About the Cabinet.

The newspapers, generally speaking, are still busily engaged in cabinet making and the politicians are urging the claims of their favorites upon the attention of the President. That self-contained gentleman hears what is said and wisely keeps his own counsel and makes no promises. He has not, as far as can be ascertained, given an intimation to any human being that he has fixed upon a single member of his official family. In fact he probably has not yet determined, in his own mind, to offer a cabinet portfolio to any particular person. It is taken for granted that the great State of New York is to be represented among his advisers, but whether the representative is to be Warner Miller, or Platt, or some other yet unnamed individual, no one knows. Is Mr. Blaine to have the portfolio of State? A week ago it was dogmatically declared, in some quarters, that the great statesman was, undoubtedly, to be the premier of the administration. But who knows? The President elect says he don't.

The truth of the matter is that the discussion of the whole subject is overdone. If Mr. Blaine shall be selected for the leading cabinet office it will be in the interest of the country and not as the representative of any particular party element. His fitness for the station nobody can deny, and his knowledge of the questions which would necessarily claim the attention of the State Department is probably more thorough than that of any other public man, and if the President should, for this consideration, select him as his chief official adviser, there should be no captious and factional opposition to the appointment. And this view of the subject will apply with equal force to every other Department of the administration. Benjamin Harrison will be the President. Of that the country may be assured, let who may occupy the cabinet stations. There will be no power behind the Executive greater than himself. It has been growing on the country for months that there is about him a quiet yet powerful individual force that will make itself paramount in the conduct of his administration. That this is so is well—well for the country and well for the great party by whose votes he has been called to the exalted station of Chief Magistrate of this vast and wonderful nation. The newspapers may go on amusing themselves and bewildering their readers with speculations or dogmatic declarations concerning the conformation of the cabinet. When the proper time arrives, and not before, it will be announced, and that time will probably not be in advance of inauguration day at least.

West Virginia.

The Democrats of West Virginia are making a desperate attempt to prevent the declaration of Goff's election as Governor. Mr. Goff has a majority of 106 on the face of the returns. Kanawha county gave a large Republican majority which the Democrats are endeavoring to exclude from the count. They obtained an injunction to prevent its certification to the Legislature by the Secretary of State, but the injunction has been dissolved and the contest for the Governorship now arises in the House. The Republicans very properly contend that it is the duty of the House to canvass the vote as certified, and consider grounds of contest subsequently. But the opposition, having a small majority in that body, is determined to declare Fleming, the Democratic candidate, Governor elect, regardless of propriety and decency. In this emergency the Republicans, who have a majority in the Senate, refuse to organize that branch of the Legislature, and under the provisions of the constitution, the vote for Governor cannot be canvassed and declared until both branches shall have been organized. There is, as a consequence, a dead lock. The revolutionary methods of the Democrats, however, will only serve to hasten their ultimate downfall in the State. It is very manifest that their purpose is to hold the State government regardless of the rights of the people. They are proceeding upon the pretext of Republican frauds at the election; but they plainly indicate a purpose to consider and decide the case exparte, and without affording an opportunity of defence or rebuttal. What the outcome may be is yet uncertain; but it is more than probable that the high-handed measures of the party having a minority of the popular vote on the face of the returns will temporarily succeed. The House has already, in defiance of the law, which forbids the transaction of business before the organization of both branches, resolved to consider several cases of contest against Republican members, who will probably be unseated and their places given to Democrats for the purpose of increasing the majority of that party on joint ballot. With the West Virginia Democrats it seems to be a question of power and not of right.

Even the Governor of the State is usurping the functions of the National House of Representatives. Two of the Republican candidates for Congress have clear majorities on the face of the returns, but the Governor witholds the certificates which he is required by law to issue in such cases, and the struggle to prevent the inauguration of Goff is probably actuated by a purpose to postpone such certification indefinitely in the hope that something may turn up to give the Democrats control of the next House of Representatives. Not content with cheating the people of the State, these West Virginia Democrats seem anxious to defraud the people of the Nation as well. It is time to call a halt in their revolutionary proceedings.

The Legislature of Michigan has elected James McMillan United States Senator. He received 90 votes in joint convention to 35 for M. H. Ford.

Mr. Ransom has been re-elected United States Senator by the Legislature of North Carolina.

Mr. Hodges' Speech.

Mr. James Hodges, of Baltimore, made a speech and a spectacle of himself before the Maryland Electoral College at Annapolis, on Monday. The college met and was organized for the ostensible purpose of casting the eight votes of the State for President and Vice-President of the United States, but Mr. Hodges, who never misses an opportunity to display his oratorical gifts, seized the occasion to relieve his pent-up ire upon the people who failed to elect his political demigod, Grover Cleveland. Mr. Hodges' silence would have been decidedly more decent and edifying than his speech. It ill becomes a man who was made mayor of Baltimore by the ring methods practiced in that city, to question the integrity of anybody else's election. It still less becomes one who claims to be a gentleman to give vent in a body such as a college of electors should be, to unfounded charges against political opponents. Mr. Hodges, in the speech referred to, declared that Mr. Cleveland was "defeated by the millionaires, the monopolists and the tariff beneficiaries of the country, who contributed millions of boodle to debauch the voters of the land, especially in New York, West Virginia and Indiana, where voters were publically bought in 'blocks of five.'" A speech of this character would have been in bad taste under almost any circumstances. It might be pardoned if it had been made in a heated discussion on the hustings; but delivered, as it was, in a quiet little assembly, charged with grave and important functions, it can only be attributed to the innate vulgarity of its author. If Mr. Hodges could plead the truth of his declaration in extenuation of his lack of appreciation of the common decencies of the occasion, his tirade might be excused, but it was nothing more than the idle vaporing of a bitterly disappointed man, unsupported by a particle of evidence. In fact there is reasonable ground for suspecting the reverse of the allegation. The Democratic committee was liberally supplied with boodle contributed by the President himself, the members of his cabinet, the leading members of the committee, the office-holders of the country and others. There was no drain on that committee's funds to prevent Republican registration frauds in New York, as there was on the funds of the Republican committee to circumvent the intended frauds of the Democrats, and Democratic boodle was placed where it would do the most good. The effort to accuse Col. Dudley, of the Republican committee, of an attempt to purchase votes in Indiana, has ignominiously failed; but it cannot be successfully denied that there were Democratic plans and efforts having that end in view in that State. Mr. Hodges might have edified his associates and supplied them with some unpalatable information, if he had read to them the following, written and circulated by the chairman of the Democratic Committee of Morgan county, Indiana:

> STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.
> MARTINSVILLE, IND., SEPT. 7, 1888.
>
> MR. ———:
> DEAR SIR: I desire exact information in regard to your district. Morgan County is remarkably close, but, by proper organization and vigorous work, it can be redeemed from the clutches of ring rule and the blight of excessive taxation. Much depends on your efforts. You should select men to assist you, but only such as you can trust should be chosen. Therefore, I request of you to make an exact list of all the voters in your precinct, for your own use, and report to me the exact number of each on the enclosed slip. Please report to me not later than Monday, September 10, and every two weeks thereafter. Make the doubtful list as small as possible, and mark every one who has to have money as a "float." Those who have to be bought are not "doubtful," but are "floats." Look closely after every one. Let no one escape. Your prompt action in this matter will aid materially in the efficiency of our efforts.
>
> Respectfully,
> N. A. WHITTAKER, Chairman.
> Report at A. H. Caldwell's store, September 15, at 1.30 P. M.

This is not a garbled letter; it is not disputed by the man by whose name it is signed. It is in fact a confidential circular, sent to active Democrats in Morgan county, Indiana, by the accredited head of the party in that section. It is commended to the study of Mr. James Hodges and other Democrats of his style, who pretend a holy horror of practices on the part of Republicans of which they have no proof, but which they are not deterred from asserting and reasserting because of that trifling defect.

The Tax on Tobacco.

There were a good many surprised and indignant Democrats in the House of Representatives on Monday. Mr. Cowles, of North Carolina, a Democrat, introduced a revenue bill, the principal feature of which is the repeal of the tax on tobacco. After the reading of the bill the Speaker declared it "referred to the Committee on Ways and Means." Mr. Cowles at once moved its reference to the Committee on Appropriations and the motion prevailed by a vote of 129 to 91. This was a direct blow at Chairman Mills and his free-trade associates of the Ways and Means. It was an astounding result and exhibits very forcibly the real lack of harmony among the Democrats on the subject of revenue, more than twenty of the majority votes having been of that party. The proposition is in direct conflict with the recommendations of the President and the St. Louis platform; and is, in fact, substantially in accord with the Republican platform. The men who voted for it were, chiefly, of those who were whipped into support of the Mills bill by the Executive lash. Now that the President's power to punish recalcitrant members is rapidly drawing to an end they are becoming independent and impatient of dictation and are reasserting their real principles in a manner calculated to carry dismay to the hearts of the free-trade junta whose plans and purposes brought wreck and disaster to the Democratic cause in the late Presidential contest. Mr. Cleveland may yet have an opportunity to sign a bill for the reduction of the surplus, and the country is just a little curious to know what he would do with it.

The New York Sun virtually accuses President Cleveland of plagiarism in the use of the phrase "public office is a public trust," by asserting that it originated with Judge Cooley as far back as 1877. The Sun may be correct as to the origin of the phrase, but certainly not of the sentiment. That existed long before Mr. Wm. L. Marcy designated public offices as "spoils." The euphonious phrase for which Mr. Cleveland has received so much credit was but a repetition of a common-sense principle that prevailed practically in the early days of the republic. The course of conduct pursued by its accredited author in his administration of public affairs gives reasonable cause for suspecting that it was intended "more for ornament than for use."

Hon. W. P. Frye has been re-elected United States Senator from Maine. The vote stood 121 for Frye to 25 for H. M. Plaisted, Democrat, in the House, and 29 for Frye in the Senate, with two Senators absent.

A Kentuckian who had an appreciative sense of the "fitness of things" sent the following communication to a member of Congress from the blue grass State:

> SIR: I have some of the finest whiskey that ever warmed the throat of a statesman, and I want you to present samples of it to some of the leading Democratic members and Senators of Congress, and get their opinions. Don't forget our own Joe Blackburn and Jimmie Beck; they can assist you greatly in getting certificates as to its purity and its strength.

The probability of the admission of any new States during the present Congress is becoming very remote. The Democratic majority is unwilling to admit the Dakotas and Washington, which are fully prepared and entitled to statehood, unless New Mexico, which is not in proper condition for the discharge of State duties, is also elevated to that dignity. The merits of the several cases are not considered.

Delaware's New Senator.

After 43 ballots in the Republican Senatorial caucus in Delaware, Hon. Anthony Higgins, of Wilmington, received the nomination, which was subsequently confirmed by the vote of the Legislature in joint convention, on Tuesday last, the 14 Republican members of the House and the 2 Republican Senators voting for him. The Democratic caucus could not agree upon a candidate. The 7 Democratic Senators voted for James L. Walcott; 5 of the Democratic members of the House voted for A. P. Robinson and 2 for Walcott. Mr. Higgins, the Senator elect, was born in 1840, is a successful lawyer, a man of acknowledged integrity and ability and has heretofore received the endorsement of the Republicans of Delaware on numerous occasions. His election assures a Republican majority of 2 in the Senate during the 51st Congress.

Good Words for the Sentinel

The SENTINEL has received a number of complimentary notices from the press, among which are the following:

From the Democratic Advocate:

> The AMERICAN SENTINEL, of this city, enters its 57th volume this week. During the past few years it has been decidedly improved, both as to contents and appearance, and now ranks with the leading Republican journals in the State. Its patronage, too, is good, showing an appreciation by its party of the efforts of the publisher to keep pace with the times.

From the Baltimore American:

> The Westminster SENTINEL enters upon its fifty-seventh volume to-day. The SENTINEL is a good paper, one of the best in the State, and it was never so good and never so able as it is under the capable editorship of Mr. W. L. W. Seabrook.

From the Banner of Liberty:

> The Westminster SENTINEL entered upon its fifty-seventh volume last week. This paper, too, is getting old, but improves with age, and during the last year or two has made considerable strides in improvement.

The Death of Howard Pfeiffer.

The death of Howard Pfeiffer, of Manchester, from a pistol shot, fired, without design, by his friend Harry Lamotte, is a powerful commentary on the folly of handling firearms in a careless manner. The jury of inquest properly exonerated young Lamotte from criminal intent in the matter. He was not aware that the pistol was loaded and was amazed and horrified when, playfully pointing it at his friend and crying "Look out Howard, I'm going to shoot you," it was discharged in his hand and the victim fell wounded unto death. Probably not a soul believes the shot was fired with design; but it was fired and Howard Pfeiffer lies cold in his grave, while his friend and companion, by whose hand he died, carries on his heart the burden of ceaseless remorse and unavailing regret, and, it may be, would gladly exchange places with the victim of the accident. But remorse and regret do not bring the dead to life. A little forethought; a prudent examination of the weapon before it was leveled at the person of the young man whom it killed; or, better still, entire abstinence from its playful yet fatal presentation, would have avoided the dreadful and harrowing consequences, and Howard Pfeiffer would be yet alive. This accident is not the first, by many, of a precisely similar character, and probably will not be the last. But it becomes the duty of the journalist to repeat the lesson it teaches and to sound the note of warning against its recurrence. Will the lesson be taken to heart? Will the warning be heeded? Other mothers have sons who else may fill untimely graves or go mourning that their thoughtless carelessness has wrought death, bereavement and sorrow.

The Electoral Colleges Meet.

Gen. Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, and Hon. Levi P. Morton, of New York, were elected President and Vice-President of the United States, respectively, by the electoral colleges, on Monday. Many people supposed they were elected in November, and so they virtually were, but the people do not elect these officers by direct ballot. They only choose electors to perform that act. The electors have power to vote for whomsoever they will, and it seems to have been the intention of the framers of the constitution that they should act independently in the matter. But the custom, from the beginning, has been otherwise and perhaps may now be held to be a part of the unwritten law of the land.

The Maryland college met at Annapolis. Col. James G. Berret, of Carroll county, was elected President of the body, and Wm. G. Purnell, the Secretary of the Senate, was appointed secretary. Mr. James Hodges, of Baltimore, made a speech and nominated Mr. Cleveland for President of the United States, and Mr. Henry Page, of Somerset county, nominated Mr. Thurman for Vice-President. The eight votes in the college were cast for these candidates and the vote announced. Three certificates were prepared, one of which, enclosed in an envelope directed to the President of the Senate at Washington, was deposited in the Annapolis Postoffice by Elector R. C. Combs; another was entrusted to the hands of Secretary Purnell, to be delivered to the President of the Senate in person, and the third was given to Elector I. Gorham Moale to be presented to Judge Morris of the United States District Court. The same course of proceeding was observed in all the States, as required by law. The certificates will be opened by the President of the Senate and the result announced before both Houses of Congress in joint meeting.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4th, 1889.—The Senate investigation into the workings of the office of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury has already brought to light a rather queer state of affairs. The law has been boldly violated in a number of instances, and if rumors are to be trusted the half has not yet been told.

Those ridiculous old rules by which the House of Representatives is governed are chargeable with another exhibition of tomfoolery which exceeds everything that has preceded it. The deadlock which existed a week ago as the result of an attempt to change one of the rules, was broken early last week by a vote of the House to commit the resolution proposing the change to the committee on rules. As soon as this result was announced Representative Weaver, of Iowa, took the floor and stated that he would not allow anything else to be done until the House had disposed of the Oklahoma bill. Many members smiled at the dictatorial manner of the gentleman from Iowa in making this annoncio, but the smiles all disappeared as day after day Mr. Weaver proved his ability, thanks to the rules, to stop all legislation.

This went on for four days, and would probably have gone on until the fourth of March, had not Speaker Carlisle made a bargain with Mr. Weaver which brought the farce to an end. The Speaker, in consideration of Weaver's allowing the House to proceed to the transaction of the business for which its members are elected, agreed to recognize Mr. Weaver on the next suspension day in order to allow him to make a motion to suspend the rule and take a vote on the Oklahoma bill. To give him an opportunity of forcing things when he once gets them started, the Speaker promised further that the rule making 5 o'clock the hour for the adjournment of the House should be abolished.

Claus Spreckles, the California sugar king, has been giving the Senate financial committee the result of his experiments in the manufacture of beet sugar. He thinks that if a bounty of one cent per pound is given for sugar made in this country that the industry will grow to large proportions, giving employment to farmers and many classes of mechanics.

It has been suggested that a carriage which was presented to Henry Clay, who is known as the father of protection, by his admirers, in 1833, and which is still in existence and in good condition, be used by Gen. Harrison in the inaugural parade.

Red Men in Council.

The Great Council of the Improved Order of Red Men, in Maryland, which met in Frederick, on Wednesday, continuing in session from day to day, elected the following officers for the ensuing year on Thursday: Great prophet, Wm. H. Lewis, of Hagerstown; great sachem, John C. Bell, of Baltimore county; great senior sagamore, Robert T. Mullikin, of Talbot county; great junior sagamore, Charles W. Miller, of Baltimore; great chief of records, Henry A. Anthony, of Baltimore; great keeper of wampum, George T. Fowler, of Baltimore; representatives to the next Great Council, to meet in Baltimore in September, John H. Bennett, of Frederick, and R. K. Stephenson, of Somerset county; appointed chiefs, John F. Thomas, of Baltimore, great Sannap; Charles W. Gilbert, of Baltimore, great Mishenewa; William H. Wisner, of Baltimore county, great guard of wigwam, and James T. Gorsuch, of Baltimore, great guard of the forest. According to the secretary's report the number of tribes in the State is 46, with a membership of 3,073. The money paid for the relief of brothers, widows and orphans during the year amounted to $12,098.93.

Thos. M. Wolfe, of Frederick, drew a revolver on C. F. Kreh, the Frederick correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, on Tuesday evening last, and demanded the correction of a report published in the Sun, of which Kreh acknowledged himself the author, in connection with a suit for slander entered by Mr. Wolfe against W. Nash Young, one of the deputies in the clerk's office of Frederick county. The affair occurred in the drug store of Schley Brothers, one of whom, with other parties, interfered to prevent further trouble. The question now is, did Mr. Wolfe intend to shoot Mr. Kreh? If so, he is amenable to indictment and prosecution for assault with intent to kill. Frederick is getting to be a lively place for newspaper reporters.

A collision occurred on the Pa. and Ohio Railroad, on Monday morning, near Tallmage, Ohio, between a passenger express and a freight train. Eight persons were killed. The wreck took fire and six bodies were cremated. Three of the killed were Chinamen and four of the remainder employes of the road. One woman was killed. Seven persons were badly injured and others slightly.

A young man named Elmer Heatherington fell on a railroad track at Wheeling, Va., on Tuesday evening and a train of eight coal cars passed over his neck. Of course his head was severed from his body.

The Legislature of Massachusetts has re-elected Mr. Hoar to the United States Senate. The vote was 171 for Hoar to 56 for P. A. Collins, Democrat, in the House; 32 for Hoar and 6 for Collins in the Senate.

A joint caucus of Republican Senators and representatives was held at Harrisburg, Pa., on Wednesday night, at which it was decided that the proposed prohibition amendment to the constitution shall be passed at once, and that the question shall be submitted to the people at a special election to be held on June 16 next.

In the District Court of Indianapolis, Ind., Wednesday morning, the jury in the case of the State vs. George Hacker returned a verdict of guilty, and Hacker was sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary. Hacker is the Anarchist who brutally assaulted his employer, James Bruce, because the latter expressed gratification at the election of General Harrison. Bruce was stabbed nine times about the face and neck. His recovery was almost miraculous.
