SPORTING NOTES

FOOTBALL SEASON AT HAND—NEW MEN FOR W. C. TEAM ARRIVE HERE—OTHER SPORTING NOTES

With Washington College now open, and with Coach Kibler having his football candidates on the field for the preliminary practice, local sportdom has begun to sit up and take notice and to cast wistful eyes toward the college campus with expectant hopes that something might happen to bolster up the eleven this fall. Since the war Coach Kibler has had the most difficult football problems to face that perhaps any football catch ever had to contend with in the history of football at Washington College or any other college. The first year found a team here, nine of whom had never took part in a real football contest. Last year, with the addition of Seigenfuse and Bowes, the team was a little better, but with no scrub to battle with, the season was almost over before the team began to round into form. This year we hear wihsperings of big, strong, heavy men that will be able to bolster up our line, and speedy backs from the North that, with a strong interference which this line will afford, will be able to tear through the opposing teams for tremendous gains. Whether this undercurrent of secret talk will materialize in rugged players being added to our team, or is the usual before-season buncombe that is usually heard around Chestertown, it will take time to tell. The rumors were given decided credence on Monday night when, with little warning, a gigantic tackle, Mr. Keenan, who hails from the well-known northern town styled Waterbury, breezed into town and in company with Thomas Healey, Esq., assistant coach of the W. C. football team, was introduced to a great many of our people. In company with this gigantic man was a much smaller gentleman, whom Mr. Healey introduced as Mr. Crowe, who will be seen in the backfield. The former gentleman lifts the beam at 275 pounds and was so much larger than the average man about here that he was the centre of many admiring eyes. He is a giant in stature and built and will make a mountain of defence for our team's line. The latter gentleman, Mr. Crowe, comes from the same section of the country and is said to be one of the speediest men in the football game. So we have a good start, with the biggest man perhaps that ever attended Washington College and one of the fastest men that ever attended the school. With a few more additions like them our coaches will be able to weld together a team that will make the other state elevens think we have woke up over here on the Eastern Shore in the football line. And that is what we need here at the College—big, strong, heavy set men for the line, who can hold the other team until our backs get a good start, then speedy, clever fellows, who will dash over the ground for big gains.

It is likely the Washington-Fordham football game, scheduled to be played in New York City, will be called off. This team is doubtless heavy for our team here and would break up our players and make them unfit for the games with state college elevens.

The Chestertown coon hunters paid their first visit to Tolchester Swamps on Monday night, not for the purpose of killing game, however, but to try out some new dogs in this section. The dogs worked pretty good and put up two coons in short order, which did not, however, may a long run.

The University of Delaware and the University of Pennsylvania will clash today, Saturday, on Franklin Field, Philadelphia. Penn will very likely defeat Delaware College, but Delaware has been making preparations for them for several weeks and will likely give them a battle.

The two hardest hitters that sport has ever known have been developed in this age—Dempsey and Ruth. They seem the only two that have all the combinations needed to grind out the super-socker. These combinations are: physical power; leverage; perfect co-ordination of mind and muscle, producing perfect timing, with no wasted effort; the skill needed to direct bat or leather glove in the right way. Fitzsimmons had the leverage and Jeffries the physical power, but it remained for Dempsey to have both. Ed Delahanty had both leverage and power, but was not up to the standard of Ruth, who, with all his great strength of wrist and arm, can get his vast body into the swing as part of a perfect machine better than anyone else. These two stand in a class by themselves. Many generations will wait to see their equals again.

Johnny Kilbane easily retained the featherweight boxing title against Frush Saturday by defeating him in the seventh round, when the latter went to the rosin. It is not often that Kilbane comes out, but when he does, he says something.

William T. Tilden, second, of Philadelphia, is again national tennis champion. He won the 1921 title by defeating Wallace F. Johnson, also of that city, 6-1, 6-3, 6-1, in the final round of the fortieth annual championship singles tournament of the United States Tennis Association in what is said to be the record of 43 minutes, on Monday. Tilden rose to super-heights in his play. The speed and accuracy of both his service and return strokes dazzled and smothered his opponent.

While the hunting season in Kent county is, officially, nearly two months off, it will be well for our hunters to look to the health and general condition of their dogs in order, if for nothing else, that they may be in condition when the time comes for them to be called to field and woods for real business. Real lovers of dogs always keep their dogs in condition and this is what every owner of a dog should do. Keepers of hounds are more apt to pay keen attention to their dogs than any other owners of animals, because of the fact that they can be used to trail foxes at any time of the year. Owners of other dogs would do well to follow their example.

The Mercy Of Morning

From Baltimore Sun

After the night's long fever,
And the aching and old unrest—
Ah, for the mercy of morning,
With its balm for the fevered breast!
The kiss of the fresh wind blowing
From the cool vault above,
And the music of many minstrels
Telling the world their love:
The new and the old undying
Renewed, ineffable grace
Of the mercy that brings back smiling
Of roses to nature's face.

Give me the mercy of morning,
And let me be glad in the light
That has led me out of the shadows
And brought me out of the night!
That breath and balm of the morning,
That dewy and delicate smell
Of the woods and the far green places,
The rill, and the little dell:
The golden spirit of morning,
Its zephyrs that are so sweet;
The world like a young girl waking
With the ripples of morn at her feet.

Bounding and bright with compassion,
The old, dark sorrow agone—
Oh, for the mercy of morning,
The healing and vigor of dawn!
The love to rise up for the battle,
To gird on the armor of Man,
And go forth sweet for the struggle
With a brave "I will; I can!"
The splendid refuge of morning
From the fear and doubt and dread;
With that throwing back of the shoulders,
And that holding up of the head.

The old, unfailing compassion,
New in the morning of strife,
Oh for the wonderful purpose
It pours in the beaker of life!
A brimming and beautiful essence,
That tingles us out of fear
To the far, sweet call of the bugles,
As the valleys re-echo it clear;
The wonderful joy of morning,
When out of our grief we rise
To the sunny ripple of waters,
The beautiful blue of the skies.

Danger and desolation,
Shrinking in vain despair
From life and its endless struggle
In the night of our hidden care—
Then, from the troubled sleeping,
The dream that harries and hounds,
To rise to the mercy of morning,
Its pipings and sweet sounds:
The new and delightsome morning,
The hand of its velvet power
Laying its peace on our spirit
Like the cool, soft leaf of a flower.

Quick Service Of Telephone Company

At 4 a. m. on the morning of Sept. 20, 1921, a fire broke out in the garage of Mr. Lee Walston, on Frank St., in Denton. This garage is directly in the rear of the Telephone Company's building. The main terminal pole of the telephone system is located directly in front of the building which was burned. This fire brought to light a piece of particularly quick and efficient trouble-work on the part of the C. & P. Telphone Co. The fire did considerable damage to the Telephone Co.'s system, burning 22 trunk lines, 56 local lines and a 400-pair cable, which interrupted the service of 80 telephone subscribers. At 5.30 a. m., the Telephone Co.'s men were on the scene and ready for work. By 9.30 a. m., the 22 trunk lines were repaired, which reinstated service to the people in Denton and this immediate territory over the Telephone Co.'s long distance lines. At 10 a. m., all of the physicians' telephones were in service, and in a few hours all of the subscribers' telephones were in good working order by night.

In the repairing of this 400-pair cable, the expense to the Telephone Co. was tremendous, as it necessitated the transportation by automobile of one of their expert cable men from a distant point. Fortunately, the Telephone Co. is well organized and well equipped to take care of troubles such as this, and it is very gratifying to note that such a splendid job has been completed in such a short time.
