THE COMBINE WHEAT HARVESTER

The use of the combine or combination harvesting and threshing machine to harvest wheat on a number of Maryland farms the past season, indicates that the use of modern and efficient farm machinery is not confined to the west.

That these machines are becoming established in the east is indicated by the statement of one manufacturer who reported the sale of eighteen combines the past year to farmers in Maryland, Virginia and Delaware, it is said. There are possibly twenty-five or more of the machines in Maryland.

The great advantage of the combine is the striking saving it affords in time and labor. The combine cuts the wheat and threshes it in one operation.

The combine likewise appeals to the farmer who makes a business of growing soybeans as it is the most satisfactory machine thus far developed for harvesting this crop.

One of the objections to the combine in the minds of some farmers is the difficulty encountered in saving the straw. There are several methods of overcoming this, however, so that it need not be regarded too seriously.

Insure your
ALFALFA CROP with
Warner's "LIMOID"

THE cheapest safeguard you can get for your alfalfa crop is Warner's "Limoid." "Limoid" corrects soil acidity which is injurious to alfalfa—in fact alfalfa won't grow in acid soil.

Because it is a fine powder form of pure hydrated lime, "Limoid" thoroughly penetrates the soil and quickly makes it alkaline—favorable for alfalfa. Because of its purity and fineness less "Limoid" is needed than of most forms of lime. "Limoid" comes in handy 50 lb. bags and can be easily spread with a lime spreader or by hand.

Don't wait—spread "Limoid" now and your alfalfa crop will be insured.
