"I'll Tell the World" Says Harry McLoud

Well-known Sparrows' Point man a wreck at 45. Now hale and happy, gained 35 lbs. and gives all credit to Tanlac

Mr. McLoud lives at the Eldred Hotel in Sparrows' Point, Md., and is a well-known figure in ship building circles, as well as in fraternal organizations. His close friends know him as "Happy Mac."

"From childhood I was fragile," he says, "and the family doctor predicted I would never see 21. Well, I did, and for many years afterwards led a gay and hearty life. But by 45 I paid dearly for it. I was a complete physical wreck. I felt 'all in' and at the end of my rope.

"Well, sir, I took Tanlac and I'll tell the world it put me back on my feet. My weight had fallen to 140 lbs., and I could hardly drag myself around. Everything seemed to have gone wrong inside me. But Tanlac built me back to 175 lbs., and I've never before felt so full of life and energy. My nerves are strong as steel and I eat and sleep like a child. My own friends are amazed at the change and I tell them that Tanlac is entitled to exclusive credit for the transformation."

If you are rundown and weak, if your system needs a revitalizing tonic and builder, start taking Tanlac without further delay. It is nature's own tonic, made from herbs, roots and barks. Your druggist has it. Over 52 million bottles sold.

COMMUNICATIONS MUST GO THROUGH

Various as are the tasks of the gigantic telephone army of America, its members are moved by a common purpose—to get the message through in the best possible way and the shortest possible time, according to Arthur Pound in The Manufacturers Industrial News Bureau.

In the morale of the telephone group of 1927 shines the same passion for promptness which thrilled weary Inca runners on their gruelling Journeys from the capital to the outposts of the empire. Now as then he who is intrusted with communications accepts the fixed idea of his craft—that upon the go-between rests the well-being of the whole.

Dramatically, this gallant answer to responsibility for communications flares forth whenever an operator sticks to the switchboard in the "bright face of danger," whenever a lineman atop storm-swayed pole risks his life to heal a broken nerve in the nation's wire system. Undramatically, but with equal vigor, this spirit of the enterprise animates, as part of the unwritten law of their lives, many thousands of other workers in tasks which escape public notice. Thus this widespread army of telephone folk, though not under a single employer, has arrived at a rough-hewn solidarity of interest through their devotion to getting the message through.

AMPLIFIERS USED AT INAUGURATION

Governor Albert C. Ritchie taking the oath of office.

A large crowd heard Governor Ritchie take the oath of office at his recent inauguration. Through the installation of the public address system installed by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Baltimore City, thousands of people surrounding the historic old State House at Annapolis were able to hear the inaugural address and the responses of Governor Ritchie to Chief Judge Carroll Bond of the Court of Appeals, who swore him in. It is estimated that about 7,500 people were able to hear the speeches incident to the ceremony at this inaugural clearly and distinctly. Governor Ritchie is succeeding himself and beginning his third term as Chief Executive of Maryland.

The Bell System public address equipment is now used almost universally at inaugurations and similar ceremonies. At many conventions and church gatherings where large crowds are assembled, this equipment is installed so that "all who come may hear." The Bell Public Address System was first used at the inauguration of President Harding, March 4, 1921.

HOME TELEPHONES

About two-thirds, or 11,400,000, of the total number of telephones in the Bell System in the United States are residence telephones. These 11,400,000 residence, or as they are sometimes called, "home" telephones, serve approximately 10,700,000 families. The excess of residence telephones over the number of families having telephones is due, in large part, to the use of extension stations. More and more the average home is being equipped with extension telephones so that weary housewives will not have to walk upstairs or downstairs in order to answer the telephone, or to put in a call.

NEW DIRECT LINE

A direct telephone line between Denver and Salt Lake City has been established. Heretofore all long distance communication between Colorado and Utah have had to be routed by way of Cheyenne in Wyoming. The new line, however, offers a direct route across eastern Utah. To establish the connection more than 1,000 miles of telephone wire were strung on 5,642 poles.

TUNES BIG ORGAN

What is said to be the largest organ in the world has recently been completed in Liverpool Cathedral. It is so big that a private telephone system has been installed, with seventeen telephones located in various parts of the huge instrument, so that the workmen engaged in tuning it can communicate with an assistant at the keyboard.
