Why Boys Leave the Farm.

Burdette in HAWKEYE.

"Why do the boys leave the farm?" wails a writer in an agricultural journal. Well, dear brother, there are several reasons. One is because the boy is not 65 years old at his birth. Then, if there is a hoe on the farm weighing fourteen ounces, bright as nickel plate and sharp as a razor, and another hoe weighing somewhat less than a breaking plow, with an edge on it like a hammer, and a sapling with the bark on for a handle, the hired man takes one and the boy gets the other, and every man in America knows which is the other. Did you ever stand with such a hoe in your hands away down in a corn row on some airless, still, hot summer day, twenty acres of corn blades and tassels wilting about you, standing fourteen inches higher than your head, shutting out every last trace of breathable air, and then hear a locust down in the edge of the timber strike up his long, strident, monotonous call to make it ten times hotter? And all this time a cool creek not a mile away, loitering in deep, silent pools in shady places in the woods, or breaking into merry dancing ripples over the pebbles? And in the deep holes, the fish just lying around waiting for a boy? Well, then, you know why some boys leave the farm. Still, boys can be kept on the farm and made to stay there all their lives. You drive a long spike through a boy's abdomen and through a live oak tree, and clinch or bolt on the other side, and then saw off the boy's legs and break his back, and he will stay on the farm. Yes, there are some other ways we know, but this is the only infallible method.

* * *

Don't All Fly to Hogs.

Colman's Rural World, since its editor became Commissioner of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, has learned a good deal, and is nothing if not statistical, and sage withal. Talking about hog statistics the World has the following very good suggestions:

Hog crop statistics given by the department of agriculture show the hog supply to be below what it has been for three previous years in the great swine and corn growing States. From this it is inferable that hogs will command good prices for another year at least. The great scarcity of feed would by natural law hold prices up. This point comes up in our thought: A great many farmers know these facts by reading the reports sent out by compilers. Others reason that pork will be valuable because corn is scarce; but many of these do not know that hogs are also considered short. Now how many men give thought enough to what they learn to live it out in action? How many, when the highest price is on are not ready, and when down have nothing to sell? Statistics are valuable only so far as we make use of their pointers, and to get the best ones it takes more than a casual glance. The naked statement is not all, but the other things bearing on it must be considered. But because hogs will do well in another year it does not follow that all farmers should rush to hogs; but rather let those that are in the hog business increase their efforts.

Show Your Hands.

Entering an Austin watchmaker's establishment, a country negro produced the hands of a clock and observed to the astonished watchmaker:

"Boss, I wants yer ter fix up dese han's. Dey jess don't keep no kere't time for moah den six munfs."

"Vere has you got de glock?" interrogated the German proprietor of the establishment.

"Out at de house on Injun Creek."

"Ven you prings him in?"

"Whaffor you want de clock?"

"I vants to fix dot glock mit der hands."

"Of course yer fixes it wid yer han's. Who said yer was gwineter fix it wid yer toes?"

"I must hab de glock."

"Didn't I tole yer dar was nuffin de matter wid de clock 'ceptin' de han's and I have dun brung 'em ter yer? You jest wants de clock so you kin tinker wid it and charge me like de debble. Gib me back dem han's," and taking them away from the designing German he went out to hunt up another establishment.

* * *

Sin, repentance and pardon are like to the three vernal months of the year—March, April and May. Sin comes in like March—blustering, stormy and full of bold violence. Repentance succeeds like April—showering, weeping and full of tears. Pardon follows like May—springing, singing, full of joys and flowers. Our eyes must be full of April, with the sorrow of repentance; and then our hearts shall be full of May with the true joy of forgiveness.—Thomas Adams.

In securing seed be careful that you are not buying old varieties with new names. Old, tried varieties of vegetables should never be discarded as long as they give good results. A change of seed, without first experimenting with the new variety the year previous, may cause a loss of the entire crop.
