REVERENCE YOUR PASTOR.

Teach the children and young people to reverence the office of the ministry. He ought never to be unfavorably criticised or abused in their presence. It makes a bad impression and erects a barrier between them and the man of God. They lose respect for him, and their confidence is lowered to that extent. Many parents have destroyed, unconsciously, their children's piety by belittling in their hearing the character and work of the preacher. Let them always welcome him to their homes and whether present or absent speak to him and of him in that way that the children will recognize him as a good man worthy of their love and confidence. Then the door of his usefulness in such a home is thrown wide open. His visits and conversations and prayers will be a benediction to the household. The peace of God through man will abide there. And thus it is that if the preacher will do his duty to the people and the people will do their duty to the preacher, he will indeed and in truth be a pastor to the flock of God, leading them into green pastures and beside refreshing streams, and the church will flourish under his ministry. The preacher cannot please everybody. If he does he is not possessed of much force. Christ, the most powerful preacher that ever lived, did not please all who heard him. A man of positive character is bound to push somebody out of his way. Some one now and then will get hurt a little. What, then, is the duty of people who don't exactly agree with their minister? Is it the best for them and the church to criticise him before their families and before the community? Not at all. The work of the Lord has suffered from this kind of thing. A few indiscreet tongues can counteract all the good for a whole year that the minister is capable of doing. A faithful, helpful people will make a faithful, helpful preacher. But if the people set themselves to pull against the enterprises of the preacher, his usefulness will be limited.

A GOOD KIND OF A FACE TO HAVE.

Memory of Events.—This is shown by a wide, full forehead in the centre.

Reasoning Power.—A high, long and well-defined nose and a broad face exhibits this great faculty.

Moral Courage.—This faculty manifests itself by wide nostrils, short neck, and eyes set directly in front.

Language.—This faculty is exhibited in many parts of the face, particularly by a large mouth, and large full eyes, open wide.

Self-esteem.—This faculty shows itself in a long or deep upper lip. Large self-esteem gives one dignity, self-control and perfect independence.

Firmness.—The presence of this faculty, when very large, is indicated by a long, broad chin. Firmness is synonymous with willfulness, perseverance and stability.

Perception of Character.—This is indicated by a long, high nose at the lower end or tip. This faculty is very useful, if not indespensible, to a Judge in the exercise of the functions of his office.

Powers of Observation.—The situation of this faculty is in the face just above the top of the nose, filling out the forehead to a level with the parts on each side of the nose. It is a faculty which enables one to concentrate the mind upon the subject being discussed.

Conscientiousness.—This is shown in the face by a square jaw, a bony chin, prominent cheek bones, and a general squareness of the features of the entire face. To be conscientious means that one has a sense of justice, honesty of purpose, rectitude of character and moral courage.

A FEW GOOD OLD MAXIMS.

Life and health are the best gifts of God.

Health is the first want of the individual, the nation and the race.

When we are sick the life is obscured under a cloud.

Without health a man seldom succeeds in any enterprise.

A clear brain, a steady nerve, and a healthy body are stepping-stones to wealth.

Health is happiness, prosperity and long life.

Health is wealth; disease is poverty and premature death.

The leaves of the trees were for the healing of the nation.—Bible.

A man may own hundreds of acres and cattle upon a thousand hills; but without health he is miserable.

Never despair; while there is life there is hope.

Resist the beginning of disease.

A good medicine is the best friend to have in the house.

A stitch in time saves nine.

Neglect your cough and prepare your coffin.

The luckiest man is he who is prepared when sickness comes.

Never let disease get the start of you.

True merit always gains success.

There is a young lady in Keokuk, Iowa, who is six feet eleven inches in height.

OLD SUPERSTITIONS.

Even at the present day, some superstitious people consider that a mole on the throat is lucky, one on the left side of the forehead unlucky, one on the chin, ear or neck, riches; but poverty attends the unfortunate who has one of these marks upon his breast.

"Mole on the neck,
Money by the peck."

A very curious remedy for wens was, and is still, thought efficacious in parts of England. This was to stroke the growth with a dead man's hand. "A dead man's hand is supposed to have the virtue of dispelling humors, as wens and swelled glands, by stroking with it some time the place affected. It seems as if the hand of the person dying a violent death was particularly efficacious." Instances are recorded of persons going to the gallows when a murderer was to be hanged, for the purpose of stroking one of those growths with the hand of the executed criminal. In 1777, a young woman walked many miles for this purpose, and many other persons crowded about the gallows for the same reason. In another place, a man and woman were seen to enter a graveyard, when they proceeded to the last new-made grave, when the woman rubbed her face on the grass on each side of the grave, to cure a wen. Styes are sometimes got rid of by curious means. One of them is recorded: Seize a black cat, on the first night of the new moon, pull a hair out of her tail, and rub it over the sty nine times. Gold was formerly considered a good cure, a gold ring being passed over the growth. An old play alludes to this:—

"I have a sty here, Chilax,
I have no gold to charm it away."

The following lines were published in an English magazine some years since:—

"Pray tell your querist if he may
Rely on what the vulgar say,
That when the moon's on her increase,
If corns are cut, they'll grow apace:
But, if you always do take care,
After the full your corns to pare,
They do insensibly decay,
And will in time wear quite away:
If this be true, pray let me know,
And give the reason why 'tis so."

About ten years ago an old gentleman of Cartersville, Ga., bought a Post-office money order to make a payment due in another State. Thinking it was simply a receipt for the money, and that Postmaster Wilkie would send on the funds, he put the paper away and considered the matter settled. Recently the parties began to dun him for the amount when he hunted up the money order and took it to the office, when Henry Miller explained the matter to him, and the order, given in 1878, was forwarded.

A search was lately begun in the Adriatic sea, near Trieste, for treasure which went down with the French corvette Danal in 1812. The treasure consisted of jewels and valuables destined for an exalted personage at Trieste. The vessel sank as the result of an explosion, and since, it seems, not a vestige of the craft or its treasure has been found.

Preserved Gaige was the queer Puritan name of one of John Morrissey's cronies who was buried in New York one day recently. "Lord Chesterfield" was his nickname. The hearse containing his mortal part, on its way to the cemetery, passed the very saloons in which he had dissipated a fortune of $300,000.

A man was recently examined at Galveston for a license to practice law. "In order to constitute a last will what is essential?" asked the lawyer who was questioning the applicant. "A corpse and some property are all that is necessary," was the reply.

There is a dog employed in the postal service in the office at Allentown. The mail bags are laid on the pavement and the dog sits on them till the proper person takes them away. No one else dares to touch the bags while in the dog's custody.

A Michigan court was lately called upon to decide whether a woman seventy-four years old can drive a horse thirty-two years old through mud ten inches deep faster than the four miles an hour permitted by law.

"What is this man charged with?" asked the judge.

"With whiskey, yer honor," replied the sententious policeman.

A cat licked a young lady's face recently and died in an hour from the effects of the face paint it swallowed. Young men, beware!

A Maine husband wanted to bet his wife that she could whip a panther, but she saw the joke and refused.

The reason "the boy stood on the burning deck" was because he could not sit down.

An ugly disease in females—the wriggles. Common sense is the only remedy.

Spring time—when you sit on a tack with the sharp end up.

Why is a convict like a balloon? Because he is "sent up."

"Time will tell"—a lady's age.
