WOMAN'S WISDOM IN THE HOUSEHOLD.

The N. Y. Tribune says: The danger which continually confronts nervous energetic women is that of undertaking more than they can accomplish. It is very difficult for an ambitious person to measure coolly his ability, and even more difficult to select that which is most necessary to be done when a number of matters are urgent. Yet it is just the ability to do these things on which success depends in any undertaking in life. The housekeeper who fritters away her strength on a dozen different objects is sure to be a failure. It is the old story of "Jack of all trades, but master of none." It is the cool-headed and steady-handed worker that is most successful everywhere, and in no place more so than in the family, where emergencies are continually arising, which, though petty, require calm wisdom to avoid becoming misfortunes. The dangerous fallacy that a woman needs less wisdom than a man, because her sphere is usually limited to home-life, has long ago been exploded. A weak, ignorant woman, however well-meaning, is more of a burden in a family and capable of more misfortune to others than in any other position. In the outside world, thrown on her own resources, she alone suffers from her want of wisdom, and even the greatest dullard will learn something from the inevitable rough knocks of those who have no compassion for her weakness, but a weak-minded wife is defended, at least for a time, by affection, and has almost unlimited power to render all members of her family miserable. Girls should be taught early that reason and wisdom are expected from them as much as from their brothers. They must be taught to be as dispassionate in their judgment as possible and do their every-day duties systematically, day after day, without hurry or confusion. Hurried, nervous work is seldom satisfactory work, and work that is ill done had better be left undone. The old story of the hare and the tortoise shows that our ancestors recognized the superiority of slow, persistent work over spasmodic efforts. The slow tortoise won the race while the rapid hare slept. The great value of a higher education for women is in the increased power of reasoning which the woman will gain. It matters little how amiable and lovable a mother is, if she has not judgment enough to prevent [redacted] her baby with patent [redacted] sleeping draughts. [redacted] her motherhood is [redacted] child is liable to [redacted] the public, weak in [redacted] in intellect. It is an un[redacted] fact that women who are successful home in managing the housework of their families are also successful in making their way in the world, when called upon to depend upon themselves and that the ne'er-do-wells, the crowd of unhappy women who earn their bread with hardship and toil and seem incapable of directed individual effort, are equally incapable as good wives and mothers.

TRUE MANHOOD.

"There is more manhood to the square inch in the young man who swings the scythe in the meadow than in the one who dawdles a cane on the boulevard," savagely remarked a wise speaker at a recent gathering. His aphorism contains more than enough salt to keep it sweet. There is no great objection to the dude considered simply as such. Often he is not positively vicious. He is too busy considering the cut of his waistcoat and the width of his trouser-legs and the shape of his finger nails and the polish of his shoes, to have time or brain to spare for real upright or downright villainy. In one aspect he is a very harmless individual and, as in the case of the celebrated Mr. Toots, what he says and does is of "no consequence." Think of Ben Franklin accompanied by a great dog (in dude vernacular a "purp"), sticking his elbows out at right angles to his person and swaggering down Washington street or Broadway! The very incongruity of associating such manners with men of serious and earnest purpose shows how diametrically opposed to real earnestness are such characteristics, in fact, how little manhood there is about them. As a disease, dudism, while it is held up to constant ridicule, may not be alarming; as a symptom of prevailing and increasing effeminacy and lack of manly character it may be no trifle. What young Americans need to cultivate is "more manhood to the square inch."

The season for putting away furs is near at hand, and as they should always be packed away clean, a description of the process of cleaning such garments in Russia, the country of furs, is interesting. A foreign scientific journal tells that some rye flour is put into a pot and heated upon a stove with constant stirring, as long as the hand can bear the heat. The flour is then spread over the fur and rubbed into it. After this the fur is brushed with a very clean brush, or, better, is gently beaten till all the flour is removed. The fur thus resumes its natural lustre and appears as if new.

A COLOSSAL FLOWER.

From Pittsburgh Bulletin.

In the farthest southeastern island of the Phillippine group, Mindiano, upon one of its mountains, Parag, in the neighborhood of the highest peak in the island, the volcano Apo, a party of botanical and ethnographical explorers found recently, at the height of 2,500 feet above the sea level, a colossal flower. The discoverer, Dr. Alexander Schadenberg, could scarcely believe his eyes when he saw amidst the low-growing bushes the immense buds of this flower, like gigantic brown cabbage heads. But he was still more astonished when he found a specimen in full bloom, a five-petaled flower, nearly a yard in diameter—as large as a carriage-wheel, in fact. This enormous blossom was borne on a sort of vine creeping on the ground. It was known by the native who accom- [redacted] possible to transport the fresh flower, so the travelers photographed it, and dried a number of its leaves by the heat of a fire. Dr. Schadenberg then sent the photographs and dried specimens to the Royal Botanical gardens at Breslau, where the learned director immediately recognized it as a species of Rafflesia, a plant formerly discovered in Sumatra and named after the English Governor, Sir Stamford Raffles. The new flower was accordingly named Rafflesia Schadenbergia. The five petals of this immense flower are oval and creamy-white, and grow around a center filled with countless long violet-hued stamens, thicker and longer in the female, or fertile flowers, than in the infertile. The fertilization is accomplished by insects, whose larvæ breed in the decaying flesh of its thick petals. The fertile flower develops a soft, berry-like fruit, in which countless seeds are imbedded. The flower exhales a poisonous gas, even when first opened.

THE HOUSEKEEPER.

A Puree of Asparagus.—Take a bunch of good, tender asparagus, break off the tough ends on the bottom, and throw the tops into clear, cold water, with a small handful of spinach, a few sprigs of parsley and a [redacted] puree be returned to the stove after it is strained, brought to a boiling point and boiled once; then serve without delay. Serve with it a plate of browned croutons, or squares of bread fried brown.

The farmers of Minnesota are threatened with another grasshopper pestilence. The scourge has appeared in Otter Tail County, and the state authorities have set about wiping it out, as it was successfully done last year. The first thing done will be to plow the land wherever the eggs are. It is estimated that there are about 5000 acres on the Perham prairie which will require this treatment. Last year nothing was done until the hoppers hatched, when a reward of $1 a bushel was paid for catching them. Over 17,000 bushels were caught. Parasites are very numerous wherever eggs are to be found, and it is to be hoped they will fulfill their mission; which entomologists say is to kill the hoppers and destroy their eggs. The Cletherall prairie, which is about thirty miles this side of Perham, which was affected last year will also be plowed.

There is a little yellow bee in Honduras that is very much like the little yellow flies found about corn silks. The bees are without stings, and the most industrious little insects imaginable. They build in hollow trees and wherever they can find a lodgment, and they gather a double handful of honey of delicious flavor in these nests of rough comb. So plentiful are they that a person can take a hatchet and cut into the knot-hole in the trees and soon collect all the honey he wants to without the danger of being stung by the bees.

It is better to plow in the manure for potatoes deeper than the seed is to be put, and to scatter phosphate in the drill before dropping the seed. There is not any danger of the phosphate injuring the seed, even when it is used at the rate of a ton to the acre. Few farmers use one-half and not many more than one-quarter that amount. The profitable amount to use, will depend very much upon the character of the soil, and something also depends upon the composition of the fertilizer.

Flies work from sun to sun; but the mosquito's work is never done.

WHY IS IT

The Farmers' Fertilizer Company

OF WESTMINSTER, MD.,

IS ALWAYS ON TOP?

Because only absolutely pure material is used, and the Company, besides, guarantees the same class of goods to stockholders and the trade alike.

The Company carries the largest and best assorted stock of

BONE AND CHEMICALS

In the State, outside the city of Baltimore.

Its goods are all in good drillable condition and are guaranteed to give satisfaction. The street recently opened past the Hotel Albion will relieve any objection to the railroad heretofore existing. As the company proposes to stand by its friends and customers in the future as in the past, it asks a call from the agricultural trade before purchasing elsewhere, as it means business and will not be undersold.

Special Attention will be paid to the Compounding of Private Formulas.
