Armistice Day Celebration

Armistice Day, Friday, November 11, will be fittingly observed by the American Legion in Chestertown. This day marks the anniversary of the end of the greatest war that the world has ever known, a war in which this country participated to the extent of leaving buried in France over 75,000 dead. Armistice Day will be observed throughout the country and it is certainly fitting that Kent county should do its part.

A parade will form at the M. D. & V. Wharf, at the foot of High street, at 10.30 a. m., and will march to Washington College. This parade will be led by the American Legion. The school children of Chestertown, the National Guard Company and other organizations will take part in this parade. At the College the American flag will be raised on the pole erected in the middle of the campus. Hon. T. Alan Goldsborough, United States Congressman from this district, and other speakers will then make addresses in William Smith Hall.

All organizations are invited to participate in this parade, either singly or in bodies. It is the desire of the American Legion to make Armistice Day one of the red letter days in American history. It is hoped that this will be a community affair. Everybody is invited to join in the parade.

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

The Cotillion Club held a masked dance, its first dance of the season, in the college gymnasium, October 28. A large crowd from out of town was present. The costumes were various and numerous. The gay decorations of the hall and the many brilliant costumes gave the affair the appearance of a carnival. In the elimination dancing contest Mr. Sparklin and Miss Mills won the two-and-a-half-dollar gold piece prize.

College training is truly a wonderful thing. One of the benefits derived from such a training is the ability to reason well. For instance, the collegians have concluded, both by deductive and inductive reasoning, that if it rained on halloween there was no reason why they could not celebrate it some other night. What matters it if they celebrated it even on the 4th of July? As long as they celebrated it at all they were justified in doing it most any time of the year. Firm in this conviction, the students had their halloween on Tuesday, Nov. 1. Of course, the great annual parade had to be held. The affair is called a shirt-tail parade. The students are supposed to wear pajamas and the real dress is most anything from a one-piece bathing suit to a bath robe. Some looked like gymnasts in their gym suits, others looked like convicts in their striped pajamas, while still others looked like friars or dancing dervishes in their long night shirts and skull caps. So, dressed in all the nightly apparel it could find, the student body set out, in a long single file, on a march through town. They cheered, sang, skipped, jumped and ran through all the streets. On High street the gathering appeared really spectacular. The stores, with one or two exceptions, were closed; the street, except for a few by-standers, was deserted; the night was dark and solemn. The white-cald students placed themselves in a semi-circle; silence reigned. Then there came a loud announcement, a quick "hep, hep," and a loud cheer burst forth from the throats of all the students once, twice, thrice. We have never seen a K. K. K. gathering, but we imagine that at that moment the students must have looked like "Ku Kluxers." Those of Chestertown who were so unfortunate as to be asleep then will always regret having missed such a sight. Then the crowd dispersed. Men were sent in search of boxes. The return to the Hill started. At the end of the campus a great bond fire was built and the new men furnished the amusements.
