The Maryland State Egg Laying Contest being conducted by the University of Maryland, will start its third annual lap on November 1st, the curtain coming down on the Second Annual Contest October 31, 1927. Professor Roy H. Waite, supervisor of the contest reports room for several more pens in the Third Annual Contest, beginning November 1st. These vacancies are not likely to remain long, and Maryland breeders should not delay in making application for entries. Official egg records are valuable assets in breeding for improved egg production and are valuable for advertising as well. It should be borne in mind that the contest facilities are limited to 100 pens, and that some applicants are very apt to be disappointed in belated efforts to make up entry. Application forms may be secured from any county agent, from Roy H. Wate, Contest Supervisor, College Park, or from this office. Make all applications to Roy H. Yaite, Contest Supervisor, College Park, Md.

Applications for the certification of breeding flocks and hatcheries, including testing of flocks for Bacillary White Diarrhea, are now being received. reports Aaron Fell, Secretary of the Maryland State Poultry Association, Bethesda, Md. Poultry breeders interested in securing the benefits of this work, which is being conducted by the Maryland State Poultry Association, with the University of Maryland cooperating, are urged to file applications at once. Inspection and testing are scheduled to start about Sepptember 15th. in order to cover the work to be done. Applications must be received in time for the necessary work to be properly scheduled. All applications should be made at the earliest possible date to prevent disappointment. Mail all applications to Aaron Fell, Secy. Maryland State Poultry Association, Bethesda, Md.

The Third World's Poultry Congress, held at Ottawa, Canada, July 27 August 4 inclusive was, beyond doubt, the biggest event pertaining to the poultry industry, that the world has ever seen. Over twelve thousand delegates from outside Canada were in attendance, and a wealth of information was available to all through the extensive exhibits and the group meetings covering such phases as marketing, nutrition, diseases, breeding, extension and general. Papers were presented on subjects under these heads by leading authorities of the world.

The Congress Exhibition at Lansdowne Park comprised exhibits from 42 different countries, and covered the entire field of the poultry industry. The Fourth World's Poultry Congress will be held in London in 1930.

Many poultry raisers apparently believe that growing pullets need little else at this season but feed and water, only to realize later that certain neglected details in management have delayed proper development, or have resulted in the occurrence of serious trouble in some form.

Uninterrupted and growth and development of the pullets are vital factors in moulding their future egg records. Overcrowding is one of the most common occurrences in flocks of growing pullets, and a detail which if neglected, is very apt to lead to serious trouble. As pullets develop, they need increased room for ranging and roosting, and where large broods of chicks are brooded, extra houses or shelters should be provided so as to divide the pullets and prevent overcrowding. Overlooking this detail is a mistake often made by poultry raisers.

The houses and shelters are too often allowed to become filthy during the busy season of the summer months. The periodic cleaning of these buildings should have a definite place in the regular routine of work. weekly cleanings being none too often to promote the health of the pullets and to control disease and parasites. Neglect of this detail may result in infestations of parasites, and outbreaks of disease in some form. Sufficient roosts should be provided so that all birds will have ample roosting room.

Do not allow cockerels which are being saved for breeders to run with the pullets. Give them separate houses and separate fenced runs, and both will develop into better and more profitable birds.

Watch out for lice on the birds and don't neglect to dip or dust them to keep lice in check.

Ample shade and an abundance of water on range for the birds are important essentials for the welfare of the developing birds. Without these essentials, the growth of young birds will be checked.

Green succulent feed is far more important than many people realize, and is a big factor in building sound healthy bodies and vigorous constitutions. Tender green feed has health giving and constitution building properties that mash and grain feed do not have. experiments have shown that pullets grown on range sown to green food not only lay almost twice as many eggs as pullets grown on bare ground and fed no green food. but are far less subject to disease outbreaks, because of stronger and more vigorous constitutions. Beware of bare runs for growing pullets. With bare runs are often associated birds with pale shanks and beaks in the more popular breeds. Pale or white shanks on pullets of yellow skinned breeds constitute a danger sign. Such pullets are apt to experience serious trouble such as an infestation of worms, coccidiosis, colds and roup, chicken pox, cholera. fowl typhoid, etc. Pullets should have a liberal run with shade, green food, water and insects all in abundance.

The proper feeding of the pullets in late summer is of great importance. Extra rapid maturity or heavy summer producion that can be secured by feeding heavily of mash high in meat scraps or milk rations should be avoided. Very early hatched pullets cannot be held out of production very long without the danger of troubles developing. The best plan in feeding the pullets in summer is to feed moderately of a good growing mash and liberally of wholesome grains. Hopper feeding, or extra liberal allowances of grain, may well be given the pullet for about two weeks, just previous to laying their first eggs. Care should be exercised so as not to over feed. as the birds should clean up the grain well.

Liberal grain feeding is important in serving to put flesh on the bodies of pullets about ready to commence production. Good flesh is esstenial to high and sustained egg production. It pays in future egg production, to give the pullets a good chance.

Farmers, List Your Repair Needs

It would be hard to find a farmer who at some time or another had not lost valuable time waiting for necessary repair parts. Take this territory and total up the time lost in this way and it will astonish you. And all because repairs are not ordered as early as they should be.

There is no better time than right now—just before the busiest season on the farm—to go over your machines carefully, make a list of repairs you are likely to need and send it to us. With this list in our hands, we can order our stock so as to be prepared t meet every call promptly.

Repair part service is a necessary part of our business. We realize what it means to you in time and money to get what you need at once. Help us to help you by making up your list now and sending it in to us.
