THE DRAFT HORSE.

The farmer's principal interest is in the heavy draft horse. It has been shown to be the profitable horse for farm use, and to be a profitable horse for city work. It, therefore is, in a sense, a very complete general-purpose horse. It has not been many years since there was a deep-seated prejudice against the heavy draft horses, both as to their use on the farm and their employment in the city. It was alleged that they were too big and unhandy for farm work, were devoid of intelligence, and so on. It was claimed that their feet were not good enough for city pavements, and there was a time that after a period of use in some of our cities, the rank prejudice against them secured their banishment. But they have lived down all this slander, and to-day find the readiest sale of any horse in the country. The average farmer has come to believe that they are profitable to breed and to use, though he may not yet have owned any of them. We believe that the farmer who will breed these horses will find it profitable.

There has been one practice that has been against these horses, and very injurious to the interests of farmers, and it behooves us to put a stop to it as rapidly as possible. It is standing stallions as full-blooded animals, when they are nothing but grades, and sometimes but slimly related to the breed that it is claimed they fully represent. Those seeking the services of a stallion can not be too particular about inquiring into his pedigree. The reputable breeders and importers may be relied upon to tell the truth about horses that pass through their hands, and to tell all they know about horses where pedigrees trace back to their stock. It will pay to go to a little trouble and even expense to inquire into the pedigree of the horse that is standing in your neighborhood. It will pay the farmer, too, to make a study of these heavy draft breeds as they appear at our fairs and live stock shows.

CLEAR OFF THE BARNACLES.

The following, from the American Artisan, to business men is worthy of the consideration of a good many manufacturers and merchants who are complaining of the stagnation of trade in their respective lines:

Whatever your business, whether mercantile or manufacturing, if you are not progressing, you are at a standstill or receding. This should not be in these times of competition and hustle. Either you are in the rut of old fogyism, in the wrong line or position, or you are indifferent to business success. Possibly, like an old ship, you have attracted barnacles by inactivity, or your energy has become stagnated like the inactive pool, or keener and more go-ahead rivals have depressed you, and, thus shorn of your old time powers, you have contracted the not-up-with-the-times fever and are going to the wall. Now, whatever is the matter, you should either stop business or overhaul the ship, for, as a writer aptly says, "Old ships lying at anchor may have the appearance of soundness and the outward evidence of strength, usefulness, and sea-going qualities, but when carefully examined for a sea voyage are often found to be covered with barnacles and to be affected with dry rot. When such a vessel, no matter what good it has done or what use it has been in the traffic and carrying trade, is condemned, it is at once replaced by a new or more modern one that is in perfect order and fully seaworthy. What is true of vessels is often true of men also, and especially of merchants in trade who have been anchored too long in old-time ways and methods of doing business, and, consequently, do not keep up with the progress and spirit of the age."

RENDERING LARD.

The N. Y. Herald says: A prominent Chicago packer gives the following directions for rendering lard so it will be nice and white: Grind the fat or chop it as you would sausage meat, where you have but a small quantity, using the chopping bowl and the potato masher. The object is to get the fat into such a condition that the tissue and fibrine will separate quickly from the clear fat. Now, by the mild heat and constant stirring, melt to the consistency of thin gruel, then scatter salt enough over the surface to carry down all the scraps. Salt does not melt in pure lard, and therefore will not give it a saline taste. Then allow it to settle, and dip the clear fat out into a vessel, using a strainer, or into another kettle, so as to remove all scraps from the bottom. After removal of scraps, cook for fifteen minutes, so as to roast any scraps still remaining in the fat, and your lard is ready to put away and will keep as long as wanted. To keep lard it is necessary to raise the heat to 180 degrees. It melts at a 110 or 120 degrees. Let our farmers and their wives try the above method and they will never go back to the old way of cooking lard again. In answer to an inquiry as to how to prevent lard from boiling over while cooking, put in a little salt. This is the best known remedy.

WHAT IS COURAGE?

From San Francisco Argonaut.

The one first, best, highest quality that we recognize in man is moral courage. Physical courage may be a matter of physical condition, and is common to animals. The bravest animal only fights when it is hungry or called upon to protect its young, or to defend itself, or in the mating season. There never was a man born of woman brave enough to fight a black cat in a dark room voluntarily, with no one to have knowledge of the encounter or to look on and applaud. Moral courage is the growth of principle; physical courage is the result of pride.

The best trait—or at least one of the best traits—of the human character is pride; it is the synonym of a thousand virtues. A proud man will go open-eyed to deliberate death; no other animal that lives will willingly encounter destruction. The dude is a hero on the battle-field because he is a dude. The man who is proud, well born and moves in good society, who is ambitious of the esteem of men, the love of women, the honors of life, will expose himself at the head of fighting squadrons, on decks where bursting shells are hurtling, and on the field of honor, 'mid conflagrations and storms to do a duty that will win applause.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE HANGED.

Joseph Krickland, in America says: When the rope first squeezes a man's neck it hurts the skin somewhat. My throat and neck were sore and swelled for a week after I was robbed. But soon as the pressure is on he knows no more about it. I just went to sleep and that was the end of it until I be- [redacted] I sat quiet and stupid till the neighbors came and put me in bed.

Services and kindness neglected make friendship suspected.

The only gems that are a drug in the market—gems of thought.

Kindred weaknesses induce friendship as often as kindred virtues.

He shall be immortal who liveth till he be stoned by one without fault.

Habits are soon assumed, but when we strive to strip them off, 'tis flayed alive.

We deceive and flatter no one by such delicate artifices as we do ourselves.

A man has generally the good or ill qualities which he attributes to mankind.

It is easy to look down upon others; to look down upon ourselves is the difficulty.

We are often more agreeable through our faults than through our good qualities.

A ghost with the lock step is one of the rarities of spiritualism, but that is what they say has been heard near the old prison at Alton, Ill.

Tuscumbia, Ala., was excited the other day over a negro who could drink whole pailfuls of cold water and eat glass with an evident relish.

A sea-gull mistook the shining bald head of Alfred Hollister, at Seabright, N. J., for a stone, the other day, and dropped a mussel on it, cutting his scalp severely.

A gold watch taken from a resident of Plainfield, N. J., over twenty years ago, was returned to him lately with his name and the date of the theft engraved on the inside case.

A fox that was being closely pursued down in Georgia by hounds and hunters threw itself in front of an express train and was so mutilated that not even the brush could be found.

A little boy living near Ontario, San Bernardino County, California, was badly burned and knocked senseless by a stroke of lightning the other day, while not a cloud was in the sky or the air disturbed by wind.

The farmer or gardener who has a variety of peas that suit him in growing well, in yielding bountiful crops of large, well-filled pods, and which is early enough for his market, will do well to sow a few rows expressly for seed, and to allow none to be picked from them.

In land newly cleared from hard wood, or land that has been dressed with wood ashes, a little phosphate will show good results. In old pasture land, or in land that has been long in cultivation, it pays to use it liberally, and care should be taken to procure a fertilizer that is rich in potash.

Magistrate's Office.

I take this method of informing my friends and the public that I have opened an office for the transaction of the duties of a Justice of the Peace in the Haines & Co's building (next door to the store), nearly opposite the First National Bank, and respectfully solicit patronage. I shall also continue the business of Fire Insurance upon very liberal terms, being Agent for the Royal of Liverpool, North America of Philadelphia and Aetna of Hartford, Conn.
