RECIPES FOR MAKING GOUT.

Under this title, an English society journal, having exhausted, and it infers without avail, its best advice as to the prevention of this dread malady, lays before its epicurean readers some specimen compounds peculiarly adapted to develop gout in those previously free and to excite its most virulent symptoms in the already afflicted. It has medical authority for its promise that the recipes it gives are really among the most exciting causes yet discovered in scientific or even what might be called haphazard cuisine; taking no account of the lesser causes, no doubt crediting the gouty with sufficient intelligence to foresee the effect upon the metatarso-phalangeal joint of the great toe of the midnight lobster and the after-dinner port. It introduces a certain Dr. Hunter, whom it seems to regard as an authority on gout, and one can almost see a testy little doctor, rotund, red faced, short-winded, with good living, and knowing his subject from sensation as well as study, as he takes up a famous cookery manual and reads: "Giblet soup, par excellence: veal stock, lemons, yolk of egg, forced meat balls, and Madeira." This he says, contains a considerable amount of gout and scurvy. Of an unusually rich mock-turtle soup, he says: "A dangerous dish, and will soon bring a man to his crutches." Another of the same he declares most diabolical—only fit for the Sunday dinner of a rustic who is to work the six following days in a ditch bottom; while of a third, mock-turtle soup made with beef, ham, giblets, lemon-peel, truffles, orange-juice, forced meat, and Madeira—a dish much admired by the patrons of a famous London restaurateur—the doctor says testily: "There is death in the pot."

It has often been observed of those afflicted with gout—the tone of the letters addressed to the society journal in question furnishes still another evidence of it—that they appear more concerned in discovering new remedies to lessen the pain when they shall be again attacked than in adopting a practical means for preventing its recurrence. They try colchicum, soothing tropical applications, acetate of potash and other alkalies, and perhaps nitro-muriatic acid, the latter the butter from the cream in which it is inclosed? Adding warm, sweet milk seems to entirely remove the difficulty.

People who are going to build may like to know that "a three-thousand dollar house" is one that the architectural paper says can be built for $2,850.37; costs $3,100, according to the architect's estimate; is worth $3,700, the carpenter says, to build; increases in expense to $4,800 during the process of erection, and makes you draw your check for $5,953.28 before you move in and get your first bill for repairs.

In regard to surgical operations, every physician dreads to have any thing to do with beer drinkers. It is dangerous for a beer drinker to even cut his finger.

Experience proves that cows which have a due allowance of salt give milk richer than those which are not supplied with salt.

In the management of a farm, as with all other pursuits, attending to details has done much to assure success.

"You're too fresh," said the brine to the beef. "I acknowledge the corn," replied the beef, humbly.

It is said no one can arrest the flight of time, but who is there who is not able to stop a minute?

Funny, isn't it, that after a man has once given his word he should try so hard to keep it?

If any boat can shoot the rapids successfully, we should think it would be the gunboat.

The man with lantern jaws should shine in conversation.
