AGAIN the President of our Country calls upon us to keep next Thursday, the last Thursday in November, as a day of Thanksgiving to Almighty God for all His mercies during the present year. There is no virtue more grateful than Thanksgiving. In spite of flood, hurricanes and disaster, our country has been surely blessed. Ten years of peace, wonderful discoveries in science and inventions, and above all the good will of the nations.

Just as a bird's joyful song makes glad the hearts of its hearers, so a cheerful, thankful heart sheds its influence around.

"Peace, prosperity and health,
Public weal and private wealth;
All for these, Oh Lord, we raise
Grateful hearts and songs of praise."

The pilgrims in the early days kept Thanksgiving and shared their gifts with the hungry Indians, and they have handed the day down to us, just as they have handed down their sturdiness, their principles, and their conquest of the wilderness. Let us keep faith with them in celebrating this day of praise.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

MARYLAND TO EXHIBIT AT INTERNATIONAL SHOW

Maryland will again have exhibits of corn and soybeans at the International Grain and Hay Show to be held at Chicago the first week in December.

For the past several years Maryland farmers have sent entries of corn to the International Show and in competition with the best corn produced in the United States have captured more premiums than any other State with the exception of Indiana.

While the late summer and early fall weather was most unfavorable for the production of high quality corn, the recent dry weather and the absence of severe freezing temperatures have increased the probability of securing corn of exhibition quality, it is said. In several local shows already held in the State, corn of first class quality has been shown and the best has been selected to go to Chicago.

The favorable weather of the past six weeks has materially improved the outlook for corn, according to Mr. Oldenburg, and many sections of the State are reporting much better yields and higher quality than was expected. Farmers who desire to select show corn and corn that can be held over for seed should dry the ears out rapidly in a place where it will be guarded against freezing. Rapid drying of the corn will lessen possible damage from freezing and will likewise do much to prevent the development of molds which prove injurious. If corn is quickly and thoroughly dried there is little danger that the germ will be injured even by excessvely cold weather or that molds will prove serious, it is said.

INTEREST IN TURKEYS NOW APPROACHES PEAK

Interest in recently developed methods of large scale turkey production among Maryland farmers and poultry raisers is becoming increasingly pronounced as the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons approach and the marketing of birds raised this year is but a few weeks in the future.

It is probable that there are more large flocks of turkeys in Maryland this year than for many years past and those who have produced the birds for this season and those who expect to produce them next year are eagerly watching consumptive demands and market prices.

Much of the progress in turkey production in the State during the past few years is attributed to the use of artificial hatching and brooding together with strict sanitary measures designed to control serious diseases and parasitic pests, it is said by W. H. Rice, poultry specialist for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

Those who have recently launched into large scale turkey production have profited greatly by the experiences of pioneer growers. In particular the large and successful turkey farm of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Baker, near Chestertown, has been a rendezvous for throngs wha have been attracted by the possbilities of turkey growing. Just recently nearly a thousand people visited this farm and also the Biggers and Jarvis Turkey farms to study the methods in operation. The taur was planned by County Agent H. B. Derrick and the Kent County Farm Bureau and included an extensive program at the Baker farm in which practical growers and specialists took part.

In Southern Maryland there has likewise been a consderable development in turkey growing and some of the larger flocks of St. Mary's county were visited by interested poultrymen and farmers November 16. Among the farms visited were those of Mrs. Harry Wise, Mrs. George R. Guirk, and the Cedar Point Farm, all of them near Leonardtown. The tour was planned by County Agent G. F. Wathen.

A feature of the day was an oyster scald and basket lunch at Cedar Point Farm where an interesting program was staged. Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, and W. H. Rice, poultry specialist of the University of Maryland Extension Service, were the principal speakers.

OFFERS PRIZE TO TURKEY WINNERS

Mr. and Mrs. John Biggers of Bigger's Turkey Farm near Millington, have offered two prizes for Maryland turkeys at the International Turkey Show in Chicago on Dec. 4-6.

A prize of $12.50 is offered for the best bronze turkey from Maryland and also a prize of $12.50 for the best Holland White turkey from this State. These prizes are offered to increase the raising of high class turkeys in the State.

—Dr. Dunot, a prominent Baltimore physician and a member of the Cedar Point, East Neck Island, Ducking Club, was killed by being struck by an automobile in Baltimore Tuesday night while crossing a street.

The furnace is being placed and the members of the Country Club are happy. No more teeth chattering while dancing. Nor shivering while eating ices.
