WESTMINSTER, MARYLAND.

Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

SATURDAY, MARCH 24, 1888.

President Carnot has taken the most important step yet ventured in Republican France by removing General Boulanger from his command.

It is generally believed that Arthur P. Gorman doesn't like the administration and is getting ready to wreck it. It depends, however, which is the bigger man.

There have been two blizzards in the East this year—the one that buried Neal Dow, the Democratic candidate for Mayor of Portland, and the other one.

The Republicans are going to elect the governor of Rhode Island this year. The Mugwumps may save time and trouble by bearing this in mind.

The new Dependent Pension bill is for the benefit of those who are "totally unable to earn a living and have no adequate means or support."

The President has nominated Strother M. Stockslager, of Indiana, to be Commissioner of the General Land Office, and Thomas J. Anderson, of Iowa, to be assistant commissioner of the General Land Office.

The determination of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee to distribute 1,000,000 copies of the President's Free-trade message is highly commendable. That number added to what the Republicans propose to distribute will give the people about 3,000,000 copies of that threatening documents.

The Democratic attitude on the tariff question has now been clearly defined. President Cleveland as the head of the party and its predetermined candidate for re-election has in his message planted himself on the most pronounced Free Trade platform ever put forth in this country.

The ways of the majority of the Ways and Means Committee in dealing with their Tariff bill have been made clear already, and the means by which they will accomplish their end consist in the simple fact that they outnumber their Republican associates.

The discovery that that letter purporting to have been written by Mr. Cleveland refusing to be a candidate for renomination was a forgery appears to have caused considerable sorrow in certain Democratic circles. There are a great many Democrats who would like to have the President compel the party to worry along without him just for the fun of seeing how it would go about the job.

The debate in the United States Senate on Monday on Mr. Blair's bill to give the preference in selecting government employees to men who had been partially disabled in the Confederate army over those who had not been loyal, but who had not fought against the Union, was continued up to 2 o'clock, when at his suggestion the bill went over without action. Speeches were made by Senators Platt, Hale, Berry, Blair, Hoar, Riddleberger, Hampton, George, Manderson, Daniel and Hawley.

Drift of Republican Sentiment.

The presidential canvass made by the Philadelphia Times, is marked by its comprehensiveness and evident impartiality. Five representative states were chosen as the field of inquiry. New York and Indiana are rightly classed as doubtful; Pennsylvania and Ohio are surely Republican, and opinion in Minnesota is interesting because in that state there is an alleged drift away from the party's attitude on Protection. No other localities probably reflect Republican sentiment more accurately than these states do and the summary of replies received indicates the party's attitude as nearly as it is possible to read it at the present time.

The first impression which will be made upon everyone who studies this canvass is the fact that Republican sentiment has not as yet crystallized about any one candidate for the presidency. All the replies were received after Mr. Blaine's letter of declination had been published, but notwithstanding this fact over 3000 of the 7000 preferences are for him as the candidate. Senator Sherman, avowedly in the field as an aspirant for the nomination, receives only a few more votes. The other 3900 choices are scattered. With these two overshadowing names withdrawn the three leading candidates are Lincoln, Depew and Harrison, and they run nearly neck and neck. The fact, however, that no one of them receives one-sixth of the preferences shows how far Republican sentiment is as yet from centering upon any one man.

Another fact made clear by this canvass is the buoyant, confident spirit which pervades the party. "The overwhelming testimony is on the side of a marked improvement" in the party's prospect as compared with 1884. There can be no mistaking such a general agreement of opinion, coming as it does from such widely separated localities and representing undoubtedly nearly one-half of the Republican voters in the Northern states. It confirms and reinforces the conclusion of Mr. Blaine concerning the political outlook, and makes doubly significant the enthusiasm and party loyalty displayed in the organization of Republican clubs. It only needs the nomination of a standard-bearer about whom a united party can rally for this enthusiasm to become irresistible.

Twenty-Five Lives Lost.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 17.—The first section of the fast mail train from New York for Jacksonville went through a trestle at a point seventy-five miles south of Savannah this morning. The entire train except the engine is demolished. Nineteen people were killed and between thirty and forty injured. Ten of the latter are expected to die.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 17.—A representative of the Times-Union arrived at Waycross, near the scene of the accident, at 7.30 P. M., and found the town wild with excitement. The number of dead aggregates twenty-five, and about equally divided as to color. Nineteen persons were killed outright and six died at Waycross during the afternoon. The wounded are being cared for in Waycross and Blackshear. Several more are expected to die.

President Cleveland was 51 years old on Sunday.

St. Patrick's Day was observed quietly in Baltimore Saturday. No parade took place, and even the weather, wearied by its efforts of preceding days, was calm and sunshiny.

Fire at Richard Stumpf's grocery, corner of Baltimore and Wolf streets, Baltimore on Wednesday night, caused a damage of about $43,000 to stock and building, which amount is fully covered by insurance.

Miss Amelia Welsh, daughter of Columbia Welsh, of Alberton, Howard county, and Howes Fisher, of Savage, Howard county, were married at the residence of the bride's parents, on Monday evening last, at 8 o'clock.

Proposals on mail service from Alesia, by Roller and Hoffmanville, to Grave Run Mills, six times a week during the next fiscal year, have been advertised for. Proposals are also called for on six-times-a-week service between Freeland and Eklo.

The Rev. Dr. D. F. Ewell, aged 71 years, died at his residence in Clayton, Delaware, Saturday night of pneumonia. Dr. Ewell was one of the oldest members of the Maryland Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, having been received into that body in 1839.

Mrs. Baker, wife of Mr. Daniel Baker, Sr., a prominent citizen of Frederick county, died at her residence, in Buckeystown, at a late hour Monday night. She was in her seventy-fifth year, and had been married forty-eight years. Her aged husband is also lying very ill.

Dr. Charles A. Leas died Sunday at his home, near Glyndon, Baltimore county. He was 67 years old and one of the best-known residents of Baltimore county. He was prominent in the temperance cause, and at the time of his death was a member of the executive committee of the Baltimore County Temperance Alliance. A wife and three children survive him.

The case of the State vs. William Webster, charged with an assault with intent to kill his cousin, Jason Smithson, by shooting him on the 17th of February last, was called in the Circuit Court for Harford county on Monday. Tuesday Webster was acquitted.

President Hood, of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, was in Annapolis, on Friday of last week, and at his request Mr. Denny moved in the House that the two canal-railroad lease bills of that corporation be indefinitely postponed. This was carried without objection, and the Western Maryland bills are dead.

H. Jeff. Krise, Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue for this district, is said to have had a pretty rough experience a few days ago while making one of his regular trips to Mechanicstown. When he reached that place he was nearly frozen to death and had to be lifted out of his buggy.

The load of car corn which Mr. D. P. Zimmerman took from this place to Union Bridge on Monday last Mr. Stoner says was the largest that has ever been brought to that place. He had on twenty six barrels and forty one pounds. This beats friend Norris' load.—Banner of Liberty.

Besides the great damage done to the shipping interests by the late gale the loss of oysters is incalculable. The bars and flats in all the rivers and creeks in Talbot county, whose beds were covered with oysters, suffered to a greater or less extent. In many instances the oysters destroyed were of the finest quality, being plants. The continuous heavy winds blew all the water off the beds and kept it off, leaving the oysters exposed for several days. The result was that the oysters all froze and are a total loss. The amount of the losses from this source will reach far into the thousands.

And we have parted, Mollie, thou art dead;
On its last resting-place we have laid thy head.
A little while—a few short years of pain—
And one by one we'll come to thee again.

Your kind old father shall seek out the place,
And rest with thee, the dearest of his race.
Your darling mother, broken with sorrow and grief,
Shall lay her head by thine in sweet relief;
Sister and brother and your faithful friend,
True from the first and tender to the end.

One more friend in heaven!
Another thought to brighten cloudy days;
Another theme for thankfulness and praise;
Another link on high our souls to raise
To our home in heaven.

—BY HER FRIEND, F. G. Y.

Our dear sister sweetly sleeps, in Jesus sleeps.
No more I'll look for thee on earth.
This world of grief and pain,
But yet I hope in God to see
Our dear sister Mollie again.

Farewell, dear sister, thou hast left us,
All our hearts are broken;
'Twas hard to give thee up,
But God has called her from us.
Farewell, dear Mollie, dear.

We will think of her in her lonely grave,
In her heavenly home so fair;
And we will trust, with a hopeful trust,
That we may meet our dear sister again.

—BY HER SISTER AND BROTHER.

On March 3, 1888, David J. Spencer, beloved husbandof Catharine A. Spencer, aged 58 years, 8 months and 21 days.

 Towsontown, Baltimore county, papers please copy.

Oh, husband, husband, must it be?
Has death indeed, with noiseless tread,
Come in between thy love and me,
And left me weeping o'er my dead?

And oh, how desolate and alone
My coming future's doomed to be,
With all my fondest hopes o'erthrown,
And robbed of happiness and thee?

Since then we must forever part,
With grief too great for tongues to tell
I come, and, with a breaking heart,
Bid thee a loving, last farewell.

Reminiscences of Old Taneytown.

The Old Plank Road.—Stage Coach Days.—Israel Hiteshew.—Elijah Currens.—Joe Shunk.—Barnum.

Taneytown Correspondent of the SENTINEL.

CINCINNATI, O., March 19th, 1888.—My Young Friend:—A very distinguished writer once said the most difficult task he had to encounter in his literary work was how to begin a letter. Now, I am not one of "them literary fellers," and it is a serious business for me to begin one, but more so to make it interesting after it is begun. To you these rambling letters may seem very foolish and uninteresting, but to those who knew the people of the old town in my day they will bring up many fond memories. I know the town only as it was then, not as it is now with its railroad, telegraph, public hall, new streets, and, I might almost say, new people, for I may mention many names new to you, the bearers of them having doubtless long since passed to the silent beyond.

Though I did not remain in the town long enough to see its many modern improvements, and their recuperating effects, I did see one great public enterprise pushed through in glorious triumph: That was the Westminster and Emmitsburg Plank Road, though I doubt very much whether it is in existence to-day as a monument to the folly of its builders. But the days of turnpikes and plank roads are numbered, and it is a waste of time to discuss them now. Everything is railroad, and I am glad to know you are blessed (or cursed) with one, for when I come to visit the scenes of my youth I won't be compelled to undergo the torture of having the breath almost jolted out of my body, and my old limbs stiffened and bruised by being jolted forty miles in an old stage coach, as was the case when I left there 33 years ago. I was in much fresher and better condition to endure it then than now.

Israel Hiteshew was one of the prominent and very highly respected citizens of the old town. He died, I think, about '53. He was a man of pleasing address, fine social qualities, and universally respected. He confined himself very closely to his business (merchant tailor), and I think hastened his end from that cause. He had a large family of boys and girls, and, so far as I know, every one of them was an honor and an ornament to their parents. While speaking generally in these short sketches of the men of my acquaintance, I cannot, while speaking of this family, refrain from deviating to mention Mrs. Hiteshew, as she was a lady for whom I always had the most profound respect, and in view of the many happy, yea, more than happy, hours I spent in my boyhood days in her hospitable mansion. Many sweet memories rush through my mind, and almost the tears of regret rise to my eyes to think those happy scenes are so long buried in the distant past, never to be re-enacted save in memory. If I live to ever again visit the town (which I hope may be ere I close these letters) my greatest desire and fondest wish will only be gratified by meeting good, motherly Mrs. Hiteshew.

Just above Israel Hiteshew's, on Hanover street, lived Joe Shunk. He was a hatter and did quite a lucrative business in an early day. He was rather a reticent sort of man, not very social in his habits, so I did not have a personal acquaintance with him. He went out of business before I left the town, but I have no recollection of where he went, but the hat manufacture departed forever with him. His shop was directly opposite the old school-house of which I have spoken, and was afterward utilized as a good stand for a candy and peanut store, with which to catch the school-boys' pennies and fips. We didn't have dimes and nickles in those days—it was "fips" and "levies." Every old boy will know what they are. The store was kept by "Barnum." The mention of that name is significant—everybody, and "the rest of mankind," knew, and do know to this day, "Barnum." He used to sing and fiddle:

"It isn't P. B.,
But a greater man than he,
This jolly, good-natured Joe-cy."

Nearly opposite Barnum's, below the school-house, lived Elijah Currens, in what, to my mind, was quite a fine house. I don't think he had the prophetic powers of his ancient namesake, nor was he ever dependent on the ravens for his daily food, he was too industrious, provident and economical for that. He was a harness-maker, or tinner (I am not now certain which), and a highly-respected Christian man. He had two sons who attended the old school and they were very fine boys. I have a very kindly remembrance of his daughter Emma, who frequently assisted me through difficult lessons. I cannot refrain from requesting you to kindly remember me to her—trusting the years that have passed since we met may sit as lightly upon her brow as upon that of the writer.

Old Granny Snovell kept a sort of haberdashery or peanut store down on York street. We school-boys always thought she manufactured her stick licorice out of burnt molasses and coffee grounds, but later years have convinced me that we did the old lady great injustice. She was a quiet, unassuming old soul, and a devout Catholic. She always gave good measure in peanuts, and her ring-streaked and striped candy was very tempting to the school-boy's palate. I suppose she has long ere this gone to realize the pleasures of a life beyond, assured to her by her devotion to her religion.

A short time after the above article relating to Mrs. Hiteshew was written, I noticed in the obituary column of the SENTINEL an account of her death. I must say it filled me with sincere and profound grief. I cannot pay any higher tribute to her memory, or give more emphasis to my sincere grief, perhaps, than is expressed in what I have already written. I tender the children, relatives and friends my heartfelt sympathy, and join with them in mourning the loss of a noble woman, full of honors and ripe in years. O. T. B.
