EVER A SONG SOMEWHERE.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

There is ever a song somewhere, my dear:
There is ever a something sings away:
There's the song of the lark when the sky is clear,
And the song of the thrush when the sky is gray.

The sunshine showers across the grain,
And the bluebird thrills in the orchard tree;
And in and out, when the eaves drip rain,
The swallows are twittering ceaselessly.

There is ever a song somewhere, my dear,
In the midnight black, or the midday blue,
The robin pipes when the sun is here,
And the cricket chirrups the whole night through.

The buds may blow, and the fruits may grow,
And the autumn leaves drop crisp and sere;
But whether the sun, or the rain, or the snow,
There's ever a song somewhere, my dear.

TRANSPLANTING AND SUMMER SEEDING.

Waldo F. Brown, in New York Tribune says: "I have seen men who had set out plants for twenty years, who seemed never to have studied their requirements, and would lose a large part of the whole number. Nearly all plants grown in hotbeds are more or less spindled, for space is so valuable that they are always crowded, and this induces a long, slender stem. In raising sweet potatoes, for instance, often 100 plants are grown on a space that the hand would cover, and, thus crowded, the stems must be very tender. I have seen men set these tender plants under a June sun that would reach 110 degrees or more, and leave two or three inches of the stems exposed. They would carry water and pour a half-pint around each plant, and then wonder that so many of the plants died, when the real wonder was that any lived. I lay it down as the first rule in transplanting that all tender stems must have protection by setting deep enough so that the earth will come up to the leaf-stem. Try it, if you doubt; take a dozen tomato and sweet-potato plants with long, naked stems; set half of them with the roots in the soil and the stems exposed; set the other half down so the stem is all under ground and only the leaves out, and notice the difference in their growth. Watering newly-set plants is, I know, in many cases an injury, and I have not watered a plant for years. On a clayey soil the water poured around the roots makes a kind of mortar, which the sun soon bakes into a hard clod. Puddling I have found to be much better, and not a tenth part the labor. I always use half fresh cow-manure and half clayey soil to make the puddle. Put a gallon or so of water in a hole in the ground, stir in the cow-manure, and then sift the soil through your fingers with the left hand, while you stir vigorously with a small paddle in the right hand, just as you would in making mush. Make it thick enough so that when the roots are dipped in it will coat them thoroughly. The dung will prevent drying rapidly and will stimulate the plant a little. I have set plants on bright sunny days, with the mercury at 90 degrees in the shade, and they would not even wilt, and ninety-nine out of every hundred would grow.

"The next important thing is to firm the earth about the roots. It should be so well pressed down that if you take hold of a leaf of the growing plant and pull, a piece of the leaf will break out before the roots will yield. After pressing the earth solid at the root, draw the fresh earth up to the sides of the plant with both hands, so as to hide the stem to the first leaf. It is of great importance that the plants be set out while fresh. Never buy plants that have stood at a grocery for a day or so. I always raise my own plants, so that I can take advantage of favorable weather to transplant and be sure of fresh plants. If we are setting half an acre or an acre of sweet potatoes, we prepare the hills or ridges, and have all hands ready to begin setting plants by the middle of the afternoon. One man remains at the bed and pulls and puddles plants; a boy for each two setters drops the plants just ahead of the men, and they are transferrrd without wilting, and are ready to grow at once. In all summer planting, when the mercury is likely to range above 90 during the middle of the day, it is important that the seed be dropped in fresh, moist earth, and that it be pressed into close contact with it. Do not open the furrows in the morning that you do not expect to plant until night, but be ready to follow the plough, and put the seed in the fresh earth, and step on it to press it into the soil. Corn, cucumbers, beans and such large seeds will come up in four or five days, when planted in this way, when the soil is so dry and the weather so hot that if planted in loose earth they would not come up at all. Small seed sown continuously in the drill, such as carrot, radish, etc., can be pressed into the soil by wheeling the hand-plough over with a weight on it to give the needed pressure; or if you have no hand-plough the wheelbarrow will answer. It is better to press the seed into the soil, and then cover with loose earth, than to cover it and then press, for in the latter case the land may be too compact for the seeds to come through."

'The Lord giveth a cheerful lover,' murmured Miss Wilker. 'No, that isn't right,' she added, 'but yet it has a pleasing sound.'

THE WEED CURE FOR NERVOUS WOMEN.

From Sister Gracious, in AMERICAN GARDEN.

Here is a cure for nervous disease and for catching cold easily that I will give gratis. If it was given by a great doctor, charging a big fee, it would be taken oftener than it is now, when the medicine lies in your back yard in an onion patch perhaps, or better, in a bed of geraniums or petunias. Put a waterproof on the ground, sit down on it, and pull out the weeds. Work at this an hour or two a day regularly. Of course, your back will have "a crick" and you will sigh for a cast-iron one with brass hinges. But persevere; your back will strengthen, your nerves will forget themselves, and you will sleep all night like a baby. There won't be a crazy quilt to show your friends with 5,000 pieces; but take them out into the garden and show off the flowers. Another delight in reserve is to make "a study in color," different arrangements of the plants. This year "my success" is a large bed of poppies of every shade. In the centre is a clump of hollyhocks of a most vivid red and cream color. Not far off is another clump of hollyhocks of a dark red, almost black. Your crazy quilt of 5,000 pieces may be "a marvel," but will it be as good for the eyesight as a study of color in the open air, with the pure air and fresh breeze as accompaniments?

SPONGE THE HORSES' SHOULDERS.

At this season of the year, when farmers' horses are put at hard work after a winter of comparative rest, their shoulders are very liable to gall. I went some distance to a farmer's to learn why his horses were never afflicted in that way, although he is noted for working his team severely. Proceeding to the stable, I had no occasion to ask the question. The team had just returned from the field, and the farmer was engaged at one and his man at the other sponging their shoulders with cold water. This is done every time they come into the stable after hard work, and freedom from shoulder abrasions, and consequent comfort of the animals, is the natural result. When farm horses come in from labor, in the spring especially, it may be observed that they try to rub first one shoulder and then the other against the stall. The wear at this point causes the animals to feel exceedingly uncomfortable, and humane men will not withhold from them the cooling, soothing influence of a little cold water.

A farmer not many miles from Maine was the owner of a very slow and balky horse which was recently overtaken by death. Happening in the store of one of our business men, the other day, the merchant kindly extended his sympathy for the loss of the horse in the following introductory question: "Well, it's too bad! He must have died rather suddenly, didn't he?" "Sudden!" replied the old man, "I guess he did, mighty sudden for him. It's the most sudden thing I ever knowed him to do in all his life." The further remarks of sympathy from the merchant were drowned by the roars of laughter from the bystanders.

The average Russian is said to drink from ten to twelve glasses of tea a day. Every Russian merchant has a tea-urn in his counting-room, and the lawyer or mechanic goes out to his cafe for tea as often as the German for beer or the Frenchman for wine. At the cafes at all hours of the day and night one can see great crowds of people sipping tea.

Miss A. A. Crisp, a famous professional nurse, who had received the decoration of the royal red cross from Queen Victoria, recently married one of the physicians of the New Zealand hospital, of which she had charge. Her wedding gown was the costume of her profession, and the bridemaids were nineteen nurses, all in uniform.

Be of good cheer about death, and know this of a truth that no evil can happen to a good man, either in life or after death.

A learned man of Genoa claims to have discovered that Columbus was morose and silent, while Vespucci was Americus.

A woman, of Huntingdon, Conn., who is only thirty-five years of age has had nine husbands.

With the four new States added to the thirty-eight, Uncle Sam will be fair, fat and forty-two.

In the constitution of childhood there is no more popular clause than Santa Claus.

The Texan women are the largest individual sheep and stock owners in the world.

A big head is no more evidence of brains than a paper collar is of a shirt.

What is that which flies high, lies low, has no feet, yet wears shoes? Dust.

Give not an hair-breadth of truth away, for it is not yours, but God's.

When a little man is hopelessly in love it greatly increases his sighs.

Because only absolutely pure material is used, and the Company, besides, guarantees the same class of goods to stockholders and the trade alike.

In the State, outside the city of Baltimore.

Its goods are all in good drillable condition and are guaranteed to give satisfaction. The street recently opened past the Hotel Albion will relieve any objection to the railroad heretofore existing.
