AGRICULTURAL NOTES

Orchard Cover Crops Are Recommended

Orchardists in the State who desire to secure greatest benefits from cover crops should plant them as soon as possible if they have not already done so, according to Dr. E. C. Auchter, head of the horticultural department of the University of Maryland.

Frequently orchard cover crops are planted so late in the summer that they fail to make proper growth before the advent of cold weather. As a result the crops complete their growth in the spring and take nitrates and moisture from the soil at a time when these essentials are needed by the trees.

Wide Variation Shown In Yields Of Wheat

Wheat yields on the trial plots at the University of Maryland Experiment Station have fluctuated between eighteen and forty-six bushels per acre during the past twenty-five years, according to J. E. Metzger, head of the department of agronomy and soils.

The high yield records were established in the years 1914, 1926 and 1928 while the lowest records were made in 1909, 1912 and 1919.

Comparison of the station yields with those reported for the State as a whole by the United States Department of Agriculture indicates that State-wide conditions have generally governed wheat yields. The figures show that the Experiment Station records parallel those for all sections of Maryland fifty per cent. of the time. The relationship between the results at College Park and those on the Eastern Shore and in Southern Maryland is still closer, the records running paralle sixty-four per cent. of the time.

The real causes for the wide fluctuations in wheat yields, it is said are diseases and insects which do damage in proportion to their prevalece.

Pit or underground trench silos are considered the most economical means of storing silage on ranges in the Southwest. The feed is put in a trench and covered with earth to a depth of about 2 feet. Silage stored in this way will keep for several years without deterioration.

A new activity to be put on a cooperation basis is whitewashing. A whitewashing service for cow barns is now available to the 6,000 members of the Ohio Farmers' Cooperative Association. A portable spraying outfit is sent around from farm to farm, and it is estimated that the barns can be cleaned and whitewashed at much less expense than if the farmers did it themselves.

5c MAKES YOU A SMOKE KING

—if you know the cigar to buy

Don't ever let anybody tell you there's no enjoyment in a 5c cigar. Here's one that's been knocking that idea sky-high for many years: Havana Ribbon. Any challengers?

Nickel cigar brands come and go. But Havana Ribbon keeps right on winning smokers by the thousands. Unquestionably the greatest five-cent cigar value the world has ever known! But let Havana Ribbon tell you its own story. One nickel brings it to you. One puff starts it. And the first thing it says is that here actually is a five-cent cigar that contains something you usually find only in higher priced cigars: Ripe, long-filler tobacco. No bitter, under-ripe top leaves of the plant. No flat-tasting, over-ripe bottom leaves. No loose ends to fray or crumble. Full-flavored, mellow-mild ripe leaves only. Smoke so smooth you like to hold on to every satisfying mouthful! At cigar counters everywhere. Also sold in Practical Pocket Packages of five cigars.
