AGRICULTURAL NOTES

GRAIN RATION ADVISED FOR COWS IN SUMMER

High producting cows giving a pound of butterfat or more a day should receive a grain mixture during the entire summer season in addition to the pasturage or hay and ensilage provided, it is said by L. Inghan, assistant in dairy production at the University of Maryland Experiment Station.

When summer pastures become short, the grain ration should be increased about one pound over the amount usually supplied when the pasturage is abundant it is said.

Usually for the cow producing twenty pounds of milk a day four pounds of grain should be sufficient in addition to the other feed. The cow giving twenty-five pounds of milk should have a grain ration of about five pounds while a thirty-pound producer should receive approximately six and a half pounds of grain. The grain ration for cows producing above thirty pounds daily should be proportioned at the rate of one extra pound of grain for every five pounds of increased milk production.

Feeding formulas, of course, should be worked out so that the animals receive properly balanced rations. Attention to the water supply and to the comfort of the cows during the hot weather together with proper feeding will do much toward maintaining a profitable level of milk production during the summer.

It is necessary, however, to study each cow in the herd, says Mr. Inghan, as low producing cows may not give sufficient returns to justify the increased cost of additional grain rations.

Test Plots Employed To Study Tomatoes

Test plots, where varieties of tomatoes for canning are being studied to determine their quality for canning purposes and their relative yielding ability, have been located at a number of strategic points throughout the State this year by the University of Maryland Extension Service in coaperation with the growers and the Tri-State Packers' Association.

The plots, it is expected, will be visited later in the season by growers and canners for the purpose of comparing results and studying the various factors involved in the production of canning tomatoes.

The plots are located at College Park, Prince George's county; West Friendship, Howard county; Silver Run, Carroll county; Bel Air, Harford county; Sylmar, Cecil county; Chestertown, Kent county; Ridgely, Caroline county; St. Michaels, Talbot county; Fruitlands, Wicomico county; Public Landing, Worcester county; and Madison and Hurlock, Dorchester county.

L. M. Goodwin, canning crops specialist for the University of Maryland Extension Service, is supervising the plots in cooperation with other members of the University of Maryland staff and the county agents.

Tomatoes from the test plots at College Park will be canned in a specially equipped plant at the University of Maryland so that a comparsion of the different varieties can be carried through to the finished canned product The usual commercial canning process will be followed, equipment necessary for the operation being provided.

Good Seed Necessary For Alfalfa Stand

Care in the selection of alfalfa seed often means the difference between a good and a poor stand of the crop, says Geary Eppley, Assistant Agronomist at the University of Maryland Experiment Station.

A field, it is pointed out, may be well tilled, but if it is planted with a poor grade of seed a successful alfalfa crop cannot be expected. Price is often an influencing factor with the farmer but cheap seed may prove the most expensive if time and labor and the applications of lime and fertilizer are wasted as the result of inferior seed.

Purity, germination, the percentage of hard seed and adaptability are the important factors to be considered in buying alfalfa seed, it is said. With respect to the first three factors, the farmer is safeguarded by the Maryland State seed law which provides that all seed sold in the State in ten pound lots or more must carry a tag showing the percentage of Canada thistle and other noxious weeds, the amount of hard seed and the percentage of germination. In the matter of adaptability, protection is afforded through the United States Verification Service which verifies the origin of all seed sold.

Ordinarily Maryland farmers are adised to buy common alfalfa seed grown in Kansas or one of the other states of the northwest as seed from such sources seems best adapted to Maryland conditions. There are so many factors involved in the selection of alfalfa seed, however, that it is usually wise for prospective buyers to consult their county agents regarding the best seed to purchase.

HEALTH NOTES

Has YOUR Baby A Certificate of Citizenship?

Brand new, young citizens of Maryland that is, citizens born in the State are having a special honor conferred upon them by the State Department of Health. As soon as the facts of the birth are duly recorded in the Bureau of Vital Statistics, the Bureau that has charge of the records of births and deaths, a finely engraved certificate showing that the child has been legally registered as a citizen, is sent to the parents.

The certificate shows the Great Seal of the State and is signed by Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health. It is of a size suitable for framing and takes the place of the smaller certificate used by the Department.

"Duly signed and sealed, a certificate of this sort is accepted as proof of a person's identity, of his or her birthplace, nationality, age relationships, and for numerous other legal purposes, including.

The right to attend school or to withdraw from school.

The right to the protection afforded by the child labor laws.

The right to vote.

The right to hold public office.

Inheritance rights.

Contract rights.

The age of consent to marry.

The age for jury duty.

The right to secure passports for foreign travel.

The right to protection in foreign countries."

"The laws of Maryland require a baby's birth to be reported within four days, by the physician or midwife in attendance. Parents who are uncertain as to whether or not this has been done, can find out by writing to the State Department of Health, 16 West Saratoga street, Baltimore."

FEDERAL WAREHOUSES AT DOVER, DEL.

Announcement was made today by G. Leslie Gooden, Secretary and Treasurer of Delmarva Warehouses, Inc., of receipt of a license to operate a Federal warehouse in Dover and also negotiable warehouse receipts to be used in connection therewith. The license and receipts came from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics at Washington. Mr. W. L. Harris, President of the concern, has been granted a license as canned goods inspector after spending sometime in Washington studying the system under tutelage of expert Government inspectors.

This Government license and the accompanying provisions now completes arrangements for the opening of the first Federal Warehouse in Delaware. It provides, according to Mr. Gooden, every requirement demanded under the Federal Warehouse system which includes storage of canned goods for which are issued Federal Warehouse receipts that are recognized as immediate collateral for credit and are accepted by banks up to a material percentage of the valuation of goods stored.

Much credit for the establshment of this Federal Warehouse at Dover, according to Mr. Gooden, is due to the activity of the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Associaton and the splendid cooperation given by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics under the supervision of Mr. H. S. Yohe and Mr. S. G. Swain, Jr., Warehouse Examiner. The value of such storage plants was widely publicized following the activities of Dr. F. B. Bomberger as Director of Markets of the Del-Mar-Va As sociation who, last winter launched a Peninsula-wide movement in connection with Mr. F. M. Shook, Secretary, Tri-StatePackets Association, for the purpose of advocating Federal Warehousing of canned products in Del-Mar-Va.

There are two other Federal Warehousing plants in Talbot County, which have been in operation for a considerable period and have proven of recognized value to the canners patronizing them. There is general belief that the new Delaware concern will find a substantial demand for its service.
