, where he is a frequent visitor, and where he has delivered many sermons.

Performance in the hands of thousands of farmers has given the Cletrac its leadership in the tractor field. All, yes more than Rollin H. White, designer and builder, claimed for it, has been done by Cletrac farmers.

The Cletrac was designed not only to do a good job of plowing, but to do all sorts of farm work and all kinds of farm hauling, under all kinds of conditions. It fits the seed bed as well as it plows; it does the seeding and harvesting; the hay making and threshing; the farm hauling; the wood sawing; silo filling and road building.

This little tractor has 800 square inches of bearing surface and will not pack your farm and make a hard pan in it in several years. It has the same weight per square inch as your roller or cultivator, 4 1-4 lbs. per sq. in. Will go in closer places than a team and get as close to the fence and corners as your team, and one man can do as much as three men with teams. Save labor and expensive feed by buying a Cletrac.

Stop in and see the Cletrac work the first time you are in town, and arrange for a demonstration, so as to assure prompt delivery, as the factory is back with orders. The Canadian Government has contracted for 1000 at once. We had more Cletracs in the Great War than any other make.
