Do you know that within the past eighteen months the Maryland-Virginia Joint Stock Land Bank of Baltimore, through Wm. Frazier Russell, Jr., its attorney, has loaned to Kent County Farmers more than $90,000.00?

Do you know that you pay no bonuses or commissions to secure a loan through this bank?

Do you know that when you borrow $1000.00 you get a draft for $1000.00?

Do you know that every time you pay your interest you cut down the principal mortage indebtedness?

Your neighbors are getting "wise." It will cost you nothing to learn.

Farmers, List Your Repair Needs

It would be hard to find a farmer who at some time or another had not lost valuable time waiting for necessary repair parts. Take this territory and total up the time lost in this way and it will astonish you. And all because repairs are not ordered as early as they should be.

There is no better time than right now—just before the busiest season on the farm—to go over your machines carefully, make a list of repairs you are likely to need and send it to us. With this list in our hands, we can order our stock so as to be prepared t meet every call promptly.

Repair part service is a necessary part of our business. We realize what it means to you in time and money to get what you need at once. Help us to help you by making up your list early and sending it in to us.

SPORTS OF WEEK

WASHINGTON WINS FIRST GAME OF SEASON IN HANDY FASHION—OTHER NOTES OF SPORTS REALM

BY POLK T. BRAMBLE

Washington began its basketball season Saturday evening by defeating the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy by the score of 47-37. The game was one of the best first of the season games ever played here.

The game started off slowly and it was three minutes before Carrington dropped the season's first through the cords. The two teams battled along on fairly even terms for a few minutes and then the "Pentagon" began to ease away. With Giritis hitting his stride the locals ran into a 29 to 11 lead at half time. Before the first half was over Coach Kibler had run in several of his reserves and they gave a showing on a par with the starting combination.

In the second half the Washington team coasted along on its lead until the game was about three-fourths gone. Then a series of uncanny shots by the Osteopathy forwards sent them to within 9 points of the Washington team. The locals decided it was time to tighten up and proceeded to do so until the game was over.

Giritis with 8 field goals and 3 fouls was the scoring ace of the contest. He and Carrington worked well at forwards and many of Giritis' shots were the results of assists by Carrington. Usilton also played a fine game.

While the contention is always keen as to who was the greatest heavyweight of all time, there is always a great difference of opinion as to the exact status of the champions.

The best boxer of the lot was Jim Corbett, beyond any argument. He had the greater skill and the greater combined speed of foot and hand. I saw Corbett when he was nearly sixty years old box two rounds with Gene Tunney, and when they were through Tunney remarked: "I didn't know a lightweight could be that fast." And this happened to be 1924, just thirty-two years after Corbett won from Sullivan.

The hardest two-handed hitter of the lot and the most spectacular is Jack Dempsey. John L. may have had just as good a right hand and Jeffries may have had as much in his left, but Dempsey could and can hit with both. Dempsey had more foot speed at his best than Jeffries, Fitzsimmons, Willard or Johnson.

Jeffries and Johnson were the two most powerful physical specimens, Willard having mere bulk. Jack Johnson was the greatest of all the defensive fighters, but nothing to wave about on attack. Fitzsimmons comes close to being the strongest combination of two-handed hitter and boxer. He couldn't quite hit with Dempsey, but he was a better boxer. Fitz had the tough luck to be 36 or 37 before he got his big chance, and by that time his hands were breaking up.

Dempsey at Toledo was without any question the greatest looking ring specimen the game has ever known, when it comes to the three main qualifications—speed, power and ring spirit.

Tommy Loughran, of Philadelphia established his right to the light heavyweight championship of the world at Madison Suare Garden last night when he outpointed Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo in fifteen rounds. Loughran had been recognized in New York State as the champion, but in the States controlled by the National Boxing Association Slattery had been recognized as champion.

Loughran's victory put an end to whatever dispute there was over which of the pair was champion. It was an unusual situation that was presented to the Garden fans with two "champions" in the ring at the same time.

The fleeting star of All-American football fame, after following a Westward course for the last few years, shifts toward the South this season to brighten up a new gridiron constellation.

East and West, where the place usually is swifter, share the major All-American honors for 1927, from a numerical standpoint, but the contributions of the South to the all-star array, greater than ever before, form the most striking feature of the third annual consensus compiled by the Associated Press from the opinions of more than 200 qualified observes—coaches, officials, sports editors and staff experts who covered every sector of the battle front.

On the first team, an eleven so All-American in character that no college has more than one representative, the East captures four places, the Middle West three and the South and Far West each two.

The All-American squad, 33 players altogether, including the shock troops of the second and third teams, reveal the East and Middle West tied, with ten places each, while the South, including the Southwestern area, grabs eight and the Far West five. Twenty-three universities and colleges are represented in this galaxy.

To get an idea of how the South has progressed it is only necessary to note that it contributed only three to the All-American squad last year, including one first-team Domination, and four in 1925. Thus this season the South inserts more stars into the picture than it has in two previous years combined.
