Something he couldn't command;
The kindly words of compassion,
The touch of a gentle hand;

And he said, as his brow grew darker
And he rang for the hireling nurse:
"Well, marriage may be a failure,
But this is a blamed sight worse."

EGGS AND COOKERY.

It has been asserted, and with truth, that when eggs can be had for a penny each they are cheaper than any other form of diet. Every element necessary to the support of man is contained within an egg-shell, in the best proportions and in the most palatable form. Is is impossible to exaggerate the value of eggs as an article of food whether from their universal use or the convenient form in which the food is preserved and presented, and the nutriment which they contain, yet the use of eggs in many families is much more restricted than it ought to be, and simply because any other mode of cooking than that of plain boiling is not understood. Frying, indeed, is often resorted to, but unless done with unusual care the white is rendered hard, and a flavor of burnt fat is imparted, which makes the egg unpalatable and indigestible. Pottery dishes, made of fire-proof clay, are used instead of the iron pan, and thus even on an ordinary stove the cooking can be done so slowly that the delicate characteristics of the egg are in no way impaired. Most persons can not eat eggs plainly boiled unless they are new laid, but when dressed without the shell good cooking eggs answer perfectly in many ways.

The masters of French ocokery affirm that it is easy to dress eggs in five hundred different ways, each nuethod not only economical, but salutary in the highest degree. For the scholar eggs are a most beneficial food. They contain phosphorus, which is brain food, and sulphur, which performs a variety of functions in the economy. For children eggs are the best of nutriment, for in a compact form they contain everything which is necessary for the growth of the youthful frame. It cannot, therefore, be too strongly impressed on housekeepers that a liberal use of eggs is true economy, and that different modes of cooking eggs will greatly enhance both their attractiveness and dietetic value.

WASTE IN THE KITCHEN.

The Restaurateur says: Waste in the kitchen is very often great from apparently trivial sources. In cooking meats, the water is thrown out without removing the grease, or the grease from the dripping pan is thrown away. Scraps of meat are thrown away. Cold potatoes are left to sour and spoil. Dry fruits are not looked after and become wormy. Vinegar and sauce are left standing in tin. Apples are left to decay for want of "sorting over." The tea canister is left open. Victuals are left exposed to be eaten by mice.

Bones of meat and the carcass of turkey are thrown away, when they could be used in making good soups. Sugar, coffee, tea and rice are carelessly spilled in the handling. Soap is left to dissolve and waste in the water. Dish towels are used for dish cloths. Napkins are used for dish towels. Towels are used for holders. Brooms and mops are not hung up. More coal is burned than necessary by not arranging dampers when not using the fire.

Lights are left burning when not used. Tin dishes are not properly cleansed and dried. Good new brooms are used in scrubbing the kitchen floors. Silver spoons are used in scraping kettles. Cream is left to mould and spoil. Mustard is left to spoil in the cruse, etc. Pickles become spoiled by the leaking out or evaporation of the vinegar. Pork spoils for want of salt, and beef because the brine wants scalding. Tea and coffee pots are injured on the stove.

The Revue Scientifique says: Mr. J. Korosi, director of the Hungarian Bureau of Statistics, recently read a memoir before the Hungarian Academy of Sciences upon the "Influence of the Age of Parents upon the Vitality of Children," and in which, taking 24,000 cases as a basis, he reaches the following conclusions:

Children whose father is less than 20 years of age have a week constitution. The issue of fathers of between 25 and 40 years are the strongest, while the descendants of fathers of over 40 years are weak. The healthiest children are those whose mother has not yet reached 35 years. Those born of mothers of between 35 and 40 years of age are 8 per cent. weaker, and those of mothers of over 40 are 10 per cent. weaker. The children of aged fathers and younger mothers have, as a general thing, a strong constitution; but if the parents are of the same age, the children are less robust.

CURIOUS CURRANT CULTURE.

A novel system with currants is practised and praised by a Connecticut correspondent of "The Country Gentleman." He recommends it, not only on account of much increased yield of improved fruit, but, in particular, because of shortened time ("not over half") required for gathering the crop, and the comfort of the pickers:

"I allow each year from four to six new shoots to grow from the ground surface on each bush, keeping the soil well fertilized and cultivated clean, destroying the currant worm when it appears by a careful dusting especially of the under surfaces of the leaves with powder of white hellebore applied while the dew is on. When the currants are sufficiently ripened (and for perfection in making jelly they should hardly all be red or ripe) the pickers cut off with a corn-knife or grass-hook every branch which is in bearing, lay the branches carefully in the garden barrow, wheel them off and dump in the shade, where they afterward sit and strip the branches at leisure. As all the currants under this treatment grow on new wood the fruit is finer and more abundant, and the dread of picking while 'squat like a toad' in the boiling heat of July has vanished. After six years of this apparently severe treatment my old bushes are more vigorous than when I commenced, and in better condition than the new planting which I then made in the expectation of killing out the old ones and relying on the new."

WHAT TO DO IN CASE OF FIRE.

The following hints may be useful to persons suddenly alarmed by an outbreak of fire. If fire occurs in a room, be very careful with the available water, especially so where the quantity is limited. An ordinary jug of water may be sufficient to extinguished a body of flame if judiciously used. Close doors and grate, because by stopping draught you deprive fire of its attacking propensity. If in a bedroom, carefully but well saturate a blanket with the water available, and on your hands and knees—thus escaping from the thickest of the smoke, which ascends—approach the seat of the fire, and endeavor either to stifle or beat out the flames. A table cover in a dining room will do instead of a blanket. If unsuccessful, leave the room, being sure to close the door, and alarm the household by springing a rattle, which every house should possess; and when all are together, make for the easiest place of access to the street. A silk handkerchief wetted will, when tied firmly round the mouth, acts as a good respirator; and a blanket wetted and wrapped round the body will enable a person to pass through a sheet of flame in comparative safety.

You are writing an advertisement! Make it terse—space costs money and readers are impatient. Make it attractive in style—you must "catch your hare" before you can skin him. Make it original in expression—you cannot command attention without separating yourself from the crowd. Make it pointed in object—your wished-for patrons will never search for what you fail to show them. Make it unique in appearance—your purpose is half defeated if your advertisement does not impress people into its entirety.

A process has been discovered in England for drying milk so as to convert it from a fluid to a solid. It is said that "the milk, when in a solidified state, is a delicious, easily digestible and cheap food, occupies a minimum of space, is not in the least degree liable to deterioration, and will therefore be found of advantage for use on board ships of war, emigrant and other ships, and for other purposes. The dry milk is a readily digestible, nourishing food for children, and even for babies."

Enterprise, even though it be of a funereal kind, is always appreciated in the West. And so there is not a little subdued rejoicing among the live citizens of Chardon, Neb., because that town can now support a hearse. The first funeral at which the vehicle was used occurred a few days ago.

The boys take the girls out, and the girls take the boys in. Such is life.

Because only absolutely pure material is used, and the Company, besides, guarantees the same class of goods to stockholders and the trade alike.

The Company carries the largest and best assorted stock of

BONE and CHEMICALS

In the State, outside the city of Baltimore.

Its goods are all in good drillable condition and are guaranteed to give satisfaction. The street recently opened past the Hotel Albion will relieve any objection to the railroad heretofore existing. As the company proposes to stand by its friends and customers in the future as in the past, it asks a call from the agricultural trade before purchasing elsewhere, as it means business and will not be undersold.
