IN OUR NEXT issue, the Christmas of 1928 will be a thing of the past. So far it has been a fine time for preparation. The stores have been bright with Christmas goods and dressings. The Community tree is in the square where the Christmas Carols will be sung; the weather has smiled all during the week. We see everywhere people hurrying with their arms full of bundles, gifts perhaps. For Christmas is a time for giving. There is nothing that makes for real happiness as much as being able to make others happy. A generous hearted man does not suffer with cold as much as others for his heart is warm and it warms his whole body. Two Christmas stories will always be favorite ones in fiction. One tells of Scrooge a grasping miserly misanthrope, lonely and miserable, who thinks giving a terrible extravagance. How he has a dream which reveals to him the end of the path which he has taken. When he wakes up and finds himself really alive how eagerly he goes forth, giving everywhere and feeling that life is full and happy even for him. Another, by Kate Douglas Wiggins; A story of a little girl who asked of her wealthy parents, the privilege of inviting a poor family of children to her Christmas dinner. The parents, feeling that it would be her last on earth, consented, and the story tells of the joy it gave to the receivers but especially to the givers. And that is why Christmas makes us happy. It warms our hearts; and nature joins in the festivities adorning the holly with berries and making the evergreens brighter for this season. We wish to all our readers a bright and happy Christmas.
