About half-past 6 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, during the progress of the thunder storm which occurred that day, the barn of Benjamin Bond, near Emory Chapel, in the Fourth district, was struck by lightning and burned, with its contents, consisting of about 100 bushels of wheat, a lot of oats and a lot of hay. The appearance of the meteors known as the Perseids reached its maximum last night, August 10th. Whether these meteors were in anywise connected with a peculiar appearance of the heavens soon after sunset a few evenings ago, we are unable to say; but there were several well defined belts, of a pale yellowish color, extending clear across the sky from the Western to the Eastern horizon. As the light faded they disappeared. The metoric exhibition referred to will now rapidly decline and disappear entirely in a few days.

Among the callers at the SENTINEL office, during the past week, was John Musser, of Spring Mills, who is in the 71st year of his age. Mr. Musser is a staunch Republican and says the party will not die while he lives. He cast his first vote for Gen. Wm. Henry Harrison in 1840 and has never swerved from his political faith. He is an enthusiast on the subject of Gen. Benjamin Harrison's nomination and takes great delight in the opportunity to vote for him on issues similar to those that carried his illustrious grandsire into the Presidential chair.

A beautiful specimen of the night blooming cereus was exhibited at the residence of Rev. Chas. A. Reid, in this city, on Friday night of last week. The flower plant is of only a few years growth, but it is in a very healthy condition and bore five perfect flowers. It was seen by upwards of 400 persons. The buds were closed at sundown, but soon afterwards began to expand and shortly after dark were fully opened. The rare and delicate beauty of this variety of the cacti is a never failing source of pleasure, marred only by its fleeting character. It blooms but for a night and in the morning is withered and dead. The specimen described is rarely excelled. It is the property of Mrs. Nelson Mitten of this city.

Verley J. Clousher, Superintendent of the McDonough School Farm, was in this city on Tuesday last and called at the SENTINEL office to renew his subscription for the coming year. He informs us that he will complete the filling of the coal sheds on the farm, in a day or two, when there will be on hand 362 tons from the Cumberland region. This, however, will not be sufficient for the year, and 50 to 100 tons more will be required. In addition to this, about 300 cords of wood will be consumed at the institution. Mr. Clousher states that he will seed 75 or 80 acres in grain, and has the ground nearly prepared for the purpose. In about three weeks he will begin securing ensilage and will pack about 300 tons of it.

The attention of the Republicans of the county is particularly invited to the call for the primary meetings, published at the head of our editorial colums. These primaries are to elect delegates to the county convention to be held at the Republican Club Room, Bowers' building, in this city, at noon on Monday next, and which in its turn will elect delegates to the Second Congressional District convention to be held in Dushane Post Hall, Baltimore, at noon on Wednesday, 15th inst., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Congress. The primary meetings will be held at the usual places in the several districts between 4 and 6 o'clock this, Saturday afternoon. The meeting for Westminster district will be held at the Republican Club Room.

Miss Emma Smeach, of Baltimore, daughter of Noah Smeach, formerly of this city, who had been in declining health for several months, died at the residence of B. F. Crouse, Esq., on Thursday afternoon. She came to Westminster, on Monday, to visit Mr. Crouse and his family, and in the hope of being benefitted in health. After her arrival she failed rapidly. Dr. J. H. Billingslea was called to see her, but could do nothing to arrest the progress of the disease, which was rapid consumption. Miss Smeach was much attached to Mr. Crouse's family, and when she realized the approach of death said she was just where she wished to die. She was a member of the Lexington street Reformed Church, Baltimore. Her remains will be interred at Krider's cemetery, near this city, on Sunday.

The Westminster market was well attended by buyers on Saturday evening last, but the supply of provisions, vegetables &c., was not equal to the demand It is sincerely hoped this state of things may be corrected to-night. Let sellers bring along their products and keep the market moving.

The Century keeps up its custom of making the August a "Midsummer Holiday number." The points of novelty in this number are the beginning of an ingeniously planned story in three parts by Thomas A. Janiver, author of the "Ivory Black" stories, and an astronomical series by Professor Holden of the Lick University. Mr. Janiver's new serial is called "A Mexican Campaign." It need hardly be said that this is not a new War Series. The Frontispiece of the August Century is a portrait of Geo. Kennan in his study, drawn by Henry Sandham, and shows the celebrated traveler at work on his Siberian papers. The article giving a sketch of his life is by Miss Anna Laurens Dawes, daughter of the Massachusetts senator. Kennan's own article in this number describes his "Meeting with the Political Exiles." This number of the Century contains many other interesting features, mention of which is omitted for lack of space.

Misses Nannie and Louise Lynch, of Westminster, Md., and Miss Donnelly, of Baltimore, enlivened the household of Mr. Edward Shriver the past week. Mr. Henry I. Wilson and Mr. Ned Lynch, of Westminster, were also among Mr. Shriver's guests. And since their departure Ed. has been bewailing the wreck made in his pastry department. For a few days pies disappeared by the dozen, while it kept one man constantly transporting watermelons to the scene of carnage, and Ed. blames these two young gentlemen for it all, too.—Keystone Gazette.

The Gazette man ought to understand that the young gentlemen named hail from a land of abundance and are accustomed to good living and plenty of it. We hope it isn't Waynesboro' style, generally, to couple, with her hospitality, criticism of the gustatory capacity of her guests. In this region the surest way to a host's favor is to do full and ample justice to the good things he provides with a free and lavish hand. We are very sure the young gentlemen referred to will make this remark good to the satisfaction of the Gazette man whenever he feels like putting it to the test

The other four were discharged at Bartholow, but without effect, as the frightened market man was fleeing as rapidly as possible from the scene. The affair occasioned much excitement and provoked much comment in the community. As far as we have heard the assailant is not severely condemned by his neighbors.

Keysville Items.

This vicinity had a splendid rain on Sunday night.

Farmers are busy with their after-harvest work.

The picnic of the Keysville Sunday School, in Henry Baker's grove, on Saturday last, was a splendid success. The attendance was very large—so great indeed that the supply of water provided for the occasion by the committee was entirely insufficient. Mr. Dorsey, an officer of the school who resides in the immediate vicinity permitted the use of his pump, but heedless persons wasted so much water that the well was exhausted by two o'clock. The committee had a supply hauled to the ground as promptly as possible. The cause of the deficiency was due to the unexpected attendance of so large a number of persons. It will not occur again, Addresses were delivered by a Reverend gentleman from Lancaster, Pa., whose name I did not learn; Rev. Mr. McLinn, of Union Bridge, and Rev. Mr. Ditzler, of Taneytown. The receipts were about $100. Samuel Angel, of Bruceville, is the very efficient Superintendent of the school and deserves great credit for the manner in which it has developed under his charge.

The picnic at Baust's church, on the 18th, will be a grand affair, and those who fail to be present will miss an interesting event.

Blackberrying and wine-making is indulged in by some of the ladies of this vicinity. They don't seem to have the fear of St. John—the modern I mean—of temperance proclivities before their eyes.

In consequence of the absence of Rev. Mr. Souders there will be no preaching at Baust's church on Sunday, 12th inst. There will be Sunday School at 9. A. M. and prayer-meeting in the evening.

Misses Addie Manahan and Minnie Summers have determined to attend the State Normal School, in Baltimore, the coming scholastic year. They will be much missed in the community, particularly in the Church and Sunday school. They were elected organists of the latter last spring and have filled the stations very efficiently.

Your correspondent was at the old Linwood camp-ground, near Pipe Creek, a few days ago and found Ezra Garner busily preparing for the meeting which commences on the 10th inst. There will be 26 tents, and the oldtime rosin fire hearth will be used for lighting the camp.

There was some consternation among apple-growers, in this neighborhood, when it was learned that Levi Manahan had resolved not to run his cider mill this season, but their fears have been relieved by Chas. F. Manahan, who has rented the mill and will manufacture cider on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of each week during the season.

Cold Springs Summer Resort.

The many friends of Chas. E. C. Smith, of Baltimore, son of Hon. Jno. E. Smith, of this city, who went, quite recently, to Cold Springs, Lebanon county, Pa., will be pleased to learn that he is already experiencing the beneficial influences of that mountain resort. Mr. Smith has been suffering from general lassitude, the result of close application to business, but feels assured that he will be entirely relieved and restored to his wonted vigor by the reviving effects of the pure mountain water, air, and other advantages of the springs. We are permitted to make an extract from a letter written by him under date of August 4th, in which he describes, quite enthusiastically, some of the attractive features of the place. "I am" he says, "feeling as bright as a dollar, this morning, after a long walk through the grove and a delightful row on the lake, which is quite a large one, narrowing down to a most picturesque stream, surrounded by rugged rocks and branches, beautifully wild and romantic. It is charmingly wild, with high towering mountains on either side. The lake, which is the rendevous for every one, is plentifully supplied with boats which are free to guests. The walks through the mountain in which the house lies are lovely. Amusements abound—such as swings, horses and a dancing pavilion, billiard and bowling alley, so we are not at a loss for something to do, but the mountain scenery is so attractive, the walks so enticing that I do not care for any other amusement. The spring proper—cold spring—from which the hotel derives its name, is the most beautiful I have ever seen. It is just below the house, 10x10 by 6 feet deep, walled in and water as clear as crystal and cold too—the temperature during the hottest days is 42°."

Strangers are always impressed with the beauty of the country adjacent to this village, and even those who have long been partial residents feel as keen a interest in its loveliness and health giving influences as when first their eye were enraptured with its charming landscape of field and meadow and wood Its farms are under a high state of cultivation; immense crops of cereals and produce are annually harvested; its fruit supply is abundant, and the quality of its dairy output is not excelled by any other. From Washington, west to the mountains, there is not a more charmingly located village; none with which nature has dealt more kindly; none in which more generous hospitality and reasonable freedom have been shown. It is readily accessible from the railroads; its altitude is sufficient to insure a good atmosphere; it has pure water in springs and streams; it is without marshes and swamps, and i free from any taint of malaria. However, it needs improvement in its buildings and architecture, and some of it lanes and roads would present a mor inviting appearance if lined with shad trees and kept free from litter and refuse Pathways should be constructed fro Lambert's creek to the dairy, and fro the postoffice to the school-house, thu affording clean and safe walks for pedestrians. New fences should be constructed, and the residents should vi with each other in keeping lawns an yards in perfect order. For the welfar and comfort of citizen and stranger th writer hopes to see these improvement established. A little effort on the part o each inhabitant would make it a paradise, into which the tired and feebl would be glad to come for rest and invigoration, to the pecuniary advantage o its people, and to the general welfare o the whole community.

What Did Job Mean? Not What He Said.

MR. EDITOR:—In reply to the inquiry of your correspondent, W. D., permit me to observe that the true question to be considered is, "What did Job mean?" not "What did Job say?" For we know perfectly well what he said. His language is recorded in the Hebrew Bible. The difficulty, if any, is to ascertain what Job's Hebrew words mean in English. Your correspondent refers to the marginal reading in the Authorized Version (King James', so called,) as inconsistent with the reading of the text. The two renderings, in full, are as follows: Text, Job, 19:26—"And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Margin—"After I shall awake, though this body be destroyed, yet out of my flesh shall I see God." The discrepancy between the two expressions, "in my flesh" and "out of my flesh," is what appears to trouble our friend W. D. The Revised Version gives still another rendering: "And after my skin hath been thus destroyed, yet from my flesh shall I see God." Now, if we attentively consider the whole subject of the Patriarch's discourse upon this occasion, it will appear that all these varied English expressions—"in my flesh," "out of my flesh," "from my flesh"—have but one and the same meaning, the variety arising from the difficulty of expressing in our modern English prose, or in that of any other highly-cultivated modern language, the precise shade of thought conveyed in the poetry of a language so ancient as the Hebrew. Job was at this time suffering the pangs of very severe bodily affliction, he was mourning the desolations of his household, and, withal, contending with the fierce buffetings of Satan. And, to fill his cup to overflowing, his friends that came to condole with him and comfort him entered into an elaborate discussion of his case, in which both the providence of God and the character of their afflicted friend suffered alike injustice; for they evidently misunderstood the one and misrepresented the other. From their unkind and erroneous judgment the indignant Patriarch appealed for full and triumphal vindication to his living Redeemer (Hebrew, Goel, Bondsman, Vindicator, Elder Brother,) who, he was confidently assured, would, in the resurrection at the last day, stand upon the earth; and that, although he himself should lie in the grave and see corruption, yet, in his resurrection body he should see God, looking out from that body upon his glorified Redeemer; whom he would then see for himself, as his friend, and not another—a stranger. And so, notwithstanding all the obscurity that then rested upon God's dealings with him, he was conscious of personal integrity, and was assured of a saving interest in the great redemption. Like every true believer, Job was fully persuaded, he knew, that "the souls of the righteous are at their death made perfect in holiness, and do immediately pass into glory; and their bodies, being still united to Christ, do rest in their graves until the resurrection." And blessed indeed is the man who, when afflicted, misunderstood and misrepresented, can, amidst the deep surrounding darkness, say with the faith of Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth."
